'We Promised and We Are Back'—MacArthur

Big Crowds in the Rain and in Pittsburgh

President Franklin D. Roosevelt visits New York City (right) and is welcomed by a shower of rain. Governor Thomas E. Dewey is welcomed (left) at Pittsburgh amid showers of paper. Thousands turned out to look at and later to vote for their favorite for the office of President of the United States. End of campaign found Roosevelt the "betting" favorite despite claims of Dewey's supporters that he would spend the next four years in Washington instead of Albany.

SURPLUS HOLDINGS:
Disposal Problem

With U. S. holdings of industrial facilities amounting to about 16½ billion dollars — or 20 per cent of the total private and public facilities in the country — the government already has taken steps for disposal of its properties in the postwar period.

Difficulties are expected to rise in the sale of the bulk of such facilities as aircraft, shipbuilding, and munitions, however, since these industries have been greatly expanded to meet wartime requirements, which will drop sharply with peace.

Of the government's 3 billion dollar investment in war housing, permanent buildings must be sold when no longer needed, and fabricated structures must be dismantled, with materials made part of general surplus property.

ROAD BUILDING:
Huge Program

With urgent highway construction in the early postwar years exceeding 10 billion dollars, the vast quantities of labor, material and equipment needed for carrying on the program should act as a stabilizing factor in the future economy, the American Road Builders association's engineer-director, Charles M. Upham, declared.

By next October, the states will have drawn up plans for one billion dollars of highway construction deferred because of the war, and city, county and local road projects will amount to another billion.

"Postwar plans of business and industry call for greater production and distribution of goods," Upham said. "That means roads and streets must carry greater burdens. Obviously, inadequate roads and streets will hold back business and industrial activity."

Finds Home

Infant son of a Yank aviator killed in action, and of a mother who died in giving him birth, tiny Kenneth Maloney was taken by maternal grandparents, who were later killed by robot bomb in London.

Army then flew six-month-old Kenneth to paternal grandmother in Grand Rapids, Mich., who is shown putting him to bed while 22-month-old cousin Terry looks on.

BIG DEAL:

Wall street gave way to LaSalle street when the Commonwealth Edison company refinanced 180 million dollars' worth of bonds in the biggest private financing operation in the nation's history.

Featuring the deal was the purchase for resale of 155 million dollars of new bonds by the big Chicago investment house of Halsey, Stuart & company, which with Otis & company of Cleveland, Ohio, has been bucking the great Wall street banking firms. In completing the transaction, Halsey, Stuart's president handed Commonwealth's representative a check for 161 million dollars, also covering interest due on the bonds and the premium paid for getting the business.

In addition to the 155 million dollars refunded with new bonds, Commonwealth retired an additional 23 million dollars of securities with its own cash.

RAIL RATES:
Wants Boosts

Supporting their petition for continuance of the 10 per cent increase in passenger fares, and immediate application of the 4½ per cent freight rate boost, railroad representatives declared the carriers faced decreasing revenues when war traffic subsides.

Previously, federal agricultural agencies opposed the freight rate increases on the strength of continued high farm traffic for at least two years after the war.

Unless rail revenue is bolstered by rate increases, said Vice President Walter S. Franklin of the Pennsylvania railroad, the financial structure of the carriers will be seriously impaired in the postwar years, with the result being ". . . a very much less effective operation, and a serious impairment of the railroads' ability . . . to be ready to do their part in meeting the employment problem after the war."

BRITISH LAND

Steering clear of any political battle between conservatives and liberals that might upset the present coalition government, Britain's house of commons passed a bill for postwar reconstruction.

Passage was aimed at avoiding an all-out battle between the two political elements over the bill's provision that landlords only be paid prewar prices for land condemned for reconstruction use, with increases up to 30 per cent for occupying owners.

Household Hints

A small bowl of vinegar placed in a room will absorb tobacco smoke.

After baking always leave the oven door open to permit the moisture to escape and thus prevent the oven from rusting.

Line the container in which you remove ashes from the furnace with wet paper to keep down the dust.

In wringing out pillow cases in the laundry, always insert the closed end into the roller first. This will prevent possible bursting of the seams.

So you are having trouble starting wooden screws with a screwdriver? Well, put them through a piece of cardboard first and then hold the cardboard while the screw is starting into the wood.

Keep your windows bright and clear on the inside during the winter by merely wiping them off with a soft paper napkin each week. This will remove the moist dirt and polish them at the same time.

Some of the new play clothes, ski suits and other outer garments are not waterproof, and they should be for small children. If you have a garment you would like waterproofed, place it in soapsuds from warm soft water and a good laundry soap. Squeeze out the excess soapsuds and dip the garment in a solution of two ounces of alum to a gallon of water. Stir the garment, squeeze out the excess water, and hang up to dry, without rinsing. It will be waterproof.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Progress of our Pacific war program and the growing possibilities of reasonably quick recapture of some rubber areas in the Far East have made men who know the rubber industry best emphasize the need for sound policies to deal with the economic and political problems which the gradual return of natural rubber will raise.
Mexico has its own way of conserving tires. Mexican motorists are required, by government regulation, to keep their cars idle one day a week. Car owners select their "motorless day" and then must display on their windshields a sticker of a color designated for that day of the week.

WHAT pitcher in baseball has had the greatest combination of speed and a curve ball?

This argument developed with great speed recently in a gathering of baseball notables. Your correspondent put this matter up to a long list of managers and old players, who should know what they are talking about. It was generally agreed that Walter Johnson had the king of all fast balls. That's about all old Barney needed in his prime.

Grantland Rice

It was also conceded that among the smarter pitchers you had to rate Alexander, Mathewson and Hubbell. Dizzy Dean was also given a high rating as an all-arounder with speed, a good curve and a change of pace when necessary.

I think it was Casey Stengel who added up all the qualifications needed and his score card put Carl Hubbell on top. After all Hubbell won 24 consecutive games.

Cy Young drew the nomination for durability, including arm and head through more than 500 victories, 510 to be exact.

The list of great pitchers is extremely long, dating back to 1900. There was Ed Walsh—Addie Joss—Smokey Joe Wood—Jack Chesbro—(both Walsh and Chesbro won 40 or more games in one season). There was Herb Pennock and Lefty Grove and Ed Plank. There was Bob Feller, one of the best. And Dazzy Vance, voted the most effective of all pitchers excluding Johnson. Alexander, Matty and Hubbell finished under a blanket.

Connie Mack's Decision

In the midst of all this confusion we finally decided to put the problem up to Connie Mack, who has only been around in baseball a brief matter of 60 odd years.

"Just what is the argument about?" Mr. Mack asked.

"The argument is this—what one pitcher had the greatest combination of speed and curves?"

"My goodness," Connie said. "I think that's quite simple. His name is Rube Waddell. Now Johnson had the best speed. But Walter only had a fair curve ball. His speed was enough. Matty and Alexander depended largely on control and smartness. Grove and Feller both had fine speed. But you are talking about both factors — speed and curves.

"Now I'll tell you about the Rube. He had terrific speed. He was a big, loose, lanky fellow who was almost as fast as Johnson. I know outside of Johnson I never saw any one faster.

"But his curve was even better than his speed. The Rube had the fastest and the deepest curve I've ever seen. You know what great hitters Lajoie and Cobb were? What wonderful batting eyes they both had? Well, I've seen the Rube pour one over that started and looked waist high. I've seen both Larry and Ty swing at this pitch as the catcher dug it out of the dirt. I've seen great hitters miss Rube's curve ball more than a foot. I honestly believe that the Rube's curve often broke at least two feet. But what is more important it was a fast curve, one that came up in a hurry and then ducked like lightning.

"Now, I'm not saying Waddell was the greatest pitcher of all time. I'm saying that he could have been and should have been for the simple reason that he had more natural stuff than any other pitcher I've ever seen. I mean by this that he had the best combination of what you are talking about—speed and curve. But the Rube had too many sidelines. Now and then he'd take a few days off and go fishing, without saying anything to me about it."

I recalled one of the last times I ever saw Waddell pitch. He had Cleveland beaten 1 to 0 in the last of the ninth when an error, a Texas leaguer and a pass filled the bases with none out. The next three coming up were Lajoie, Bradley and Flick, three of the best.

The Rube had brought out two friends who were sitting in a box. He left the pitcher's mound and walked over to the box remarking, "Ladies, I'll be with you in about two minutes."

He then struck out Lajoie, Bradley and Flick on nine pitched balls. I'll have to string with Mr. Mack on this opinion, which I like to do on any opinion Mr. Mack has to offer.

Georgia's Contribution

The Red Clay Hills of Georgia have given sport more than their share of stars. It was in this state that a kid by the name of Tyrus Raymond Cobb came to fame around 40 years ago, via Augusta and Detroit.

It was from Atlanta another kid named Bobby Jones moved into the national spotlight of golf back in 1916 at Merion when said youth was only 14 years old. Such champions give any state a running start.

"Then is he sick?"

"Ugh! Him no sick!"

"Then, why do you carry him on your back, as you would a small child?"

"Ugh!" grunted the squaw. "Him in second childhood!"

Slick Chicks Find Key to Smoothness

THE time for coaching on this business of etiquette is beforehand, like right now, according to Holly Miller, whose column "Some Coaching Please" in Capper's Farmer is a popular feature among 'teen age boys and girls and their parents as well.

"Observe any slick chick or Beau Brummel and you'll notice the smoothness isn't done with mirrors," she writes. "It's a safe bet they've been beating the etiquette books."

Take that oft-puzzling question of "Who Goes First?" when youngsters step out for a snack.

"When entering a restaurant, the girl follows the waiter to the table and is seated by him," advises this Capper's Farmer authority. "If all the waiters are hiding—that gives Joe a chance to lead the procession and to seat the damsel.

"Of course a smooth pigeon never tears into a room a good 20 feet in front of her striving-hard-to-keep-up escort. He pulls the chair and she sits down from the left on the front half. Then she ups-a-daisies slightly and good old Joe slides the chair under her."

Packing nearly 7,000 Christmas boxes for Great Northern employes in military service required approximately 175,000 items, for each parcel contained 25 different gifts—including a sprig of Christmas tree.

We're Thinking of Them, Too!

A few weeks ago a letter from India came to Great Northern's general offices. It was written by a technical sergeant in the Army Air Forces, on leave from a locomotive fireman's job in Montana.

The sergeant's pen fairly spouted enthusiasm, for on that day he had unwrapped a much-traveled package—his 1943 Christmas box from Great Northern. The parcel had trailed the sergeant about the world 10 months.

"The box sure is okay," he wrote. "I suppose all the other Great Northerners in the service got boxes like mine. It sure must have been an awful lot of work."

Well, the sergeant was right on one point, but in Air Force vernacular, "off the beam" on the other.

Last year almost 4,300 Christmas boxes were sent by Great Northern to its men and women employes in the Armed Forces.

Nearly 7,000 names—equivalent to one-third of the company's average annual peacetime employment—are on the 1944 package list, and some 3,400 of the boxes now are on the way overseas.

But, it hasn't been "an awful lot of work" for us. Hardly, when we consider the sacrifices and contributions those men and women are making!

A lot of Great Northern's mail these days comes from ships, foxholes, camps, airfields and hospitals. Employes on leave from thousands of jobs along 8,200 miles of railway take time off from fighting a war to say they are thinking of us.

We're thinking of them, too!

No Open Season For Muskrats This Winter

There will be no open season on Muskrats in Minnesota this winter, according to an announcement made by Chester Wilson, commissioner of conservation.

"Information furnished Verne E. Joslin, director of game and fish, by the game reseach men, as a result of their annual fall muskrat census, shows that there has been a decided reduction in the rat population as compared with last year", states Mr. Wilson. "With this marked reduction in the population which possibly has resulted from a number of factors such as extreme high waters during the early breeding season, excessive drought for the past two months, and the possibility that the muskrat populations are cyclic in nature, it has been decided advisable this year to keep the season closed to trapping."

This decision is concurred in by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service as it relates to the Mississippi River Wildlife Refuge, where the rat population is also greatly reduced. Those in charge of that unit had previously recommended to the district office that there be no open season on rats in the Mississippi Refuge.

There may be a few locations where muskrats are actually doing damage to property or a few shallow sloughs where the muskrats are likely to freeze out during the winter but in instances local game wardens are authorized to issue permits for the trapping of these rats.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON

Head and Hands

When I was nine years old, my father sent me horseback on an errand to a nearby farm. Our neighbor, an elderly man, was hoeing in his vegetable garden when I dismounted, but he came to the barn gate to talk with me. While we stood there, a cattle buyer passed in a single-seated vehicle pulled by a spirited horse. The salutation between my two elders was cool and stilted.

Childlike, I inquired with frankness: "Don't you like Mr. Moore?" Then my neighbor began "educating" me. He informed me in a low tone, implying a great deal, that Moore was a rich man. Without saying it in so many words, he hinted that the trader was not to be trusted and that his wealth proved the point. My next question was from the heart: "How much money can a man have and be honest?"

All Figured Out.

"In these parts," he said thoughtfully, "a man can't get together more than $10,000 in a lifetime unless he carries on some right shady business." He did not say how he arrived at the figure; probably he was speaking from a long life's wealth of observations. I knew he was sincere, but many years had passed before I knew how wrong he was. His words were a figment of class prejudice.

In the United States, class prejudice is nearly harmless by contrast to the misery it deals people in other lands. Just the same, we have some of it, and it's a curse. Moreover, it is not limited to coolness between grangers and stock buyers. Recently a high executive of the U. S. Treasury Department let himself say this: "No man who works with his hands can be worth $5,000 a year."

Class Prejudice

He may be sincere as my venerable neighbor of years ago, but he does not know everything about men who work with their hands. They think too. In fact the most effective thinking to achieve military victory in the present war has been done at the workbench and between the plow handles. Judgment, skill, and technical knowledge used elsewhere would be bottlenecked indeed if workers used only their hands.

An equipment manufacturer in Cleveland, Ohio, has used wage incentives for 20 years. In his plant, workers get more pay when they do faster and better work. They like the idea and so does the employer. When the men turned their minds to increasing volume so they could draw better wages, the price of a welding machine that used to exceed $500 slid down below $200. Even the buyer was benefited.

Thoroughly American

Under pressure of war demands and hurry-up orders, this pay-for-thinking plan really shined. Output increased. Users bought new equipment 60% cheaper. The firm lowered its percentage of profit and still upheld earnings. Average wage of workers climbed above $100 a week. The government didn't like it, however, and assessed the company an extra 1.6 million dollars a year.

This firm is using our only safe pattern for post-war prosperity—wages up and prices down. Both depend on production efficiency. This plan means purchasing power at home and ability to compete in foreign markets. Labor and industry both favor this principle. Inefficiency, hatched by class prejudice, will bar us from foreign markets after the war, make goods costly at home, jobs scarce, and pay low.

Our War With Japan

The Sixth War Loan marks a new turn in the war both on the fighting and the home fronts. It points our tremendous war effort definitely in the direction of the Pacific. During the first five war loans Americans were primarily thinking in terms of beating Hitler.

Now our government asks us for a loan of 14 billion more dollars of which five billion dollars must come from individuals. Why? Haven't we nearly finished off our so-called Number 1 Enemy? Can Japan hold up our powerful war machine very long? Your son, brother and friend in his Pacific foxhole wouldn't raise such questions because they are up against realities, not day dreams. They kill or are killed, They pray every waking moment for a sky-darkening cover of friendly planes. They thank America for giving them the finest medical care in the world when their rendezvous with destiny in a Pacific jungle is at hand. They know the war with the Japs is just beginning.

Here are some other Pacific realities so that you will understand why there must be a Sixth War Loan and why it is absolutely necessary that it be a success:

The Allied Military Command has estimated that it will take years, not months, to lick Japan.

Japan's present army numbers about 4,000,000 with 2,000,000 more men available and fit for military service who haven't been called up to date. Another 1,500,000, between the ages of 17 and 20, are not yet subject to the draft.

The Jap Air Force is growing.

In addition to millions of native workers, Japan has a potential slave force of 400,000,000 conquered people. 50% of Japan's labor force is made up of women. Another 25% boys and girls under 20, the balance men. The Jap workday is twelve to sixteen hours with two days off a month. The Jap cannot leave his job, change it, or strike. The highest daily wage equals about three American dollars—30% to 75% of which goes to taxes and compulsory savings.

The Jap, as our men in the Pacific know, will fight to the death. As far as the Jap is concerned, the outer Empire—and the men who defend it—are the expendables. The Jap will fight the Battle from inside the inner Empire.

The Jap believes that we shall weary of war too easily and too early.

In the invasion of France, supply ships had an overnight run to make. In the coming Battle of Japan, ships in the Pacific will have long-reached round trips that often take five months to make.

These realities are worth thinking about before you keep your home front rendezvous with a Victory Volunteer. Perhaps you will feel that the national personal Sixth War Loan objective—purchase of at least one extra $100 War Bond—is entirely too small for you. The better we face the realities confronting our forces in the Pacific the quicker the whole bloody business will be over and the sooner we will welcome home our fighting men. That's an American reality to work for with all our dollars and our sweat.

Flame Throwers In Civil War

That flame throwers such as are now being used with effect by American troops are not new is indicated by an article on "Liquid Fire" in the "St. Peter Tribune" for July 16, 1862, a file of which is preserved at the Minnesota Historical Society.

According to the news story, tests of a recently invented device for the projection of liquid fire has recently been made at the Washington Navy Yard under the direction of G. V. Fox, assitant Secretary of the Navy. The flame thrower ejected fluid "in an inert state from a pipe three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter," according to the account, "and was thrown some thirty to fifty yards before it reached the target. At a distance of several feet from the muzzle, the fluid ignited, expanded to a diameter of two feet with an immense combustion, which covered the target and platform with liquid fire."

Although the tests apparently were successful, the device does not appear to have been used during the Civil War,

Mrs. Raymond Sagstuen left Monday for San Francisco to join her husband who is stationed there. Mr. and Mrs. Tony Peterson accompanied her to Grand Forks.

Farm Meetings Were Held

A series of meetings for farmers were held throughout the county the past week, to provide information in regards to crops raised and production practices carried out under the 1944 program.

The meeting for Holt, East Valley, Agdar and Excel township farmers was held here on Friday last week.

Farmers who have missed these meetings will have to report at the county office said Mr. Kranz as the person giving information must sign the farm plan in person.

County Tire Stocks Are Low

Did you know it is a fact that the tire panel rations more grade 1 tires for Marshall county than there are tires in the county available for purchase. Some have come back to the Board with this complaint.

Don't blame the tire rationing panel if you do not get a certificate for a tire when you think you should have it. They would be glad to issue every applicant a certificate if it were possible, but only about half enough tires are allotted the county each month to take care of the applications. As elastic as rubber is supposed to be, 150 tires a month won't take care of the 400 applications, and there you are--someone gets left out.

Applications for canning sugar which required Spare stamps 37 to be sent with the application, cannot be accepted at the ration office after Nov. 30. Sugar stamp No. 40, which is good for canning purposes, is valid until Feb. 28, 1945. Please note the distinction.

With every application for gasoline, no matter what sort of an application used, the Milage Rationing Record Stub must accompany the application. The latter stub is what was sent you with the recently issued Basic "A" coupons. If you received the coupons you received the Mileage Rationing Record as you addressed your own letter on it. Of late approximately one out of every three gas applications has had to be returned because this Mileage Rationing Record did accompany the application.

EUROPE:

Budapest Imperilled

Once, like Paris, a center of European gaiety with colorful sidewalk cafes enlivened by gypsy music, Budapest became a fevered and somber city as Russian armies hammered toward the Hungarian capital.

Having broken across the Tisza river, some 50 miles to the east, the Reds bore down on Budapest as German and Hungarian armies were hard pressed to hold broad lines across the country's rolling plains, gateway to Austria.

Even as the Russians rolled forward, thousands of Budapest's civilians were put to work in the erection of entrenchments and fortifications, and the Germans vowed that they would make this city, once one of Europe's prettiest, into another Warsaw, a battleground.

'Sacred Soil'

As the Germans and Hungarians dug in for a stand about Budapest, the Nazis fought fiercely on the East Prussian front to slow up the Russians' advance across the "sacred soil" of this historic home of the Junkers.

As the Germans braced in East Prussia along prepared lines some 20 miles inside the border, the Russians, following their traditional military policy, shifted the weight of their attacks northward toward a narrow belt of Baltic seacoast at Latvia, where some 100,000 Nazis were reported cut off from the remainder of the enemy line in the east.

Slicing into German positions in this sector with overwhelming numbers of troops, the Russians threatened to chew the entrapped Nazi armies to shreds before they could be successfully evacuated by sea.

To prevent enemy agents from obtaining vital military information through contact with U. S. troops, the army is rigidly enforcing stiff regulations against doughboys mixing with German citizens.

Troops may not make any social calls at German homes. They may not contact German girls. Because of service by German bartenders, they may not even buy beer outside of mess bars.

Talking with German people is an "unnecessary contact," the army has ruled, bringing fines of from $25 to $65.

Gain Port

Formerly forced to truck supplies overland 400 miles from Cherbourg, or from temporary beach harbors along the channel coast, the Allies materially improved their communication lines by gaining full control of the great Belgian port of Antwerp.

Control was gained when Canadian and British troops cleared the Germans from both sides of the Schelde river leading inland to the port. As the Allied attack developed, the Nazis pulled out the major bulk of their 40,000 troops to prevent being encircled from the rear.

As the Allies moved to improve communications, the U. S. First army resumed its offensive about Aachen, driving through the once picturesque, now splintered, fir, pine and silver birch Hurtgen forest on the road to the vital industrial Rhineland.

PACIFIC:

Enemy Girds

Still determined to hold on to the Philippines despite the concentration of U. S. strength behind the forces of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the Japanese poured in air reinforcements for the showdown battle that will develop when the Americans move onto the larger islands.

Even as the Japs sought to bolster their defenses, first severely shaken by the U. S. navy's major triumph in the second sea battle of the Philippines, General MacArthur's ground forces on Leyte pushed the enemy back to the mountainous western portion of the island.

Because of the terrain, difficulty was encountered in the speedy erection of air fields on Leyte, but, as construction progressed, increasing numbers of fighter planes took off from the new bases to join carrier-borne aircraft in attacking shipping seeking to reinforce the entrapped enemy troops on the island.

With her back being pressed closer and closer to the wall, Japan's Premier Koiso called for greater war production, declaring that many troops had died for lack of munitions. Almost as Koiso spoke, the enemy reported B-29s reconnoitering over Tokyo.

CATTLE:

Record Marketing

With more than 40 per cent of federally inspected beef, veal, pork and lamb going to the government, supplies of better grades of meat remained in scarcity last month despite record-breaking marketing of cattle.

Shipments of cattle were 37 per cent greater than for the 10-year average for October, and receipts of calves were 71 per cent greater. Although showing substantial increases over September, marketings of hogs and sheep were lower than in October of 1943.

Due to the heavy slaughter of cattle and calves, production of beef, veal, lamb and pork amounted to about 1½ billion pounds for October, 29 per cent greater than the 10-year average for October.

Hog Prices

After an unsettled market had lopped 75 million dollars off of the value of the nation's hog crop, higher bids by packers stemmed the downward spiral of prices.

The packers' action followed War Food administration hints that the government would cut subsidy payments, amounting to $1.30 per hundredweight, if average prices for good and choice gilts and barrows were allowed to drop below a $13.50 per hundredweight average. Lower grade hogs, however, would not be included.

As marketings increased during the first week of November, packers became more choosy in the purchase of hogs, declaring that during the periods of lower receipts they were compelled to pay ceiling prices for many shipments just to keep their plants busy.

Shoes Will Be Brighter Next Spring

Although civilian shoe production will not return to normal till after the war, retailers will feature brighter lines next spring, surveys of the national shoe fair in Chicago revealed.

There will be an airier style, too, with women's shoes open at the toes and heels, and "casuals," for comfort wear, coming into greater prominence in line with prewar trends.

Biggest boon, however, is in the government's lifting of restrictions on the use of colors, with women promised spring wear in green, liberty red and blue jacket blue, and men's shoes in shades from army russet to turf tan.

Two tones will be made again, it was revealed, with differently colored leather permitted for the upper part of the shoe if soles are made of some other composition.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Syrup, at Home
No Cooking. No Work. Real Saving.
Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.
It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.
And you'll say it's really amazing, for quick action. You can feel it take hold promptly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it eases breathing, and lets you sleep.
Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Many rubber items in common use are shaped at the factories in giant extruding machines, which in general appearance and action are much like the ordinary kitchen meat grinder. Rubber, mixed with chemicals, is extruded in any shape desired—round, square, rectangular or tubular.
The critical operating temperature in a tire is about 240 degrees at its hottest point, and is reached quicker in a synthetic rubber tire than in one made of natural rubber. Speed, load and inflation are chief factors in developing tire heat, which accounts for tire users being cautioned about respecting them.

Packing nearly 7,000 Christmas boxes for Great Northern employes in military service required approximately 175,000 items, for each parcel contained 25 different gifts—including a sprig of Christmas tree.

We're Thinking of Them, Too!

A few weeks ago a letter from India came to Great Northern's general offices. It was written by a technical sergeant in the Army Air Forces, on leave from a locomotive fireman's job in Montana.

The sergeant's pen fairly spouted enthusiasm, for on that day he had unwrapped a much-traveled package—his 1943 Christmas box from Great Northern. The parcel had trailed the sergeant about the world 10 months.

"The box sure is okay," he wrote. "I suppose all the other Great Northerners in the service got boxes like mine. It sure must have been an awful lot of work."

Well, the sergeant was right on one point, but in Air Force vernacular, "off the beam" on the other.

Last year almost 4,300 Christmas boxes were sent by Great Northern to its men and women employes in the Armed Forces.

Nearly 7,000 names—equivalent to one-third of the company's average annual peacetime employment—are on the 1944 package list, and some 3,400 of the boxes now are on the way overseas.

But, it hasn't been "an awful lot of work" for us. Hardly, when we consider the sacrifices and contributions those men and women are making!

A lot of Great Northern's mail these days comes from ships, foxholes, camps, airfields and hospitals. Employes on leave from thousands of jobs along 8,200 miles of railway take time off from fighting a war to say they are thinking of us.

We're thinking of them, too!

Farm Income Tax School

The summarizing of farm records to determine the "most farm profit" upon which income tax returns depend will be the subject of school called by the County Agent F. W. Forbes for Wednesday, November 29th at 1:30 p. m., in Warren. Present to conduct the school will be J. B. McNulty, farm management specialist from University Farm.

County Agent F. Forbes says that each farmer attending will be loaned a copy of a complete farm record and, of the farm schedule used in calculating "net farm profit." In his discussion Mr. McNllty will explain how to enter the various kinds of receipts and expenses in a farm account book, how to transfer the data to the farm schedule and then how to determine the "net profit."

There will be a thorough discussion on the correct procedures for arriving at the income tax figures and an opportunity to ask questions. The purpose of the meeting is to determine what constitutes a complete record and to promote an understanding of each problem and depreciation, trade ins, gains and losses.

Predicts Increased Investment By American Farmers During Sixth War Bond Campaign

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A prediction that American farmers will invest more money in bonds during the Sixth War Loan than in any previous drive was made today by the War Finance Division of the U. S. Treasury.

Farmers bought $1,250,000,000 worth of War Bonds during 1943, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. In 1944 it is believed they can and should purchase a total of $2,000,000,000, Ted R. Gamble, national Director of the War Finance Division, said.

Income at Peak

The Sixth War Loan, starting November 20, comes at an ideal time for agriculture, he pointed out.

This is not only the time when farm income is at a seasonal peak, but 1944 marks three years of record breaking farm income, he said.

Based on information obtained from the BEA, the Agricultural Section of the War Finance Division estimates the 1944 cash farm income at $20,600,000,000, compared with $20,000,000,000 in 1943.

Although net farm income, due to higher operating costs, may not be greater than in 1943, most farmers now have reduced their debts and consequently will have more money to put into War Bonds, the division reports.

In the twelve months ending January 1, 1944, farmers reduced real estate mortgages alone by $650,000,000.

Bank Deposits Gain

After paying all operating costs and necessary family expenses, farmers will have left this year for investment and debt reduction over $5,000,000,000, the Agricultural Section also estimates.

Because of the fact that new machinery is not obtainable, farm deposits are piling up in rural banks. Demand deposits held by farmers in these banks are estimated at $4,500,000,000 and time deposits at $2,000,000,000. Since the new method of redeeming Series E Savings Bonds makes them as liquid as a dollar bill, it is no longer necessary for the farmer to maintain a large bank account to meet possible emergencies, Mr. Gamble stated. Therefore, he believes, farmers will convert part of these deposits into War Bonds.

Ted R. Gamble

War Bond purchasers will provide a farm financial reserve to protect against damage by drought, flood and livestock disease, will assure cash to replace and repair buildings and machinery as well as to build back soil fertility depleted by wartime food production, and will provide funds for education, vacations and old age security.

The high farm income this year is the result of the huge increase in farm production to meet wartime food needs rather than a rise in prices, which have been held down by the OPA it was explained.

Shop Now; Mail Early

Public response to the Post Office Department's "Shop now. Mail In November" campaign is good but needs to be better, according to Postmaster General Frank C. Walker.

"Extraordinary wartime conditions face us," Mr. Walker said. "Unless more people buy and mail this month the Postal service cannot do its job of delivering all Christmas gifts on time.

"It is not pleasing to us to have to ask the American people to mail packages so far in advance of the delivery date. We do so only because it has to be done. The job is a tremendous one, but we are confident that it will be done because we know from experience that given sound reasons Americans cooperate magnificently.

"Unprecedented shortages of man power and transportation facilities growing out of war compel early mailing. The Postal Service has given 50,000 experienced employees to the armed forces ond 300,000 railroad workers have gone to war. Equally serious is the fact that rail and other transport facilities are taxed to the limit with the great burden of war traffic which all of us know must take precedence

"In a great number of our 43,000 post offices the man power situation is critical. The 200,000 extra workers whom we normally recruited to handle the swollen Christmas volume of mail were able to work long hours of overtime and to do heavy work. This cannot be expected from the women and high school boys and girls to whom in large part we must look this year to meet the situation.

"The way in which everyone responded in making it possible for us to handle a volume of 70,000,000 parcels for the armed forces overseas leaves no doubt in my mind that the November Christmas mailing will be equally successful. I ask for help of the press, radio, business advertisers, civic groups and all Americans in making it possible for the postal service to do its work.

"We urge everyone to buy now mail in November and mark gifts 'Do Not Open Until Christmas'."

Thanksgiving Dinner In 1854

Whether Thanksgiving is celebrated in Minnesota on the 4th Thursday in November according to 1944 proclamations, or late in December as was the custom in the fifties, the festival inevitably brings to mind tables groaning under the weight of the good things provided for the big Thanksgiving dinner. While the proverbial turkey does not appear to have been common for the early Minnesota observances, there was plenty of wild game available.

A New Englander who happened to be in Excelsior on December 21, 1854, Thanksgiving Day, wrote a letter to the "North Western Democrat" of Minneapolis, describing the bountiful hospitality of that community, and his account is preserved in the file of that newspaper owned by the Minnesota Historical society.

Having attended the church services conducted at Excelsior by the Rev. Charles Galpin, he heard the minister extend a public invitation to join in the Thanksgiving dinner at the Minnetonka House, run by George Galpin, and accepted.

"Without exaggeration," wrote the New England man, "no epicure seated himself to a more sumptuous feast.

. . . Large plates of roast venison of the finest quality first met my eye, and in close proximity were several of the squealing, bristly tribe, stretched at full lenght and stuffed with condiments that pamper the appetites of the most dainty. Next came the pheasant and chicken pies, with grouse, and the more honored of the feathered tribe, served up in every variety of style.

I came near losing myself in the countless variety of pastry of every description." "A school of good old New England pumpkin pies" followed, and "puddings and cakes brought up the rear in a deluge of luxuries."

To the People of this Community

GI Joe in his Pacific foxhole—maybe he is your brother, husband, sweetheart or friend—is listening in on you today.

He knows you have a date with a Victory Volunteer, a neighbor with a War Bond order in his or her hand. The two of you may talk it over at your work bench, in your office or in your home. Will GI Joe pick up phrases like "I can't afford it," "Why do they have to have more money?" "We'll lick Japan with one hand tied behind our back"?

GI Joe counts on you to have enough sense and knowledge of the facts about the Pacific war to back him up in his foxhole. The extra $100 War Bond you buy today is a War Bond with the most power. It gives GI Joe the support he must have at the time when he needs it most. It tells Tokyo you're in the fight to the finish.

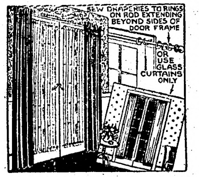
Smartly Curtaining Your French Doors

HOW to make French door curtains harmonize with the window treatment in a room is a question that always arises. Frequently, over-draperies are omitted for the doors even though they are used for windows. The same glass curtain material is then used as for the windows but a heading and rod is used both top and bottom. However, over-draperies add dignity.

Either a wooden or a metal rod extending well beyond the sides of the door frame may be hooked in place as shown here in the diagram.



SEW DRAPERIES TO RINGS ON ROD EXTENDING BEYOND SIDES OF DOOR FRAME OR USE GLASS CURTAINS ONLY

It is not necessary to repeat window valances over doors though it may be done if desired by using a valance shelf or a cornice box placed high enough for the bottom of the valance to be just above doors that open in.

NOTE—This sketch is from a new booklet by Mrs. Spears called MAKE YOUR OWN CURTAINS. This 32-page book is full of smart new curtain and drapery ideas with illustrated step-by-step directions for measuring, cutting, making and hanging all types from the simplest sash curtain to the most complicated lined overdrapery or stiffened valance. Whatever your curtain problem here is the answer. Order book by name and enclose 15 cents. Address:

Bank Robberies Cut

Between 1932 and 1943, the number of bank holdups in this country decreased from 606 to 22, or 96 per cent, because of the work of the F. B. I., with the cooperation of local authorities, the F. B. I. not being hindered by "state lines" in its pursuit of criminals.

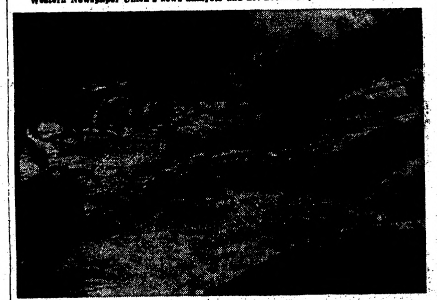
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Win Strengthens F.D.R.'s Hand; Germans Fear New Allied Drive; Storms Slow Pacific Warfare

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



With U. S. trucks waiting in mud, Chinese coolies work diligently to clear washout of section of Burma road.

DEMS GAIN:
F.D.R. Strengthened

In winning a fourth term, Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt carried the Democratic party along with him in both the senate and house, where he now appears to be assured of a working majority on both international and domestic issues.

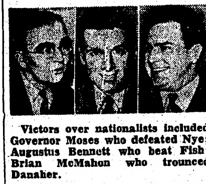
Their own positions materially weakened by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's strong stand for an effective international organization to preserve world peace, staunch GOP nationalists were among the defeated, with the result that F.D.R.'s peace program should encounter easier sledding in the senate, where details will be worked out, and in the house where funds will be appropriated.

All of the so-called nationalists did not suffer defeat, but prominent among those that did were Senators Nye in North Dakota, Danaher in Connecticut and Davis in Pennsylvania, and Representatives Fish of New York and Day and Maas of Minnesota.

Although the Democrats failed to make any gains in the senate, they stand just short of a two-thirds majority necessary for ratification of foreign treaties, a margin they may make up by an alliance of such GOP internationalists as Ball of Minnesota.

In the house, however, the Democrats made big gains, increasing their membership to over 240, while the Republicans fell far below their preelection strength of 210.

Thus, although President Roosevelt's winning margin was below that of 1940, the Democratic victory built around his leadership assumed the proportion of a landslide. The successful conduct of the war, the comparative comfort of people despite rationing and the President's intimate acquaintance with Allied affairs—all tended to offset opposition.



Victors over nationalists included Governor Moses who defeated Nye; Augustus Bennett who beat Fish; Brian McMahon who trounced Danaher.

As usual, the President drew his greatest strength from the nation's large industrial centers, where efficient political machines like Ed Kelly's of Chicago, Tammany's of New York and Frank Hague's of Jersey City piled up tremendous pluralities which traditional Republican rural districts could not counter-balance. As it was, Governor Dewey did not run as strong in the country areas as was anticipated.

Much credit for getting the vote out in the big industrial centers went to Sidney Hillman's CIO Political Action committee, which undertook to impress union membership with the exercise of their power through the polls.

Abroad, President Roosevelt's election was well hailed in Allied circles.

Said the London Evening Standard: "The result of the election . . . leaves the tasks of winning the war and the larger tasks of advancing Anglo-American-Soviet unity to win the peace in the strong, proven hands of Roosevelt. . . ."

MISCELLANY

Film actress Ann Sheridan, losing her wager on Governor Dewey, paraded down Hollywood boulevard in ragged costume and burnt cork on her face.

About 200 farm buildings burn every day in the United States and Canada, and some 3,500 people a year perish in these fires.

EUROPE:
Things to Come

All along the 460 mile western front, fighting was confined to local actions, but the Germans, for one, brooked no misgivings on the comparative calm.

While the British were clearing all of southwestern Holland, and U. S. forces were improving positions near Aachen in the north, Metz in the center and the Vosges mountains in the south, the Nazis claimed that the Allies were striving to obtain springboards for a great drive on the Reich, and only using 25 per cent of their troops.

Though action in the west was local, it was bitter, with very tough fighting below Aachen, where doughboys worked through the fir and pine Hurtgen forest in Indian fashion on the road to the Rhineland.

As the Doughboys pushed through the splintered Hurtgen forest, both sides made free use of air and artillery bombardment for maintenance of open positions outside the wooded tract.

It was there, in little hamlets, that some of the bitterest fighting occurred, with tiny villages changing hands in close-quarter action.

Fierce fighting also took place in the foothills of the Vosges mountains, where mixed U. S. and French units pounded forward toward the great passes leading into southwestern Germany. As Allied troops worked forward, the Nazis pushed in reenforcements in an effort to check the advances.

Shoving off in a surprise attack about Metz after a heavy artillery bombardment, U. S. troops improved their positions along a 55 mile front, encountering mainly small arms fire from Germans caught flat-footed. In developing their attack, Yanks braved icy streams, chest-high, to get across to the opposite banks to establish bridgeheads and cover for engineering corps throwing across bridges.

PACIFIC:
Stormy Weather

Raging hurricanes known throughout tropical waters swept across the Philippines, and U. S. troops driving down the northwestern half of Leyte island toward the Jap base of Ormoc were caught in the swirling whirlwind and their attack slowed.

Having cleared the enemy from virtually all of the eastern section of Leyte, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces swung around the northern tip of the mountain range blocking off the western coast, and were driving down it when the hurricane struck.

With one of Japan's top militarists, General Yamashita, put in command of the enemy's forces, the foe's determination to put up a fight for the Philippines was well reflected in their stand on Leyte, where elements of four Jap divisions entrenched themselves in the hilly and tangled terrain on the west coast to face the oncoming Yanks.

As a first-class slugging match developed on the ground, air combat also increased in tempo, with U. S. carrier-based planes attacking enemy airdromes and supply depots in an effort to weaken the enemy's air force, while Jap land-based craft conducted harassing raids on U. S. positions on Leyte.

Blow Hard

Hurricanes that strike the Philippine area blow strong winds. In addition to their circular whirl the tropical cyclones move in their entirety, slowly at first, and usually no more than 20 miles an hour. Some storms, however, have attained a speed of 40 miles or more per hour. The usual direction for those north of the equator is westward, then northwestward.

Tropical cyclones are usually at their strongest in the area stretching northward from Leyte.

'I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen'—To Germany

Although frequently played on programs of Irish songs, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" has no Gaelic connection. It was written about 70 years ago by the American composer, Thomas Westendorf, as a musical confirmation of a promise made to his wife, Kathleen, that he would take her back to visit her old home in Germany.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Nearly 2,000 rubber tires daily were required in North Africa to replace tires which had been worn out or destroyed in action.
As a result of the diversion of the petroleum by-product to aviation gasoline, about 50 per cent of the butadiene produced for synthetic rubber processing so far in 1944 came from alcohol plants.
When you wonder about the shortage of civilian tires, bear in mind that in the time it takes to build one 56-inch airplane tire at B. F. Goodrich factories, seven 8.25-20 truck tires or sixty 6.00:16 passenger tires could be made. And airplane tires are "musts" these days!

"Sure thing," agreed the obliging motorist. "Whaddaya want me to do?"

"I just want you," cracked the cop, "to help me pick up this fire hydrant and move it down street a ways so you'll have enough room to park there."

Household Hints

A little skim milk rubbed over leather chairs several times a year will keep the leather soft and prevent cracking.

If candles are soiled, rub them with a cloth dipped in alcohol. Or they may be rubbed with lard or other fats.

When driving a nail into a wall to hang a picture, try placing a small piece of adhesive tape over the spot and drive the nail through it. This will prevent the wall from cracking there.

When sending a book through the mails, cut the corners from several heavy envelopes and place over the four corners of the book to protect them.

Wax your book shelves. This will permit books to slide in and out easier and cause less wear on them.

If there is a suggestion of rust on your refrigerator shelves, wash them with a mild scouring powder and hot water, dry well with a soft clean cloth, and apply a thin coating of hot melted paraffin.

Bond Drive Is In Full Swing

With just a week to go until Pearl Harbor Day — Thursday, Dec. 7, Marshall County residents will have to speed up their War Bond purchases to reach goal of $565,000, O. M. Mattson, county chairman, reported today following a tabulation of incomplete reports throughout the county.

Pledges and sales reported through Monday totaled $347,930.50, with reports incomplete from practically all districts in the county. Muddy roads and the deer hunting season kept many of the volunteer solicitors from their work during the opening week, but all who have not completed their tasks are out in full force this week vowed to bring the county thru before December 7th.

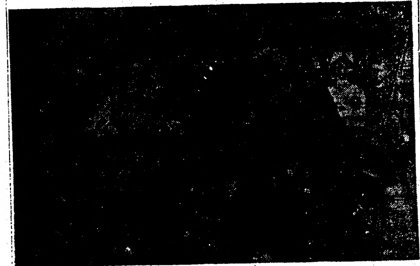
Their Bonds and Stamps Buy a Jeep



"We're buying one," yelled youngsters at the Whittier School, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, when they saw the jeep above. Actually they expect to have bought enough war stamps and bonds by the middle of December to pay for two jeeps for the armed forces. The army sergeants in the picture motored over from Sioux Falls Air Field to show the boys and girls just what their savings are purchasing. (Army Photo)

Received Letter From Brother

Mrs. Lars Ring received this letter written by her brother, parts of it follows:

"I have made several remarkable discoveries which I'd like to share with you.

The first is, the world is really a very small place. You have but to get on a ship and in just a few days you have arrived at a magic city. At least they used to seem like magic cities when we were small and had to study them in school. But they're not very magic. They're really nothing much. Most of them are dirty and narrow and oppresive. And the people are poor and lonely and perhaps a little bewildered. Their lives aren't as full of super-facilities as ours are but they don't seem to mind. Perhaps they've never experienced them or perhaps they don't seem very important, not having them.

War isn't very pleasant. Nothing but death and fire and bitterness and melancholy.

Those things which we consid-immoral and terrible are given small thought by the people over here. Whether that's due to the war or simply because their moral standards are lower, I don't know.

Its all so unfair and depressing and lousy. I guess I don't make a very good sailor. Too sensitive.

War does strange things to people and everything seems out of proportion and many times a fellow is tempted to take advantage of this and profit by it, but I have no stomach for capitalizing on other people's misery and misfortune. Cigarets can be sold for $10.00 a carton. We pay 55c. Shoes can be sold for as much as $50.00. Cheap cotton shirts $5.00 Food is priceless. Little children are so hungry for candy and gum they'll do anything for some It's pitiful to see them gather about the Americans and beg. Even women beg for some. For themselves and their children. Soap is beyond price and they'll trade anything for a bar.

The Germans I have seen, prisoners of war, seem glad they don't have to fight any more. They trade off anything of value for cigarete, candy or soap. Medals won in battle, belts, watches, jewelry.

I saw some pictures someone had taken from a German killed in battle. Why he took them I'll never know but there are people like that. Anyway the pictures were of the German soldier, his wife and little girl. Pictures taken at some happier time. At a park a little girl feeding some swans. Pictures of the little girl and her father playing together. It made you a little sick inside to look at them. It's hard to hate the enemy violently.

We were in the invasion of France but I suppose you know that. We were very lucky and it was not at all as I had expected it to be. We just did our every day job as we always do. It was a little noisy and we saw some fireworks. A little like the 4th of July.

Give my best to everybody,
Herm.

Holt School Notes

The quota of $30 worth of Christmas Seals has been exceeded. We thank those who made it so easy for the pupils to sell these seals.

The Freshmen are making preparations for a party to be given this evening, with the Juniors as special guests and the Sophomores as visitors.

Miss Olson spent Thanksgiving vacation in Minneapolis and Miss Loomis visited friends in Winnipeg.

The winter schedule went into effect on Monday, by virtue of which we begin school at 10.00 o'clock in the forenoon, have 45 minutes for lunch and dismiss at 4:45 in the afternoon. The members of the school faculty much prefer a change of one-half hour rather than of a whole hour as the new arrangement provides for. We'd like to hear from the patrons of the school, so as to get their reactions to this change.

The science classes have taken their unit tests and are doing laboratory work at present. A new cabinet has been placed in the laboratory for the storage of electrical equipment.

Gloria Johnson purchased a bond this week. Miss Olson's room still leads in the purchase of stamps and bonds with a subscription of $56.25. Mrs. Frickers room comes next with a purchase of $27.25, Miss Loomis' room follows with $21.35 and the high school trails with $11.50. This does not include bonds purchased by high school pupils.

The total amount invested in war stamps this far is $116 35.

Editors note — by error we ommited the name of Marian Sorum, which was to have been on the honor roll last time.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been of the changing variety Until Saturday we had mild and rainy weather with a change on Sunday. Since then it has snowed some so the ground is covered and the temperature has dropped. As we go to press the reading is five below zero.

Household Hints

When spiced peaches are opened this winter, be sure to save the juice. It makes delicious basting for broiled or browned sausages.

Leather shoes that are difficult to polish should be rubbed over with a cut lemon. They will shine beautifully afterwards.

Less bacon will be needed to season baked beans if it is run through a food chopper before adding to the beans.

Cover discolored ceilings with a solution of thick starch. Let it dry and then brush off—and the marks, too!

Add a teaspoonful of household ammonia to a quart of water. Use this to sprinkle over ferns grown in the house once or twice a month. Ferns will take on a rich green color.

Orange or lemon rind may be grated before squeezing the fruit for juice and dried for later use. After grating, place where it will dry thoroughly and store in a tight container.

Add ordinary cow's milk to the possible sources for rubber. Chemists, it recently was announced, have developed a product from milk which has the characteristics of natural rubber.

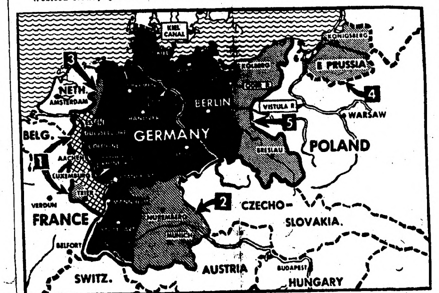
Big Allied Winter Push Aims At Heart of German Industry; WFA Sets Food Goals for 1945

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



With President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin scheduled to meet soon, there again has been a resumption of discussion as to the future disposition of Germany. On the basis of the latest information, the Reich might well be reduced to half of its 1938 size, with (1) France claiming the area west of the Rhine river; (2) a restored Austria obtaining Bavaria; (3) Holland being compensated for flooded land; (4) the Russians and Poles dividing East Prussia; (5) Poland receiving Pomerania and part of Silesia, and the Breslau area going to Czechoslovakia.

EUROPE:

Big Push

Using their superior forces to prevent the Germans from building up strength for next year, the Allies launched an all-out drive against the enemy's west wall, moving forward toward the vital industrial Ruhr and Rhineland despite wintry weather.

Although they had anticipated a general offensive, the Germans conceded the Allies' superiority, stating that until their vaunted new weapons could be delivered to the front, their troops would have to rely on their spirit to stay in the fight.

As the Allied attack got underway, the British 2nd army striking in southeastern Holland stood only 37 miles from Duisberg; the U. S. 9th hitting to the Tommies' south was 31 miles from Dusseldorf; the U. S. 1st swinging below Aachen was 28 miles from Cologne; the U. S. 3rd working past Metz was 13½ miles from the Saar, and the U. S. 7th and French 1st were 40 miles from Bavaria.

Focal points of the attack centered in the U. S. 9th and 1st army fronts, where swarms of Allied heavy bombers supported by fighter-planes dropped thousands of tons of fragmentation explosives on the enemy's forward positions to smoothen the way for the Yanks' advancing forces.

From debris caused by war, Dutch youngsters in s'Hertogenbosch build their toy castles.

Heavy concentrations of artillery joined in the bombardment of the German positions, then the Yanks moved forward, with members of the infantry slogging alongside of mud-caked tanks to score gains.

Prior to the general offensive, the British in Holland, the Yanks around Metz and the mixed Allied force in the foothills of the Vosges mountains had improved their positions in hard fighting.

The Yanks around Metz engaged in some of the toughest fighting as Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton edged closer to the vital Saar basin, famed for its coal and chemical industry. In slashing forward, U. S. forces ringed the formidable fortress city of Metz.

In writing off Metz, the Germans loudly broadcast that the bastion had largely served its purpose of holding up the U. S. drive to give them time to build up their fortifications farther to the rear.

The Allied attack came off in the midst of a welter of rumors that Heinrich Himmler had taken over absolute charge of the Reich from an ailing Adolf Hitler. Appointed commander of the Reich's home army by Hitler himself, Himmler busied himself trying to shove up German morale for the mighty blows that fell about that nation's unhappy head.

MISCELLANY

The untimely death of Quarterback Allen Shafer of Wisconsin in a game against Iowa was the first collegiate fatality due directly to football since 1940.

* * *

Reflecting high business activity, money in circulation jumped up nearly $600,000,000 dollars in October to a total of $24,386,247,083. Broken down into simple figures, that adds up to $176.10 per person.

PACIFIC:

Bloody Science

Bloody business, war is also a science, and as U. S. troops plodded forward on Leyte island in the Philippines, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's strategy unfolded.

With the enemy's main forces compressed on the northwest corner of Leyte, General MacArthur's tactics pointed to their annihilation by the prized military maneuver of engaging them from the front while sending other units to cut them off in the rear.

Thus did the 24th division move to press the enemy frontally, while the 1st cavalry and 96th divisions pierced the mountain ranges to the southeast in a drive to entrap the Japanese from the rear.

Meanwhile, U. S. airmen kept a close eye on the important port of Ormoc, through which the Japanese had previously sent reinforcements to help their troops holding out against the American advance.

Manila Bay also came under the bombsights of U. S. airmen, with carrier-based craft hitting at this important nerve center of enemy shipping for the entire Philippine area. In one strike alone, 11 Jap cargo vessels and oilers went to the bottom.

WAR WOUNDS:

Greater Recovery

Because of better organized and equipped medical service, sulfa drugs, penicillin, plasma and whole blood available for use in forward areas, less than 4 per cent of Americans wounded in this war die as compared with 7 per cent in the first world conflict.

The full picture of medical advance, however, is best told in the fact that from 50 to 60 per cent of the soldiers wounded in the present war are incapacitated by heavy guns, artillery or mortars, which inflict more serious injury, compared with only about 20 per cent in 1917-'18.

Comparisons between the two world wars show 80 per cent of the wounded now returning to duty as against 70 per cent, and number of infections kept down to 10 per cent as against the old figure of 60 per cent.

FOOD PODUCTION:

Bumper Harvests

Even as the U. S. department of agriculture forecast bumper grain crops for 1944, the War Food administration announced that its 1945 food production program would remain substantially the same as this year's.

Boosting its estimates of corn production 61,000,000 bushels, the USDA predicted a record 1944 crop of 3,258,000,000 bushels, while standing pat on its previous forecast of an all-time wheat harvest of 1,108,000,000 bushels. Coupled with a record sorghum crop of 160,000,000 bushels, overall grain production, including oats, barley and rye, was set at a top of 157,500,000 tons.

In addition, bumper crops were forecast for cotton, tobacco, potatoes, sweet potatoes, soybeans, apples, peaches, pears and pecans.

Alterations in the WFA's 1945 food program call for an increase in pig, cattle and milk production, but a 16 per cent decrease in egg output closer to the 1935-'39 average.

VETS

According to an interpretation of the War Labor board, veterans returning to their old positions are entitled to any automatic promotions and pay increases on the job.

In considering the selective service act of 1940, requiring employers to take back former employees returning from the armed forces, WLB ruled that the vet must be rehired "at the level to which he would have been entitled if there had been no break in his service with the company. . . ."

Aggravated Fellow Must Have Needed a Haircut

A long-haired man met a little boy, who asked him the time.

"Ten minutes to nine," the man replied.

"Well," said the boy, "at nine get your hair cut."

He took to his heels, the aggravated one after him.

Turning a corner, the man ran into a policeman.

"What's up," asked the officer.

The man, much out of breath, said, "That young scamp asked me the time and when I told him 'ten minutes to nine,' he said, 'At nine get your hair cut.' "

"Well," said the cop, "take it easy, you've got seven minutes yet."

Composing Concert Music Found to Be Unprofitable

Composing concert music in the United States is so unprofitable that even the most successful composers have to earn their livelihood in another occupation, says Collier's. A major orchestra pays only from $25 to $50 for the right to perform a symphonic work, while most choral societies, small orchestras and chamber - music groups seldom pay anything.

One famous symphony, although performed many times by leading orchestras, earned only $175, or $220 less than the composer's expenses.

This Home-Mixed Cough Syrup Is Most Effective

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. Or use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving because it gives you about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough relief. Promptly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and makes breathing easy. You've never seen anything better for prompt and pleasing results.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

To the People of this Community

Five billion dollars of the 14 billion dollars our country needs to press the war against our enemies must come from individual investors. That sounds like, and is, a lot of money. Actually success or failure of the Sixth War Loan is up to each individual American.

Every war loan has been oversubscribed because Americans by the millions have shared its responsibility. Americans such as you have recognized the need of extra War Bond purchases over and above their normal payroll savings.

There is no such thing as a little fellow in a War Bond drive. Your War Bond purchases, multiplied by the War Bond purchases of your friends and neighbors, become fighting power which saves lives of Americans on the battlefronts and brings us nearer our common objective.

LETTER CARRIERS HONORED

Minnesota's 1,500 Letter Carriers feel honored to have a postman featured on the 1944 tuberculosis Christmas Seal, according to Eugene H. Keating, Minneapolis, president of the Minnesota State Association of Letter Carriers. He is shown above looking at the poster with William C. Doherty, Washington, D. C., president of the National Association of Letter Carriers.

Mr. Keating says:

"Letter carriers have found that the Christmas Seal appeal always meets with public approval.

From Mr. Doherty comes this statement:

"It is remarkable that a one-cent Christmas Seal can do so much to relieve human suffering and actually prevent the spread of that dreaded disease—tuberculosis. Letter Carriers aid in the delivery of Christmas Seal letters gladly because in their daily rounds they witness the excellent work being done."

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

Help The Drive--Buy Bonds

Marshall county is still $39,617.75 short of reaching its Sixth War Loan quota of $565,000 with pledges and sales tabulated thru Monday totaling $525,382.25, O. M. Mattson, County War Finance Committee chairman reports.

While pledges are nearing the quota and may have reached the quota by yesterday—Pearl Harbor Day—actual sales are lagging official reports from state headquarters reveal. Marshall county dropped from 5th place in state reports to 10th place, with sales totaling only 36.4 per cent of the individual quota, while the percentage of the entire quota was only 39.7. Series E bond sales had reached an even 30 per cent of the quota.

Many districts of the county are lagging far behind in the present drive, and unless intensive work during the next few days, there is a possibility that the quota will not be reached.

With less than two weeks remaining in the Sixth War Loan, state War Finance Committee officials this week appealed to all county and local committees to take every possible step to increase sales of war bonds to individual investors.

The drive officially closes Dec. 16 and we only hope that every one will pitch in now—today.

In the Holt District, East Valley township is the only one over top.

The tabulated report follows:

HOLT DISTRICT

Agdar	6,000	3,693.75
East Valley	3,000	3,675.00
Excel	14,000	7,252.00
Holt Twp.	5,000	2,473.75
Holt Vil.	3,000	2,118.75
New Solum	7,000
District Total	$38,000	19,213.15

Holt School Notes

School texts, ordered in September, are beginning to arrive at last at the rate of two or three packages a day.

The Christmas program will be held on Tuesday evening, the 19th. The holiday vacation will last from 4:45 on Wednesday, the 20th until 10:00 a. m. on the third of January.

Report cards will be issued next Wednesday since the second period of the year ends today. Parents are urged to examine these grades carefully and to cooperate with the teachers wherever necessary.

The science classes have just completed a series of experiments. This far, the Biology class has finished ten projects, the Physics class has completed seventeen experiments and the General Science Class is ready for experiment number 13.

The percentage of attendance of the entire school up to the present time is far below the average. There are many cases of sickness, we know, and these are all excusable. But we also know that some pupils are being permitted to remain out of school for reasons that do not permit excuses. Absense means loss of opportunity for the child, risk of demotion and has an effect upon the amount of aid received from the state.

On Wednesday the 6th, war stamps were purchased as follows: grades 1, 2 and 3, $8.30; grades, 4, 5, and 6, $7.90; grades 7 and 8, $6.35; high school, none. The total for the entire school was $22.55, bringing the school year total up to $138.90. Miss Olson's room leads with a school year total of $64.15.

Under the auspices of the Marhall County Farmers Union a Farmers Union Get-together will be held at Viking Hall at Viking on Friday, Dec. 8.

Twelve-Year-Old Boy Out To Break Record; Sold $373,300 in Three Previous Campaigns

Twelve-year-old Carl J. Buehler, Jr., is out to break his previous record of bond sales. With the six high school girls shown in the picture he is making the round of New Jersey theatres, community rallies and schools during the Sixth War Loan.

NEWARK, N. J.—With War Bond sales totaling $373,300 to his credit in three previous drives, 12-year-old Carl J. Buehler, Jr., of Verona, N. J., is out to break his previous records during the Sixth War Loan.

Accompanied by six attractive high school girls, whom he terms his "Bevy of Bond Boosters," Carl has started a round of schools, clubs, industries and community bond rallies, which will keep him busy throughout the drive.

The boy, who is believed to be America's champion school War Bond salesman, is a student at Our Lady of the Lake School in Verona. He started selling War Bonds during the Third War Loan and totalled $5,450 in sales. During the Fourth War Loan he sold $89,450 worth and during the Fifth $278,400. His achievements have brought him a personal letter of commendation from President Roosevelt, a jeep ride and a plane ride in the famed flying fortress, "Hell's Angels," which downed 18 German fighter planes in 48 missions over occupied Europe.

Said to be a spellbinder, Carl "sells" his audience thoroughly at every appearance.

His achievement is the more remarkable because all sales have been made to individuals and the largest single sale was for $10,000. Nearly all of the bonds he has sold have been in Series E.

Equally at home in a factory or a radio station Carl is known as "The Kid Behind the Man Behind the Gun" and "America's Premier Young War Bond Salesman."

The six high school girls who are accompanying him on the present tour of New Jersey circulate through the audiences and make actual sales after Carl finishes one of his appealing sales talks.

Received Army-Navy "E" Pins

The Army -- Navy Production Flag, first "E" Award to be given a dry milk plant, today flies proudly over the Land O' Lakes Dairy Company at Whitehall, Wisconsin.

Some idea as to the significance of winning this coveted honor is made clear by the fact that only 3,097 manufacturing plants in the entire country, making every conceivable type of war material, have been awarded the "E" Flag since the War began. These 3,097 represent but a scant 3½ per cent of the plants eligible to receive it.

In a thrilling and colorful ceremony held last Thursday in the auditorium of Whitehall High School, Col. John N. Gage, U. S. Army, made the presentation address. He emphasized that while the "production of bombers and shells may seem more dramatic, fighting men must have food. It must reach them every day." And he lauded the Whitehall plant's management and personnel for "having attained, throug great effort, maximum use of its time and equipment, an 18 to 20 per cent increase over natural capacity."

John Brandt, president, Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., made the acceptance speech, after which Lieut. J. J. Elder, U. S. N. R., presented the Army-Navy "E" Award Pins to the assembled personnel of the Whitehall plant.

Lt. Elder, who once played left halfback on the Notre Dame football team, likened this war to a football game in complimenting each "E" Pin recipient as "winner of a letter for a game well played," trusting that they would all bear down and play harder "until the goal line of Berlin and Tokyo is crossed."

Sgt. Kendall Digman, a member of Wisconsin's famed 32nd Division and winner of the Purple Heart and other medals, described war: "Once you've been in action, you feel it, see it, hear it, hear it—but you can't bring it out in words."

Food, Sgt. Digman emphasized, is a mighty implement of war. "I have prayed for food like I never prayed for anything in my life," said Sgt. Digman, "and it is such splendid plants as this Land O' Lakes dry milk plant at Whitehall which made it possible for my prayer to be answered."

While still in the grade school, Japanese youngsters are being trained in the rudiments of flying. Each boy is given tests and training on the manipulation of controls. The blindfolded boy has been whirled about in a spinning chair. When the chair stops revolving the boy is supposed to place his pointer on a specified spot on a chart. The accuracy he displays indicates his coordination, powers of recuperation and sense of balance—his fitness to become part of the future air force of Japan.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The size of the country's synthetic rubber production may depend not only upon technical progress, but also upon policies adopted for disposal of government-owned plants, in the opinion of John L. Collyer, president of The B. F. Goodrich Company and a pioneer in synthetic development.

Authorities expect that about 32,500 tons of natural rubber will reach the U. S. from the Amazonian region this year. Our synthetic program is now geared to produce 836,000 long tons a year of this substitute for crude.

MEAT:
1945 Prospects

More veal, about the same amount of beef, but 15 per cent less pork—that's the meat prospect for 1945, the War Food administration revealed.

The continued stringency in beef will continue because 31 per cent of the supply will go to the armed forces, it was said.

Increased supplies of better grade beef were in prospect for domestic consumers, with reports that midwestern farmers were aggressive buyers of stockers for fattening, what with feed stocks at high levels. Much of the beef on sale this year was of the utility type coming from grass-fed range cattle.

Meanwhile, cattle slaughter remained heavy during October, with an all-time record of 1,450,572 beef animals put on the block, along with 919,599 calves. The total of 4,223,255 hogs butchered was 1 per cent below the 5-year average.

Farm Income

U. S. farm income has continued its rise in 1944, with the department of agriculture now figuring that the total return for the year will run to over 20½ billion dollars for the nation's 6,000,000 operators.

The USDA's estimates were based on cash marketing and government benefit income of 14½ billion dollars for the first nine months of this year, a little less than a billion dollars more than for the corresponding period in 1943.

Combined with steady debt reduction, wise utilization of the farm plant without undue expansion and the accumulation of large liquid resources, the continued high income further strengthened the farmers' position for the uncertain postwar period.

Thieving Craze

Latest of the wartime juvenile problems to plague authorities was a shoplifting spree among 'teen-aged "bobby-sock" girls in Portland, Ore.

Carried on by girls stealing for personal use rather than resale, the spree reached alarming proportions, with losses so heavy in one big department store that auditors first thought there must have been a bookkeeping error in the amount of merchandise originally listed.

One 12-year-old was caught with $150 worth of sweaters, beads and bracelets. A 17-year-old said she had stolen $700 worth of goods in seven months for her sailor sweetheart.

Sobbed one tearful culprit: "I guess it is stealing, only I didn't think of it that way. It was an adventure sort of. The other girls were doing it."

CHINA:
Japs' Progress

Even as Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek shook up his government to revitalize the Chinese war effort, and Donald Nelson arrived in Chungking with a group of steel and alcohol experts to build up war production, the Japanese tightened their hold on the whole eastern coastal section of the country.

Object of the Japanese drive, which covered 750 miles in six months, was to eliminate the bases of the 14th American air force, whose planes had harried enemy ground forces, shot up communications and ranged a-sea to blast coastal shipping.

The shift in Chiang's government followed the row over giving Gen. Joe Stilwell command of Chinese forces to stimulate their prosecution of the war after it was hinted that the Generalissimo was using much of the army for the preservation of his own political party against the encroachment of the Communists.

Nelson's return to Chungking followed a previous visit during which studies were undertaken as to what kind of industrial development would fit into Allied aid to help the Chinese war effort.

SAVINGS:
Well Heeled

What with total savings estimated at $100,000,000,000, Americans should find themselves able to meet a short period of adversity in the postwar world.

Of the huge amount of savings, $36,883,000,000 are in war bonds, it was revealed. About 81,000,000 people, or 60 per cent of the population, held these securities in comparison with about 25 per cent in World War I.

Next to war bonds, bank and postal savings deposits constitute the largest source of savings at over $36,000,000,000. Of this amount, over $34,000,000,000 were in bank deposits held by about 33 per cent of the people.

Life insurance forms the third largest source of savings, what with 50 per cent of the people paying in over $33,000,000,000 on their policies, it was revealed.

COTTON EXPORTS

With cotton exports down to an average of 1,235,000 bales for the four crop seasons from 1941 to 1944, the trade looked to the recently invoked War Food administration export subsidy program for possible increased shipments.

Estimates as to the amount that might be sold under the WFA's new program varied, with the volume of shipments depending upon the availability of cargo space, it was agreed. Exports have been lowest since the Civil war.

Models Fashioned of Gold Link Living With Departed

To the Darien Indians in the highlands in the region of the Panama canal, gold means not wealth but everlasting contact with departed ancestors. Vast stores of gold, in the form of skeleton replicas, lie buried in the Indians' graves.

When a chief dies, his tribe makes a golden likeness which is buried with him. As a lasting contact with their loved one, each relative has a miniature copy of the skeleton, made of gold.

This he wears on all ceremonial occasions, suspended from a neck cord. When a man dies, the gold replicas of all of his previously deceased relatives are buried with him. The graves of the Indians are veritable gold mines, but death awaits the intruder who dares to despoil the burial places and carry away the precious carvings.

Rural Bond Sales Effective Step In Postwar Planning

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard today called on American farmers to invest all "extra" dollars in War Bonds during the Sixth War Loan beginning November 20 as an "effective step in postwar planning" for rural America.

Directing his appeal "To the Farm People of America," Secretary Wickard said, "the farm people of this country have an outstanding war record.

"It still takes a lot of money to finance the war, even though we are winning. The single task of supplying the Pacific theater is a tremendous undertaking. Add to that the equipment which was needed on the invasion coast of France, the supplies that are required now to knock down the walls of Hitler's Germany, and the total is staggering. So our job here at home is by no means over, just as the war on the fighting front isn't over. Our homefront responsibility is twofold: One is to stick to our job and do it well until total victory is won: the other is to buy War Bonds.

"The farm people of this country have an outstanding war record. They have achieved a production miracle in the face of wartime difficulties. Their bond-buying record is good, too, as indicated by the fact that farmers and their families purchased more than one and a quarter billion dollars' worth of bonds in 1943. This figures out at about 10 per cent of their net income.

"This Sixth War Loan campaign is the biggest yet for agriculture, but never before has agriculture had so many dollars that could be put into War Bonds. The record production of farmers, coupled with favorable commodity prices, has pushed their income up to an all-time high level. The investment of those extra, inflationary dollars in War Bonds would be the most effective step in postwar planning Rural America could take.

"Stake your share in the future—share your stake in the war."

LOOKING AHEAD
BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President-Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

An Objective View

Jokes about absent-minded professors leave me cold. I can't help but bristle a little when people poke fun at school teaching, the craft at which I have worked hard for 20 years. Persons outside the field who say teachers, as a class, are more lazy or less practical than other people, may, for all I care, go climb a tack. Such charges are not worthy of dispute.

It is quite another matter, however, when persons in places of honor or inside the field of education lay hold of false standards and set them up as essential principles. The allegation, for example, that a teacher ought never to have a fixed opinion is one that I resent. Can it be true that a man's ability to make up his mind proves him unsuited to teach others.

Collegiate Attitude

Few higher compliments can be paid a man than to say he has an open mind. It is a joy to meet people of perfectly clear mental vision, persons not blinded by prejudices, men and women who don't get warped and lop-sided views with new ideas. The right approach in thinking about anything is an honest wish to find facts, measure them and accept them for what they are worth.

On the other hand, refusing to accept a fact when you see it is worse than not seeing it. There are mental giants who are moral cowards, no doubt, but don't let anybody tell you it is necessary. Intellect and shilly-shally don't have to go hand-in-hand. Hostility to the truth marks a nit-wit, certainly, but indifference to the truth produces the same result—nothing.

A Blushing Matter

Recently I addressed an audience well salted with men of my own calling: teachers, school executives and men of degree in formal education. I talked about things I believe in, such as constitutional government, laws made by representatives of the people, free speech, unshackled faith, and open competition. After the meeting one of the educators told me I was not objective, did not have an open mind.

He was ashamed of me for having convictions. What a spectacle I was in his eyes, a college president with my mind made up! I spoke of representative, constitutional government as better than state socialism. I defended man's right to own property, to create and operate a business with a hope of profit, as better than government management of industry. "If we lose these principles," I said, "we will drift to lower standards, surely as water seeks its level."

We Need Fixity

Those are facts. Experts in political economy can prove them to any open-minded listener. Or a student can travel the Earth and see for himself as I did. Where does labor get the highest wages? Where does agriculture enjoy the highest living standards? It is in America, only in America. The reason is our economic system, not just our resources or our people. These facts need to be taught.

Europe's outcast philosophies, wrong as they are, make progress in America. Why? Because too many of our young men leave college believing they must have an objective attitude toward everything. They get no firmness of purpose at school. In my opinion it is high time educators got some fixed principles on vital matters like government, morals and religion.

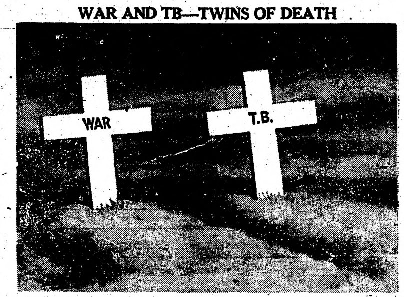
WAR AND TB—TWINS OF DEATH



War and tuberculosis go hand in hand. Wartime conditions, crowded housing, overwork, exposure to the disease, are the allies of this dread disease which since Pearl Harbor has killed 145,000 civilians in the United States.

For 40 years Christmas Seals have been fighting tuberculosis. The death rate has been cut 75 per cent since first health seals were sold. For the first time since 1936 Minnesota's death rate shows an increase. It is hoped the Christmas Seal sale now on will make possible a more intensive effort to prevent an uprise in the disease.

HOLT WEEKLY NEWS

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

H. O. Hanson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor
Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Dec. 15, 1944.
Volume 34, Number 33

Christmas In Early Days

In a neighborhood of hard-working pioneer farmers who were in the habit of reminding their children as Christmas approached "that it had been a bad year for Santa Claus' business; that they had heard that he was near stopping his business and closing out at auction," a community Christmas was an event to be long remembered. Such a celebration was staged near Silver Lake in Martin County in the early seventies, and it was remembered and recorded years later by one of the pioneer mothers who helped to make it a success, Mrs. Britania J. Livingston.

As most of the children had never seen a real Christmas tree, the country schoolmaster and several of the women arranged to have a community Christmas tree at the schoolhouse. "The weather was so bad—snowy and blustering," writes Mrs. Livingston, "that no committees could get their heads together for consultation; but during that week after school hours, the fine floury snow of Minnesota was melted off the trim overcoat of 'our teacher' beside nearly every hot stove in his school district," while he spread the news of the grand celebration. Mothers at once went to work making stockings of colored mosquito netting and filling them with candy and nuts, and popping corn for popcorn balls. Without means of communication with one another, several women made the same preparations, and as a result the tree was loaded with stockings and bushels of popcorn balls were piled up beneath it.

On Christmas Eve. "at early candle light the sleigh bells began to ring up their merry loads" and soon the schoolhouse was crowded to overflowing. Here the merrymakers found a "graceful red cedar well lighted with candles and well loaded with presents. as was also a table nearby, and the floor." In addition to the homemade stockings there were "mittens, leggings, neckties, slippers, dolls, drums, doll's clothing, books, pictures, and several pairs of small boots and hoods." The schoolroom was decorated with "green branches of the fragrant red cedar, and clusters of the pretty bitter sweet berries in lieu of the sacred holly."

Mrs. Livingston's story of this frontier Christmas is published as one of a series of articles on pioneer life in Martin County in the "Fairmont Daily Sentinel" for June 6, 1925, a file of which is preserved at the Minnesota Historical society.

Help The Drive--Buy Bonds

Marshall county's Sixth War Loan Drive went handily over the top this week with pledges tabulated Tuesday totaling $785,534.00 or $220,534 over the $565,000 quota, to establish a record sale for county bond buyers. O. M. Mattson, county chairman.

In completed sales, Marshall county has reached 110 per cent of its quota to rank in fifth place among Minnesota's 87 counties, while the total quota sales reached 107.5 per cent. Series E Bond sales are still lagging, with the percentage Monday reaching 84 per cent. These are official percentages, released by she State War Finance committee December 11.

Sales efforts in Marshall county will be concentrated on the sale of Series E bonds—the peoples bond, in an effort to surpass this quota too before the Sixth War Loan officially ends on December 16. There are sufficient pledges made within the county to easily surpass the E bond quota and it is believed that when these pledges are taken up the E quota will be easily reached.

A $100,000 purchase by an outside financier credited to the village of Middle River last week, contributed materially to Marshall county's record Bond sale. and enabled the Middle River district to easily oversubscribe its quota of $40,000. Subscriptions for the district now total $125,520.75.

The tabulated report follows:

HOLT DISTRICT

Agdar	6,000	5,400.00
East Valley	3,000	3,712.00
Excel	14,000	17,220.75
Holt Twp.	5,000	2,753.00
Holt Vil.	3,000	3,175.00
New Solum	7,000	3,450.00
District Total	$38,000	35,710.75

Oliver Backlund, student at University of Minnesota, spent a few days at his home here. He left Monday to enter the Armed Forces having enlisted in the U. S. Navy.

To the People of this Community

The best way to observe the defeat of Hitler is to buy an extra War Bond. In thousands upon thousands of American homes today there is pride and sadness. From these homes have come fighting men who died to bring us this far on the road to decisive victory over all our enemies. It will take more sweat, more tears, more toil, more and greater individual War Bond buying before we see Japan in the ruins these barbarians of the Pacific planned for us. How much more blood and tears depends on every individual American war worker and Bond buyer.

The Sixth War Loan symbol—a bomb hurling down on the Rising Sun—can only come to reality with your individual help. Buy at least an extra $100 War Bond above your normal payroll savings. That's the least you can do to back up your fighting men.

1945 Farm Census

Plans for the 1945 Census of Agriculture which will get under way in this county soon after the first of the year were begun with the appointment of a county advisory committee headed by County Agent F. W. Forbes. Members of the committee are: Erhard Anderson, Stephen; Gust Hillyer, Thief River Falls; Roy Wiseth, Goodridge; Roy Gast, Newfolden; Walter Malm, Argyle; and A. C. Knudsen, Warren.

As with other censuses, the enumerators will be selected by the Bureau of Census and trained by a supervisor assigned to this district. However, the local committee has been set up with a view to advising local enumerators on procedure and achieving as accurate a census as possible.

The committee will also discuss the significance of the census as it applies to Marshall county agriculture, and has been assigned the priviledge of selecting two items to be summarized for report locally.

An act of Congress provides that a census of agriculture be taken every 5 years, for the purpose of obtaining basic information on farm acreage, land values, crops, livestock, and the general items related to agriculture.

It is important that all farmers cooperate with the enumerators to the extent that the information is as accurate as possible. The census information is entirely confidential, and only sworn census employees will have access to the schedules.

The 1945 census, will no doubt be important not only to agriculture, but to the war effort in general where the overall picture of food and fiber production is very important at this time.

Any person interested in working as a census enumerator in the county should contact a member of the committee or the district census office, Detroit Lakes, Minnesota.

Mrs. Lillevold and son Gary will spend the winter at the home of her parents here.

Kranz Reelected Chairman

Charles N. Kranz, Strandquist farmer, was reelected chairman of the Marshall County Agricultural Conservation association committee at the annual election held at Warren Saturday Dec. 2. Other members of the county committee reelected include Andrew E. Strandquist, Argyle, vice chairman and Tom Howard, Warren. Emil Anderson of Rosewood was elected first alternate and Anton Enge of Oslo, second alternate. Names of members of the community committees elected Dec. 1st will be published later.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Demand for military tents has had a strong influence on the supply of cotton needed for the manufacture of tires and other rubber items.

Accurate tire inflation means more now than ever before. Too much pressure encourages impact breaks; too little causes excess flexing and heat—a heavy mileage waster.

A compliment to the technicians responsible for the development of synthetic rubber is the fact that tires and tubes required by the U. S. Ordnance Department are about 85 per cent converted to a substitute for natural rubber.

SPARs All-Out for V-Bonds

Every state in the Union with a SPAR on duty in Washington, D. C. was represented when the Sixth War Loan roll was called at U. S. coast guard headquarters. More than 85 per cent of the enlisted SPARs throughout the country bought bonds during the last war bond campaign, and hope to better this record during the Sixth Bond drive. In addition to individually signing up for bonds, these Spars have aided materially in the campaign in drives conducted in Washington as well as other cities where they are stationed.

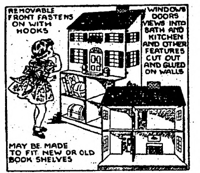
A Thrilling Surprise For This Christmas

DO YOU know a young housekeeper who would love to make a home for a family of dolls in this charming Colonial house? It is easy to make from scraps of plywood or from panels with slight flaws now available for civilian use. It is even possible to make the front, partitions and other special features to fit book shelves that you may have now.



REMOVABLE FRONT FASTENS ON WITH HOOKS
WINDOWS DOORS VIEWS INTO BATH AND KITCHEN AND OTHER FEATURES CUT OUT AND GLUED ON WALLS
MAY BE MADE TO FIT NEW OR OLD BOOK SHELVES

Another important feature of this house is that it fits into a 28½ inch space against the wall, where it won't be stumbled over. Yet it is light enough to be moved about. The convenient lower shelves are an aid in keeping any play spot orderly and, when doll days are over, the house also may be turned into shelves for books and trinkets.

NOTE—Pattern 273 gives illustrated directions and dimensions for making the combination doll house and shelves shown here; also actual-size outline drawings for the doors, windows, shutters, fireplace and views into up-to-date kitchen and bath. Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Jap Reinforcements Smashed; Yanks Weaken Nazi Strength; Iron Out Huge Highway Program

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Supported by tanks in the rear, U. S. infantrymen advance near Geilenkirchen inside Germany on western front.

PACIFIC:
Smash Reinforcements

Despite the fact that ground fighting on Leyte island stalled in bad weather, with November rainfall totaling 23½ inches, there was no lull in action in the Philippines.

As Jap General Yamashita tried to take advantage of the inclement weather to reinforce his beleaguered troops on Leyte, U. S. airmen rose to combat enemy transports ploughing through western Philippine waters to Ormoc. In one long assault on a convoy, U. S. aviators sank 10 enemy transports, sending 4,000 troops to the bottom, and bringing total Jap losses in reinforcement attempts to 26 ships with a tonnage of 92,750 and 21,000 men.

Meanwhile, B-29s continued their raids over the Tokyo industrial area, encountering moderate opposition. Infuriated by the bombings, chattering Japanese news commentators threatened that "albino apes" parachuting onto Japanese soil from distressed Superfortresses would be "killed on the spot by angry people."

Japs Gain

Pushed to the wall in the Philippines, the Japs had better luck in China, where Chiang Kai-shek's armies were hard put to it in an attempt to blunt an enemy drive aimed at cutting the Burma road to Chungking.

Thrusting westward from their north-south juncture at Liuchow, where they joined to seal off the whole eastern Chinese coast, Jap columns stood about 100 miles from the Burma road, key communications line linking much of the southern part of the country.

As the Japs pressed forward, they claimed 50,000 Chinese troops were falling back on the big highway bastion of Kweiyang, where a strong stand was expected to block any drive further northward toward Chungking, Kai-shek's headquarters.

HIGHWAYS:
Postwar Project

Following separate action by both houses, senators and representatives got together in the nation's capital to settle on a definite postwar federal highway program, the first major public works project planned for peacetime.

After the senate had approved of the expenditure of $450,000,000 annually for three years after the war for construction of rural, secondary and urban highways, the house passed a bill providing for $500,000,000 annually for three years.

Under both versions, states would have to contribute an equal amount of money for road projects, and sums would be distributed throughout the country on the basis of regional importance. Under the house bill, for instance, $775,000,000 would be allotted for rural highways, $450,000,000 for secondary roads and $375,000,000 for urban arteries.

WESTERN FRONT:
Battle of Attrition

To the Nazis being pressed back to the Rhine, the great battles raging along the western front were "the most ferocious in all history."

To doughboys of the U. S. Ninth, First, Third and Seventh armies, slogging forward in heavy gush, they were the hardest of the war, with desperate resistance encountered at every step.

With airplane activity limited by somber skies and rainfalls, the battle was being fought along the ground, with heavy U. S. field artillery and big, rumbling tanks pouring their deadly fire into enemy entrenchments to clear the way for the doughboys of the infantry.

Although General Patton's Third army about the Saar, and General Patch's Seventh army east of the Vosges, maintained heavy pressure on Nazi lines, the focal point of action centered on the Ninth and First army fronts between Julich and Duren.

East of the small, but strategic, Roer river, both of these towns are vital communications centers, with elaborate highways running in from the Rhineland to feed other roadways running to the north and south.

As the great battle of attrition—wearing down—rose in tempo, this highway network was vital to the Germans in rushing troops and materials to the endangered front, and then transferring them to the north and south.

Indicative of the great pressure General Eisenhower was exerting in this sector was the report that his opponent, foxy Field Marshal von Rundstedt, had transferred troops from the Dutch front to the Julich-Duren sector to cope with the Allied powerhouse.

No sooner had the report come through than it was announced that Canadian troops had taken the field on the Dutch front, increasing Allied pressure back in this sector, and giving the German high command no rest.

Slowed in their frontal assault on Budapest, Russian armies crossed the Danube to the south of the Hungarian capital to thrust one spearhead northward toward the embattled city and another westward toward the Austrian frontier, less than 100 miles away.

SEDITION TRIAL:
Death Ends It

With the death of 65-year-old Justice Edward C. Eicher of Iowa, the seven-month-long, and at times farcical, sedition trial of 26 defendants in Washington, D. C., came to an abrupt end, with small chance of resumption.

Although government counsel said the trial could go on if both the U. S. and defendants agreed to the selection of another judge, it was recalled that a federal court previously had ruled that justice required completion of a case by the same judge and jury and no substitutions could be made, even with consent. Thus, the government was faced with the alternative of starting new proceedings.

Even though the trial of the 26 defendants, accused of trying to undermine the morale of the U. S. armed forces and establish a Nazi form of government in this country, had already taken up seven months, government counsel revealed that at least six more months would be necessary to complete presentation of its evidence. With defendants' attorneys expected to consume an additional three to six months, the case promised to last about a year and a half.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

Meat: The largest production of beef and veal on record for any November was made at federally inspected meat packing plants last month, according to a review of the livestock and meat situation today by the American Meat institute. Total production of all meat last month was 1,539,000,000 pounds. This was 6 per cent more than that produced in October.

Fat Calf: Seven hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars in war bonds was the sale value of a pure bred Holstein bull calf at Omaha recently. A life insurance company in Omaha "bought" the calf for $380,000 in bonds and then they offered it for sale again with the Douglas County Dairy Breeders association paying $375,000 for the animal, which they will put in service.

If a small article has fallen into some hard-to-get-at place, use a wad of chewing gum stuck on the end of a long stick to get at it.

Do you have an old eye-glass case around that isn't in use? Employ it as a red and blue ration token holder.

An easy way to coat doughnuts with sugar is to place them in a paper sack with powdered sugar. Shaking the bag will do the rest.

A clean tea towel, pinned smoothly over my rolling pin, substitutes for a sleeve-board very satisfactorily. Both large and small sleeves can be ironed nicely and quickly on it.

Rural Bond Sales Effective Step In Postwar Planning

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard today called on American farmers to invest all "extra" dollars in War Bonds during the Sixth War Loan beginning November 20 as an "effective step in postwar planning" for rural America.

Directing his appeal "To the Farm People of America," Secretary Wickard said, "the farm people of this country have an outstanding war record.

"It still takes a lot of money to finance the war, even though we are winning. The single task of supplying the Pacific theater is a tremendous undertaking. Add to that the equipment which was needed on the invasion coast of France, the supplies that are required now to knock down the walls of Hitler's Germany, and the total is staggering. So our job here at home is by no means over, just as the war on the fighting front isn't over. Our homefront responsibility is twofold: One is to stick to our job and do it well until total victory is won; the other is to buy War Bonds.

"The farm people of this country have an outstanding war record. They have achieved a production miracle in the face of wartime difficulties. Their bond-buying record is good, too, as indicated by the fact that farmers and their families purchased more than one and a quarter billion dollars' worth of bonds in 1943. This figures out at about 10 per cent of their net income.

"This Sixth War Loan campaign is the biggest yet for agriculture, but never before has agriculture had so many dollars that could be put into War Bonds. The record production of farmers, coupled with favorable commodity prices, has pushed their income up to an all-time high level. The investment of those extra, inflationary dollars in War Bonds would be the most effective step in postwar planning Rural America could take.

"Stake your share in the future—share your stake in the war."

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Peterson and Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden visited at the H. O. Hanson home Friday evening.

Mrs. Inga Backlund and Mrs. C. L. Sandberg visited at the R. M. Nyhus home at Thief River Falls Thursday.

Social Justice

Against 130 million potential entries in a race the winner must be pretty good — excellent, in fact. That's why occasional winners in America's business competition have been so distinguished. Out of 130 million, they were best in their line. Nobody is barred from competition in America. Anybody can take part who feels fit and has the urge.

Enterprise has been free here since 1776. Education was free in some parts of the country even earlier than that. By keeping the doors to competition wide open; by equalizing, as far as possible, opportunities to qualify for the game, Uncle Sam has managed to discover his most competent people automatically and quickly. Besides, he keeps the sport attractive by rewarding winners quite lavishly sometimes.

Theorists Are Busy

Touting for government supervision of industry, government ownership of just about everything, has grown to epidemic size in the last year. With military victory near in the European war theatre, tantalizingly near, perhaps America's enemies think they must overthrow democracy by trickery if at all.

Critics of America's governmental and economic system always make a lot of noise about inequalities they observe in the rewards of competitive business. Their strategy is to point out abuses of Private Enterprise rather than its normal results. This serves to throw a better light on whatever novelty they may be recommending for use "After Democracy fails", — usually some embroidered version of Socialism.

The Best Ever

Practical and patriotic people never have claimed that America's competitive system was without defect. If it had been perfect there would have been no need for rules to regulate it. Yet, wherever competition has existed, in America or elsewhere, recently or long ago, it has been necessary to enact laws forbidding the strong, the shrewd, and the rich from taking advantage of the weak, the trusting, and the poor. A nation that deserves liberty is capable of restraint.

Laws do not make everything right. Some injustices occur in spite of law. With the Ten Commandments still imperfectly enforced we can't expect too much of the Sherman Law. Just the same, both are needed, and Private Enterprise, judged, faults-and-all, by results to humanity, is still the most successful economic system on record. On the other hand, all the fancy forms of Socialism proposed in America have been tried elsewhere and failed.

Proved in Service

Inventors, mechanical engineers, and fabricators of machinery have a handy language. They often suggest, concerning a new machine, "Put it in service and work the bugs out of it." They mean: find and correct its defects. Nothing is so useful in this regard as actual experience—a field test for a combine, a road test for a truck.

Private Enterprise is far advanced in this process. It has been used well by an intelligent watchful people, able to find defects and correct them. Beginning all over to "work the bugs out" of some new governmental system would be downright folly: It never has worked. Discarding a system (political or economic because of imperfections, after it has made America the world's leading nation, is like scrapping a speed boat that never lost a race and setting forth on a raft.

Happy Holidays Wish Of Patrol

Best wishes for a happy holiday season were extended to Minnesota motor vehicle owners and operators in a statement issued today by Eldon Rowe, chief of the State Highway Patrol. But it takes more than wishing to insure happy holidays, Mr. Rowe added. Careful driving is necessary. A moment of careless, may ruin your happiness at Christmas and all through the New Year.

Mr. Rowe's plea was prompted by the accident statistics of past holiday seasons. The accident rate starts going up a week before Christmas and continues through New Year's Day. December traffic fatalities in Minnesota in the last ten years total 505, a greater number than in some of the summer months with heavier traffic.

"First of all, don't mix drinking and driving," Mr. Rowe urged. "Driving when road surfaces are icy and slippery and when visibility is low, requires a clear head and constant alertness. Driving while under the influence of intoxicants is doubly hazardous at such times.

"Regulate your driving according to road conditions. In winter driving, there are many times when a speed much lower than the 35-mile wartime maximum is necessary. Watch out and slow down for slippery places. Go easy on the curves. Don't follow too close to the car ahead.

Don't drive unless your windshields and windows are clear so that you can see the road ahead as well as approaching traffic at intersections.

"Don't drive unless your car is in condition for winter driving with adequate anti-freeze, battery charged, defroster working and frost shields on windows. Carry chains and use them when it is slippery. Carry a shovel for emergency. On long trips carry extra clothing for use if necessary to stay in a stalled car or walk for help. Beware of carbon monoxide - - if you feel drowsy, get some fresh air.

O. T. Ness reports that quite a few fluff pickers are at work and that he has bought several tons of the new crop of cattails.

Superior Achievement Award

One of Minnesota's leading farmers, Grover C. George, Goodhue County, will receive the W. G. Skelly Award for Superior Achievement in Agriculture Saturday morning because of his outstanding record of leadership and good farm management.

His family of seven children also have one of the best 4-H Club records known. Four have graduated, two are active and one is too young for club work. Together they have spent 47 years in club work during which time every project started was finished. They have also won several local, regional and state prizes.

Mr. George is chairman of his county Triple A and machinery rationing committees, his county War Board, president of the county farm bureau and the Bellechester Co-operative Creamery, director of the county Electric Co-operative Association, township clerk and actiive 4-H leader. The award consists of a $100 War Bond, Scroll, pennant and gold lapel button, and is presented by W. G. Skelly, president of Skelly Oil Co.

Named Premier Seed Grower

Carl H. Erickson, Oslo, was selected as an outstanding seed grower for 1944 by a committee of Judges at University Farm, St. Paul. The selection was base primarily on the excellent pioneering work done with good seed which has been beneficial to his community and associates.

Mr. Erickson has been interested in pure seed, and new varieties for the past 25 years, and has been a member of the Minnesota Crop Improvement Association for many years. He was one of the few farmers who realized the value of Thatcher wheat bank in 1934-35. He has grown several varieties of crops, some of which have become well known varieties in the Northwest.

The Northwest Crop Improvement Association extends an invitation to Mr. Erickson to attend the Minnesota Farm and Home Week January 16-19 as their guest.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

WHAT two words on human tongue are more heart-warming than those! They not only represent a friendly greeting, but in them are summed up the whole spirit of the Yuletide—brightness and laughter, joy of living and joy of giving, health and happiness, peace on earth and good will to all men.

It is a greeting which we will hear often in this community of ours during these happy days of the Christmas season. We will hear it on our streets, in our stores, along our country roads and in our homes. For ours is a friendly community and nowhere is that friendly greeting more sincere. It is not possible, however, for each of us to say "Merry Christmas!" to everyone and thus complete the happy circle of Yuletide good cheer.

But there is one who has that rare privilege, one who has been a welcome visitor at the firesides of the homes in this community throughout the year and who now claims the right to be the first to wish you joy at this joyous time. That one is your Home Paper.

So your Home Paper carries from you to all the community and from all the community to you, this friendly greeting:

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

Deadline On Commodity Loans

The final date for making loans on wheat, barley and rye is December 31, 1944 and the final date for a flax loan is January 31, 1945.

The closing date for making loans on the 1944 crop of hay and pasture seed is extended trhough January 31, 1945, provided the producer has filed a signed application for the loan prior to Jannary 1, 1945.

Farmers should realize the importance of loaning on eligible grain before the deadline date, as after that date there is no way of protecting your grain that has not been loaned on, in case of a drop in the market.

Furthermore, remember the additional payment due on wheat at the maturity date of the loan when the wheat is delivered in settlement of the loan. This additional payment on farm stored wheat will amount to approximately eighteen cents per bushel over and above the loan rate plus the percent of storage which is advanced at the time of the loan.

On warehouse stored grain, the additional payment will be approximately eight cents per bushel over the regular loan rate depending on the length of time the wheat is in storage.

Science Searches for Cure

Scientists hope some day to discover a drug that will cure tuberculosis. Christmas Seals provide funds for Prof. Rudolph J. Anderson (above) of the Sterling Chemistry Laboratory, Yale University, to study the chemistry of the tuberculosis germ. This is one phase of medical research financed by the sale of Seals.

County Makes Bond Quota

Sixth War Loan bond pledges continued to mount up in Marshall county during the past week with pledges tabulated Tuesday reaching $822,538.75 or $257,598.65 more than the county's assigned quota of $555,000 O. M. Mattson, county chairman announced today.

While pledges have reached 145 per cent of the county's over-all quota actual sales cleared through the Federal Reserve Bank in Minneapolis through Saturday reached only 124 per cent, indicating a considerable quantity of unredeemed pledges still held by county residents.

County War Finance officials are urging all persons making pledges and who have not redeemed them, to make their purchases of bonds at once, as all bond purchases cleared through the Federal Reserve Bank this month will count in the Sixth War Loan. War bonds make ideal Christmas gifts.

Marshall county was the second county in Minnesota to reach and surpass its quota.

When the history of this war is written it can never be said that Marshall County has laid down on the job infofar as war financing is concerned.

The tabulated report follows:

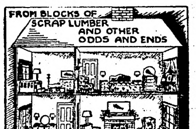
Making Doll House Furniture Is Fun

HERE is miniature furniture all carefully scaled to reproduce actual size pieces. Any little girl will love the sturdy five-inch-long upholstered sofa and the lounge chair with matching ottoman. They are easy to make, too, and so is the chair. It is covered with a flower print such as little girls' dresses are made of, but it looks like a large scale chintz on a chair only four inches high.



FROM BLOCKS OF SCRAP LUMBER AND OTHER ODDS AND ENDS

The dining room furniture is all made of straight blocks but the chairs are smartly upholstered in bright oilcloth to simulate leather. The bed with upholstered head piece is especially glamorous and the dainty dressing table has a matching stool made of half of a spool with padded top and full skirt. The nursery is also well furnished with attractive pieces made from things you have on hand.

NOTE—Pattern 274 gives actual-size patterns or dimensions for all the pieces of this furniture with illustrated directions for making. Patterns and directions are also given for the lamps and other accessories. Pattern 273 gives all directions for making the doll house. Patterns are 15 cents each. Send direct to:

Early Camouflage

Camouflage is not a modern war weapon. Shakespeare, in Scene IV, Act V, of "Macbeth," writes: "Let every soldier hew him down a bough, and bear't before him; thereby shalt we shadow the numbers of our host and make discovery err in report of us."

When Your Back Hurts -

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Chinese, forced below the surface of the earth by the incessant bombing raids of Japanese airmen, are working firelessly to produce the munitions of war so sorely needed by their armies in the field. Candidate Charged Public To Hear Campaign Talks

Following his announcement that he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in the 1872 election, George Francis Train made over 1,000 speeches; yet his name was not mentioned at the convention, says Collier's.

However, his disappointment was assuaged by the $90,000 that he had made by charging admission to his campaign addresses, the only time such a scheme ever succeeded in this country.

Civil Strife Rages in Greece; Set Vise for Japs on Leyte; Quake Shakes Tokyo District

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

As train lies at bottom of Moselle river after plunging through wrecked bridge, French youth scramble over debris to salvage food from cars.

EUROPE:

Civil Strife

Added to the Allied military burden in Europe was the political problem posed by Leftist rebellion in Greece.

Started when Leftist liberation guerrilla forces refused to surrender their arms on the ground that Premier Papandreou's Rightist elements were allowed to retain theirs, the uprising brought British troops into action to restore order.

Situated just north of the Suez canal, Greece commands this vital waterway route linking Britian's eastern empire with its homeland; and for this reason, London has taken the greatest interest in conditions there.

To assure its position about Suez, the British have backed Papandreou's Rightist elements as against the Leftists, including Communists. In calling British troops into action to suppress the rampaging Leftist elements, British Maj. Gen. R. M. Scobie declared: ". . . I stand firmly behind the constitutional government and shall aid them to the limit of my resources until the Greek state can be reestablished with lawful armed forces behind it. . . ."

Nazi Strategy

In heavy fighting on both European fronts, the Allies continued to punch forward, with the U. S. 3rd army taking the spotlight away from the 1st and 9th in the west in its drive into the vital coal-laden Saar basin.

As a result of General Patton's smash into the Saar, the great industrial city of Saarbrucken was brought under the muzzle of heavy U. S. artillery fire, with many parts aflame.

The 3rd army claimed the limelight as the 1st and 9th U. S. armies slackened their heavy pressure east of Aachen, where the German high command, under Field Marshall von Rundstedt, had concentrated its major strength to combat General Eisenhower's great drive, which carried within 22 miles of the Rhine.

Big question in the mind of Allied strategists was how long could the Nazi high command continue to manipulate its forces to ward off a decisive break-through at any one spot. Although the enemy was said to have about 6,000,000 men afield in both the east and west, only about 1,250,000 were said to be crack troops.

That the enemy has few troops to spare is evidenced by his tactics in the Balkans, where the retreat toward the Austrian border promises to draw up all of his troops presently strung out along the Hungarian and Yugoslav border. In addition, reports from Italy indicated a German retirement in that country.

As the Nazis reformed their lines in Hungary, flying Red columns advanced to within 13 miles south of Budapest, where civilians were put to work digging entrenchments for a last ditch stand.

MEAT INCOME

The income from meat animals will reach an all-time record this year, approximating one-third of the total farm income, or more than 6½ billion dollars, George M. Lewis, director of marketing of the American Meat institute, predicted.

Tracing the trends of livestock production for 1945, Lewis said the United States department of agriculture estimates the marketings of cattle and calves will be about 35 million head, or 1 million more than this year, the highest on record

PACIFIC:

Fasten Vise

Striking again with characteristic suddenness, Gen. Douglas MacArthur moved the 77th division ashore below Ormoc under the heavy protective cover of U. S. naval guns, cutting the Japanese defenders on the northwestern shore of Leyte in half.

The general's move came after bad weather, coupled with stiff enemy resistance from strong hill entrenchments, bogged the American drive on Ormoc from the north and south. As the 77th secured its beachhead below Ormoc, the huge LSTs dumped supplies ashore, the general was able to apply both frontal and rearward pressure on Japanese troops operating in the sector.

Prior to the American landing below Ormoc, U. S. artillery opened a heavy bombardment on enemy positions to the north and south, drawing strong Jap reinforcements to both areas to counter infantry movement. Then, as their withdrawals weakened their positions about Ormoc, MacArthur struck.

Even as the 77th was hitting the beaches below Ormoc, U. S. fliers wiped out a Japanese convoy, bearing 4,000 troops, which was headed for Leyte.

EARTHQUAKE:

Rocks Japan

Centering in the Sea of Enshu, 100 miles southeast of Tokyo, an earthquake, so powerful that its tremors threw a recording machine in London out of gear, struck Japan, causing serious loss.

Without immediately revealing the exact extent of damage, the Japanese reported that the tremors caused landslides, caving-in houses and streets along a 150-mile belt across the main island of Honshu. Huge tidal waves rolling in from the Sea of Enshu flooded coastal districts below Tokyo, deluging homes.

Although the Japanese claimed that the quake did not damage their war industry centered around the Tokyo district, they remained silent about the effect that the mounting tidal wave had upon their all-important shipping, a-sea and at port.

HELP WANTED:

Seek Arms Speed-Up

Once deeply concerned with reconversion, government officials have once again swung their principal attention back to war production, what with munitions shortages on the battlefronts threatening development of mounting Allied attacks.

With 300,000 workers needed in munitions plants, labor became the No. 1 consideration of officials, with War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt calling for intensive recruiting of women; transfer of employees within a plant to more essential jobs; channelling of workers to more important industries; discouragement of labor turnover, and suspension of manpower authorizations for civilian production.

Of the 300,000 people needed, McNutt said, 130,000 were for heavy and small arms munitions. Industries requiring the remainder include air-borne radar; assault, transport and cargo ships; tank materials; cotton duck for tenting; heavy artillery, trucks and tires, and B-29 Superfortresses.

Better Bossies

A study of artificial breeding just completed by New Jersey State college of agriculture gives conclusive evidence that the science has progressed to the point where it can be adopted on a nation-wide scale, Dr. J. W. Bartlett said.

The study just completed in New Jersey shows that 120 "artificial" cows, bred from outstanding bulls, produced 9.3 more milk and 14 per cent more butterfat.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Former Rubber Director Dewey expressed the opinion that the inevitable industrialization of South American and Asiatic countries following the war will mean a world demand for rubber far beyond the capacity of the plantations that existed before the war—an opinion that should encourage the protection of our synthetic plants.
The super-bomber B-29 carries about 5,000 pounds of rubber. Close to two tons are required to make its 30 bullet-sealing fuel tanks alone. There are more than 200 rubber items in this giant fortress of the air.

Intricate, Costly Watches Are Made for Collectors

Several modern watches made for collectors have required as long as eight years to design and manufacture, and have cost as much as $15,000, says Collier's.

Besides a dozen time and calendar dials, they contain such meteorological instruments as a thermometer, hygrometer, barometer and altimeter, and such celestial charts as the one that shows the positions of the visible constellations at every hour.

To Stop Waste

Ordinarily people think about taxes as having one purpose: namely, raising money to meet government expenses. But the day has come when getting revenue is only one of the purposes of taxation, not necessarily the main one. A chief reason for collecting taxes these days is to defeat inflation. Inflation is a sharp rise in prices resulting from spending power that people have over and above the available supply of things to buy.

If America's only aim in taxation were paying for the war, we would have to admit failure, for Uncle Sam is borrowing 60 per cent of the war's cost each year, raising only 40 per cent in taxes. All serious students of government money matters admit that current taxation is, in large part, to cut down Mr. Consumer's big, war time spending power so he won't be bringing greater inflation upon himself by paying outrageous prices for the few things left to buy.

Control Spending

Any time the majority of a nation's people serenely bid higher and higher prices to satisfy their wants just because they have more money than they are used to, that's when inflation is out of control. Such trends have to be stopped before they gain momentum, and there are two ways to do it: (1) persuade people to save and (2) tax their spending money away from them. The plan our government has been using is a combination of both, and it's not all that might be desired.

The savings idea has worked better, taking the form of war-bond sales. Bonds have been sold but entirely too many have been bought by banks; too few by private investors. The taxation feature of America's fight on inflation has been hardly more than half effective. Office-holders with elections in mind are usually very slow to put taxes where they belong.

Double Dealing

Probably you have heard it said that the only good place for a carbuncle is on somebody else. The same rule seems to apply to taxes in the United States. No office seeker ever boosts a tax bill that hits a majority directly. He tries to make every tax look like it's on somebody else. Of course taxes finally settle on the majority every time, but the principal ones are disguised so the voter is not aware that they are taxes.

The orthodox method of setting up revenue plans in the United States has been to fasten as much direct tax as possible on minority groups and hit the heavy voting elements as lightly as possible. By this system a great many taxes have been devised that help not one bit in the fight against inflation. Taxes levied against corporaton incomes provide an example. Such taxes raise money (truly) but they don't touch inflation.

And Here Is Why:

Not since Pearl Harbor have corporations been allowed to compete with each other in buying goods. They are controlled by priorities, which amount to 100 per cent rationing. Thus controlled, corporations can do exactly nothing to create runaway prices. All they can do with net profit, if any, is pay it out in dividends to stockholders or save it against that post-war "rainy day" by buying war bonds.

One of America's financial problems is to slow down the circulation of over-active money; money that's being wasted because it is not buying nearly what it's worth. Saving, especially by buying war bonds, will do the trick because saving retards spending, but not enough people really want to save. A sales tax would stop much foolish spending and make people save, but it would be a departure from our traditional hidden methods of taxation.

Highway Patrol Is Kept Busy

Excess speed, faulty equipment, driving without a driver's license, going through stop signs and careless driving, were the principal causes of arrest and tickets handed out by Minnesota Highway Patrolmen in November, according to the report of Elden Rowe, chief patrol officer. Nearly all activities showed increases over the same month in 1943.

Exceeding the wartime speed limits brought arrests to 464 motorists in November and warning tickets to 334 less serious violators. Warning tickets involve no penalty but they are entered on the drivers' license records and repeated offenses may lead to arrest or suspension of driver's license.

Illegal equipment resulted in 95 arrests and 1,658 tickets requiring repairs to be made before a stated date. Three-fourths of the tickets were for faulty lighting equipment. In November, 1943, illegal equipment resulted in 79 arrests and 1,166 tickets, indicating the general deterioration in motor vehicles.

Failure to have a driver's license resulted in 51 arrests and failure to have license in possession brought 324 warning tickets. In November, 1943, there were 23 arrests and 151 warning tickets issued for lack of driver's license.

Going through the stop signs brought 96 arrests and 93 warning tickets. Careless driving resulted in 139 arrests. No warning tickets are given for this offense.

Arrests for all causes numbered 999, compared to 1,147 in the preceding month and 741 in November, 1943. Fines imposed totaled $14,336, compared to $14,408 the preceding month and $10,205 in November, 1943.

First Karakul Sheep In County

A shipment of ten Karakul ewes, the first to come into Marshall county, was received by O. C. Kruger, Alma township farmes, last Thursday. Mr. Kruger purchased the bred ewes from a Montana breeder. The Karakul sheep are important chiefly because they produce lambskins suitable for fur. The lambs are killed at birth and skinned, with the fur bringing a very lucrative price on the fur market.

The ewes purchased by Mr. Kruger are all registered. The breed originated in Bokhara, in west central Asia, and only importations have been made to this country from their native country. The importations were made in 1909, 1913 and 1914. Further direct importations have been prohibited by law in order to prevent the introduction into the United States of animal diseases prevalent in Asia. The progress of the Kruger flock will be watched with interest in this section.—Warren Sheaf.

Rail Quiz

What was the origin of the cowcatcher?

This strictly American feature was the invention of Isaac Dripps, a young mechanical engineer employed by the Camden & Amboy Railroad in New Jersey (now a part of the Pennsylvania Railroad) in the early 1830s. So many cows trespassed upon the railroad that Dripps decided to install on the front end of the locomotive a small truck supporting two iron spears. The Dripps device was effective, but it was fatal to the cows. To avoid damage suits, he substituted a cross-wise bar much like the present-day bumper on an automobile, and from this evolved the present V-shaped cowcatcher.

Blended Colors in Knitted Rag Rug

IF YOU want to make a really effective rug from odds and ends of fabric—and do it quickly, this knitted rug is the answer. You cut or tear the material in strips about three-quarters of an inch wide, turn in the raw edges and then knit straight strips with needles three-eighths inch in diameter. These are sewn around a center oval.

The colors are important of course and it is essential that the knitted strips be eased in with evenly distributed fullness. The trick is in pinning them in place first as shown in the diagram.

NOTE—This rug is from BOOK 4 which also gives the complete knitting directions for the center oval and the strips. Directions for more than 32 things to make for your homes and for gifts and bazaars are included in this book. Copies are 15 cents each. Send your order to:

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Commercial motor vehicles in the U. S., based on gasoline allotments, are expected to run 55 billion miles a year. Reduced to truck tire wear, that represents a tremendous number of tires.

The rubber used in gas masks is now 100 per cent synthetic.

Never use a tube in a tire larger, or smaller, than that for which it was designed by the manufacturer. Premature failure will result if you do. To return full mileage, synthetic tubes must be lubricated with vegetable oil soap solution when mounted on rims.

Nazis Gird for Counter-Blow; B-29s Rip Japs' Home Industry; Approve Huge Waterway Bill

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Converted into fortress by Germans, the town of Langerwehe was reduced to rubble by Allies in advance into Reich.

EUROPE:

Nazi Hopes

Fighting now with its back to the wall, a desperate Germany is drawing up its dwindling strength for one great counter-blow next year in the hope of yet winning the war, according to advices from London.

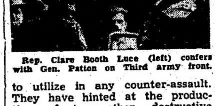
The reports came through even as the enemy struggled to retard U. S. armies' steady advances on the Ruhr, Rhineland and Saar, and the Russian march on the Austrian gateway.

In Hungary, the Nazis retreated to mountainous terrain both in the north and south, in an effort to slow up the Russians' steady advance upon Austria, 100 miles distant.

In reputedly preparing for a counter-offensive, the badly mauled but fanatical enemy apparently was placing his hopes in a still strong army, whose forces have been carefully husbanded; in new weapons, and in short supply lines.

With 4,000,000 Germans in the field in both the east and west, the Nazis have been fighting a defensive war from strongly fortified positions in recent months in the hope of inflicting maximum losses on the Allies and keeping their own casualties to a minimum. Because of the employment of many foreign workers inside the Reich, they have been able to draw heavily on their own manpower.

Now being used against Allied troops in the west, the V-1 buzz bomb and V-2 rocket are two of the new weapons the Nazis intend to utilize in any counter-assault. They have hinted at the production of two other destructive weapons, but the only other one that Allied authorities have knowledge of is a submarine with new devices for underwater breathing, which they intend to unleash against shipping.



Rep. Clare Booth Luce (left) confers with Gen. Patton on Third army front.

Finally, the enemy hopes that his short supply lines in contrast to our longer ones will enable him to feed his armies with much greater rapidity, but here concerted Allied bombings can be expected to play havoc with his land routes.

Whatever the German plans, Allied armies were giving the enemy no chance to dream, as they maintained their terrific pressure both in the west and east.

New Political Crisis

To the complicated European political scene was added another disturbing incident in the Russian sponsored Polish National council's announcement that the new year would see the formation of a provisional Polish government independent of the U. S. - British backed Polish exile regime in London.

Declaring that it would be the new provisional government's concern to break up large estates for the distribution of land to 8,000,000 propertyless tenants, a National Council spokesman assailed the present exiled regime as being representative of the powerful nobility bucking Soviet influence in Poland because of a fear of reform in ownership.

In Greece, the British moved to patch up differences between radical and rightist elements and restore order in that country fronting Britain's Mediterranean lifeline.

PACIFIC:

Fear B-29s

Aimed at knocking out the great industrial centers of the Japanese homeland, supplying enemy forces on far-flung Asiatic fronts, superfortress air raids were stepped up, with one force of over 100 B-29s setting fire to the Mitsibushi twin-engine bomber and fighter plant at Nagoya below Tokyo.

As a result of the growing B-29 attacks, Japanese officials, who once described the assaults as attempts to lower enemy morale, took a more serious attitude toward the bombings, claiming that their steady extension presaged wide damage, necessitating the evacuation of civilians from danger areas.

As the giant superfortresses winged their way over the heart of Japan's loosely knit Asiatic empire, U. S. forces in the Philippines moved steadily ahead in reducing that great stronghold protecting the enemy's supply lines to the Indies. On Leyte, the Japs were faced with slow strangulation as General MacArthur's forces continued to compress them in the northwestern corner of the island, with their lines under attack from the north, east and south.

WATERWAYS:

Huge Program

Large-scale development of U. S. waterway resources was authorized by congress in a $1,000,000,000 flood control bill, while conferees from both houses met to iron out differences for approval of expenditures of an additional $500,000,000 in projects.

Part of the country's job creating program when peace comes, the two bills provide for flood control, navigation, reclamation and hydro - electric power, with the $1,000,000,000 measure calling for an initial appropriation of $400,000,000 for the development of the Missouri river valley by army engineers and the bureau of reclamation.

In acting on the bills, the senate rejected the effort of Senator Aiken (Vt.) to push through the $421,000,000 St. Lawrence seaway and power project as an executive agreement requiring a majority vote rather than as a treaty calling for a two-thirds margin.

EGGS:

WFA Program

With demands of the services and the Allies expected to account for approximately 28,500,000 cases, there will be little surplus of eggs in 1945, Lieut. Col. R. W. Olmstead, deputy director of supply for the War Food administration, told a trade meeting in Chicago.

Colonel Olmstead spoke after the WFA announced that beginning January 1 it would support prices at 27 cents a dozen for producers of candled eggs and 24 cents a dozen for current receipts to represent 90 per cent of parity as required by law.

About 25,000,000 cases will be needed for the processing of 365,000,000 pounds of dried eggs for the services, Russia, Britain, Belgium, Holland and France, Colonel Olmstead said, and, in addition, Britain is expected to take approximately 1,500,000 cases of shell eggs. What surplus remains may be disposed of through school lunch programs, institutions or for tankage.

In revealing that WFA has reduced its 1944 holdings to 150,000 cases of shell eggs, Colonel Olmstead said that no stocks would be dumped on the market in 1945, with prices tending to reflect production costs which are expected to remain high through the year.

V-Girl's Day Belongs to Uncle Sam

Three jobs, 101 hours a week, seven days and nights a week—and 85 per cent of her earnings going into war bonds!

That leaves comely Genevieve Delcioppo of Syracuse, N. Y., 27-year-old wife of a tank driver in Italy, 6½ hours a day for sleeping—and time to do her own housework, which includes washing, ironing and cooking.

In addition, this V-girl finds time to donate blood.

From 7:30 a. m. to 3:30 p. m., six days a week, Genevieve has been operating three machines and a "sander."

From 4:30 p. m. until 10:30 p. m., Monday through Friday, she has been frosting cakes and acting as shipping clerk for Syracuse's Mohican bakery. Saturday nights and Sundays, she works as a counter waitress at McCarthy's Seafood restaurant. She took that job last June.

WORK ORDER:

New Draft Rule

With 300,000 workers needed for critical war industries, the nation's draft boards checked through their files to offer those in the 26 to 37 age group not presently engaged in essential production the alternative of "working or fighting."

Reversing a previous Selective Service policy of granting liberal deferments for the group over 30, local boards are expected to adopt a more stringent attitude toward considering the essentiality of a registrant's employment, it was thought. Registrants who left deferable positions for less important work will face a return to their old or similar position or induction.

While the latest crackdown principally was prompted by the move to provide manpower for essential industry, Selective Service Director Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey declared that increased military activity called for a greater amount of replacements, with the result that a 10 to 20 per cent increase in inductions could be expected in the next few months.

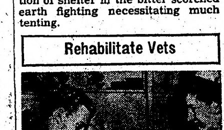
Output Lags

Although production of critical war material rose 6 per cent in October over the previous month, a greater increase for the remainder of the year is necessary to assure required deliveries to the services, the War Production board reported.

In reviewing October production, the WPB said the following programs were below schedule: aircraft, 3 per cent; ships, 1 per cent; guns and fire control, 4 per cent; ammunition, 2 per cent; combat and motor vehicles, 5 per cent; communications, 6 per cent; and other equipment and supplies, 1 per cent.

Particularly critical, it was reported, are the tire and cotton duck production programs, what with 500,000 vehicles in operation on the western front alone, and the Nazi destruction of shelter in the bitter scorched earth fighting necessitating much tenting.

Rehabilitate Vets



Adjustment to new conditions through practice, known as occupational therapy, is one of the means being used to rehabilitate disabled U. S. war vets.

At the Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D. C., Pfc. William L. Harris develops dexterity in the movement of artificial right arm by playing checkers with counters of different sizes, with Occupational Therapist Susan Pohland.

SMOKES:

Plan Allocations

As long as manpower shortages will persist and wartime conditions will make extension of facilities difficult, manufacturers will not be able to increase their already record production of cigarettes, the trade told a congressional committee.

Meanwhile, tobacco distributors announced plans for the adoption of nationwide rationing of supplies among retailers to assure equitable stocks for all smokers, with efforts made to readjust deliveries to shifting populations.

Speaking at the congressional hearing, Col. Fred C. Foy said that the army will have procured 68,000,000,000 cigarettes by the end of 1944, but movements of the smokes to the front line areas were impeded by limited facilities for unloading and the need for rushing more vital materials like food and gasoline to the combat zones.

AGRICULTURE:

Boost Ceilings

In a move designed to reflect parity to producers, the OPA hiked ceilings on cash wheat 4 cents, and at the same time raised the top on all hogs except sows, stags and boars to $14.75.

In announcing the ceiling boost on wheat, OPA revealed that the increase affects all levels of distribution, but could not disturb the cost of bread. The present subsidy of 19 cents a bushel to flour producers will stick until the first of the year, OPA said, when new rates will be established.

With official admission that the boost in the hog ceiling to $14.75 was effected to increase feeding of corn, the market for that grain spurted, although heavy country offerings tempered activity. At Chicago, hog prices were especially strong, partly because inclement weather kept large supplies on farms.

MISCELLANY

A recent survey shows that 18½ million Victory gardens were grown this year.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

FOUR STARS FOR CLARK

The name of the seventh full general of the war will soon be sent to the senate for confirmation—Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark, commander of Allied forces in Italy.

Clark has been considered the hard-luck general—through no fault of his own. The public doesn't realize it, but Clark has trained division after division in Italy, only to have them transferred to other more pressing war theaters. Many of his former troops bore the brunt of the landing in Normandy. He also trained most of the men who landed along the French coast near Cannes and Marseilles.

It is no longer a military secret that Clark and his U. S. troops are now bearing the brunt of the Italian war. The British have largely pulled out of Italy for the Balkans. Clark has a few Poles, Brazilians and some Indian troops, but the main fighting is being done by Americans.

The full generals now on active duty in the U. S. army are Generals Marshall, Eisenhower, MacArthur, Stilwell, Arnold and Malin Craig. The latter, having been retired after serving as chief of staff, was recalled to active duty in the war department, where he heads a personnel board.

In addition, two other full generals are on the retired list, John J. Pershing and Peyton C. March, the latter chief of staff in the last war—both, incidentally, bitter personal enemies.

With Clark, this will make a total of seven full generals on active duty, plus two retired full generals.

It is interesting to note that, prior to 1930, there had been only six other full generals in all the history of the United States. George Washington, for instance, never became a full general, even though congress made it possible for him to do so. Other full generals have been Ulysses S. Grant, William T. Sherman, Philip H. Sheridan, all of the Civil war armies, plus World war leaders Tasker H. Bliss, Charles P. Summerall and John L. Hines.

NOTE — Considerable debate has been going on in top military circles over what assignment Gen. "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell should get when he finishes his California vacation. It was planned to put Stilwell in command of a specially trained army to land on the China coast. However, some propose keeping him in the war department to replace Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear as commander of ground forces.

* * *

STALIN AND DE GAULLE

It can now be revealed that one of the foremost questions on the agenda of the Stalin, de Gaulle conferences in Moscow was the vital problem of "what to do with Germany after the war." Both Stalin and de Gaulle are for a hard peace, want to see Germany's war-making powers destroyed completely.

One significant proposal taken to Moscow by de Gaulle calls for the use of German industry after the war for the rehabilitation of all wrecked French and Russian factories, railroads, shipping. Also he proposes using German mines to replenish Soviet and French stocks of raw materials depleted by war. On this Stalin was in complete agreement.

NOTE — Stalin strengthened Russian influence in France by his invitation to de Gaulle. French diplomats believe there is now less chance of Britain forming a Western bloc in Europe composed of Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Norway and Denmark—a bloc which the Kremlin looks upon with suspicion.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

¶ When announcement was made in the senate that President Roosevelt had nominated world-renowned poet and Librarian of Congress Archibald MacLeish to be assistant secretary of state, one wit cracked: "From now on, all treaties negotiated by the state department will be written in iambic pentameter."

¶ Winter difficulties in shipping supplies to Russia through the Arctic sea, combined with the establishment of Allied control of the entire Mediterranean area, are resulting in Allied pressure upon Turkey to open the Dardanelles. This would permit shipment of supplies to Russia's Black Sea ports, and mean the saving of thousands of miles of water and overland travel from the Persian gulf up through Iran and Southern Russia.

¶ When Larry Fly resigned from the FCC and moved to New York, he took up residence at the Lombardy apartments. A neighbor in the building is Wall Street lawyer Eugene L. Garey, who master-minded the smear-Fly campaign of Congressman Cox's house committee which investigated the FCC not long ago.

¶ At the Court of St. James, U. S. ambassadors usually bow to British custom and wear knee breeches, though Ambassador Charley Dawes rebelled, and wore ordinary long pants.

Household Hints

A steam bath will usually bring velvet back to its original texture.

Use a large oiled silk bowl cover for an emergency shower cap.

Baking soda is one of the best-known agents for cleaning glassware.

Glue a bright piece of linoleum over the old worn top of a card table.

It is easier to wash a large amount of slightly soiled clothes than a few very dirty ones.

When washing walls, start at the bottom, instead of at the top; then if you spill any of the cleaning fluid on the wall it will not spot, as otherwise.

When boiling cauliflower, place in a kettle with head downward. Scum rising to the top of kettle will not then settle on flowers and discolor them.

Clean your brick hearth by first scrubbing with a stiff brush and hot soapy water. Rinse clean and wipe dry. Let stand a day and then coat with boiled linseed oil.

When shaking a small throw rug, hold by the sides. If held by the ends, the weight of the rug pulls the threads apart.

If heavy furniture must be moved and there is no second person to help, this is a satisfactory way to do it. There is little lifting, and there will be no scratches on the floor. Lift furniture onto an old rag rug or sack. Then pull it over to where you want it to be.

To Relieve Bad Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

Big Saving. No Cooking. So Easy.

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle. Add your syrup and you have a full pint of medicine that will amaze you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you've never seen anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Homes and Taxes

Prophets of business trends for several years before Pearl Harbor were predicting a building boom to be in progress about now. They reasoned that one-fourth of America's population, an unusually large share, would reach an age to be married between 1940 and 1946. It seemed reasonable enough to guess that a lively demand for new homes would develop quite naturally.

World War No. 2 gave this forecast a setback but did not change the facts much. A record-breaking number of new families are being started now without new houses and the looked-for building boom is growing while it waits. "When war ends and restrictions are removed from lumber and hardware," the experts say, "look out for a big, hurry-up demand for places to live."

Build Good Homes

A home is a valuable thing, worth owning; every new one brings lasting benefit to a community if the house is worth what it costs. But houses that are not of sound construction are public liabilities. The owner of a good house in a good community pays taxes on his property willingly but an abandoned house yields no taxes and lowers the value of every other house for blocks around.

Most residences are built before they are sold and are bought with borrowed capital, the money lender holding a mortgage. There was a time when a mortgage was ample protection because land gained value faster than houses lost it, but not lately. Houses cost five to ten times as much as lots and, back in 1930, the government began insuring mortgages to keep business active.

Costs You and Me

The depression-born idea still lives. The banker carries the house-buyer and the national treasury carries the banker, but who carries the Treasury? Answer: The taxpayer! If Mr. Buyer's new house is a "jerry" he abandons it. The banker takes it over and the Treasury pays off but the payer of federal taxes is stuck. He has a financial interest in every government-financed house.

Local taxes are involved even more. Building helps a town, indeed. Each new home in a good subdivision means a new man to help pay the cost of running the city, "broadens the tax base." But vacant houses pay no taxes. They only raise the rates on other, older homes in more substantial parts of town. Such leaks of revenue ought to stop. With every economy, taxes will be higher after this war than ever before.

Everybody's Business

Building booms affect everybody. Business improves when they start, prospers while they last and goes into a lull when they stop. But a boom can be a counterfeit. Loans ought to be easy on well-built houses and impossible on poor ones. When government underwrites a shoddy shack it amounts to making taxpayers guarantee a sweet profit to any dishonest builder who can fool a banker. It has been done.

At a very small additional cost any honorable builder can give assurance of a quality structure to his customers, to their bankers and to the Treasury, with a certificate of structural rating. Organizations of established real estate brokers have power to enforce standards of home construction as high as any community demands. Workable machinery exists already, at the command of civic leaders and taxing officials.

An Inclusive List

Five groups of people hope all postwar home building will be good building: (1) Homemakers who want their money's worth; (2) Bankers, interested in good collateral; (3) Citizens who favor a broad tax base to support good local government; (4) All who pay federal taxes and want the money used wisely; and (5) Realtors who suffer the headaches of ramshackle residences.

NEBRASKA DEFEATS DRYS

On November 7th the voters of Nebraska went to the polls and overwhelmingly defeated (3 to 1) an amendment on the State ballot that called for State prohibition. The press of the country said.

St. Louis, Mo. Globe-Democrat—"The voters of Nebraska have now demonstrated at the polls that this country has not forgotten the evils of prohibition and does not propose to revive them."

Charleston, W. Va., Gazette—"Nebraska voters notified the professional prohibitionists in no undertain terms that they could not slip prohibition over on the soldiers of their state while they were away serving their country."

Birmingham, Ala., Post—"The American people don't always profit by experience, and some of the mistakes made in World War I have been repeated in World War II. But, judging by the outcome in Nebraska, it doesn't seem likely to travel again over the road on which misguided drys started them in 1917-18.

Income Tax Meet At Newfolden

Sweeping changes caused by the war in the relation of farmers to the federal income tav will be discussed by J. B. McNulty of the Agricultural Extension Service at a meeting in Newfolden on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 9th at 2:00 o'clock sharp.

A few years ago only an occasional larger farmer was affected by income tax. Now any farmer with a gross income of $500.00 or more is required to make a return. So is any member of his family who had a separate income of $500.00 Any hired man with that much income must also make a return.

The cost of the war is so great, and the income tax base is so broad, that practically every citizen, old and young, with an income of $500.00 or more must make a return.

The growing practice of employing bankers and other individuals, to make out tax returns has increased, rather than reduced, the need for records according to McNulty. Facts are needed in any case, without good records the farmer may pay unnecessarily high taxes, because of omitting legitimate expense figures. Only by protecting himself with adequate farm records can he be sure of his taxable income.

Mr. McNulty will spend some time at the meeting discussing how to keep farm records on a practical basis, and will show how these records can be arranged for use in the income tax returns.

Dorothy Hanson, who is attending Concordia College at Moorhead, returned to her school on on Saturday evening after spending her Christmas vacation here at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson. She returned by the way of Minneapolis where she spent a few days visiting with girl friends.

Earn Interest On Road Fund

The Minnesota trunk highway funds invested in U. S. government securities have earned more than $305,000 interest in the last two years, according to figures released by M. J. Hoffmann, state highway commissioner.

When the United States entered the war late in 1941, curtailment of construction came more quickly than the drop in current revenues, and the resulting balance was set aside as a postwar construction reserve fund. The 1943 Legislature passed a law providing for investment of these funds in federal securities and interest received or accrued up to December 31 on trunk highway funds total $293,961. Monies in the trunk highway sinking fund, invested between the time motor vehicle taxes come in and the time funds are needed for bond obligations or transfers to the trunk highway fund, have earned $11,763.

In addition to trunk highway funds, investments from the state road and bridge fund have earned $36,900 interest. This will be added to current receipts for future allotments to all the counties.

With the state laws requiring many new changes, a state inspector was here recently and served notices on the proprietors of the Holt Cafe and the Dew Drop Inn that they must change all doors to swing out instead of into the buildings in which beer is being sold. Mr. Ness and Mr. Henning have now complied with the new order and have their doors swinging outward.

This new measure came into effect after they had the terrible fire at the Cocoanut Club in New York last year where about a hundred people burned to death when they could not get out.

Asks For Fair Price To Farmers

If butter were not the Number One item on America's daily menu, there wouldn's be such hue and cry as there is today, now that butter's ration value has been increased from 20 to 24 points per pound.

So declared John Brandt, president, Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., in a statement this week. "Aside from the first and foremost factor that the military and lend-lease rightfully have first call on our butter production," Mr. Brandt declared, "there are several things which can be done to ease the critical situation of tight butter supply.

"Probably the chief contributing cause of the present butter shortage is the matter of price disadvantages with respect to prices of other farm commodities. If this price disparity continues," Mr. Brandt observed, "butter production must continue to decline."

From a health standpoint alone, he pointed out, today's tremendous unbalance of butter distribution is a serious menace to the nation.

"Current price ceilings on butter fail to consider cost of production of dairy products," said Mr. Brandt. "Such items as labor and feed, for instance, have washed out the net income to the producer. OPA price calculations that have been based upon the old parity formula have scrambled the balance with respect to net income against dairy production, all of which brings us back to the fight which the milk producers group put up several years ago and has continued to espouse, namely, the enactment of legislation that would force the inclusion of the item of labor in reckoning parity and establishing a price basis for dairy products."

Mr. Brandt points out that rationing is necessary to equitably distribute what supplies we have.

"However," he declared, "rationing neither increases nor decreases the available supply. If we want to lower points on butter, we will nave to have a better return to the farmer than the present price which is five cents per pound less than the average price paid by the consumer in the peacetime years of 1921 to 1929. Such a situation in wartime, when all other prices are high, cannot be justified and cannot result in other than a decrease in butter production. And "if butter production continues to decrease, ration points for butter are going to conrinue to go up."

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden and Mrs. Inga Backlund were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Nelson on New Years Eve.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Reed of Thief River Falls on December 26th, a girl.

Rail Quiz

What was the first railway charter in the United States?

In 1815, John Stevens, of Hoboken, obtained a charter from the State of New Jersey to build and operate a steam railroad between New Brunswick and Trenton, New Jersey. The charter expired without the railroad being built, but the idea persisted and on March 7, 1832, the New Jersey Railroad & Transportation Company (now a part of the Pennsylvania Railroad) was chartered to build across the state. On January 1, 1839, the railroad was opened between New Brunswick and Trenton.

Released From Penitentiary

William Gummer was released from the state penitentiary at Bismarck, North Dakots last weed after serving nearly 23 years on a charge of first degree murder.

Gummer's life sentence was commuted by the state pardon board.

Now 44, Gummer was convicted in Barnes county of the murder of 18-year-old Marie Wick of Grygla in a Fargo hotel room the night of June 6, 1931. He has, throughout the intervening years, steadfastly maintained his innocence of the crime.

Much evidence has popped up from time to time which made it doubtful if he was guilty or not. The most recent of this was a statement made by a man down in Denver, and overherd by some Fargo people, that he was the one who had done the crime.

The boys got together on Tuesday and gave O. T. Ness a birthday party on his 50th birthday. Mr. Ness was presented with a beautiful birthday cake and a pipe and tobacco as a remembrance of the day.

Jolly Duck for Toy Or Lawn Ornament

THIS wheelbarrow is easy to make from scraps of lumber. The wheel is cut out of wood and held in place with a bolt. You may be able to salvage a metal wheel from some discarded toy. The ducks are cut out of plywood with a jig saw or by hand with a coping saw. They are then nailed to the sides of the wheelbarrow and the fun of painting and stenciling begins. You just trace the pattern on the wood and follow the color chart.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The popular size tire for bombers is the 56-inch, the making of which takes as much time as the building of seven large truck tires. And an active bomber may need an entire new set of tires each month.

Statisticians have developed the fact that the rubber used by the U. S. in the war up to date averages about 145 pounds per man in uniform. In World War I rubber consumption represented about 32 pounds per man.

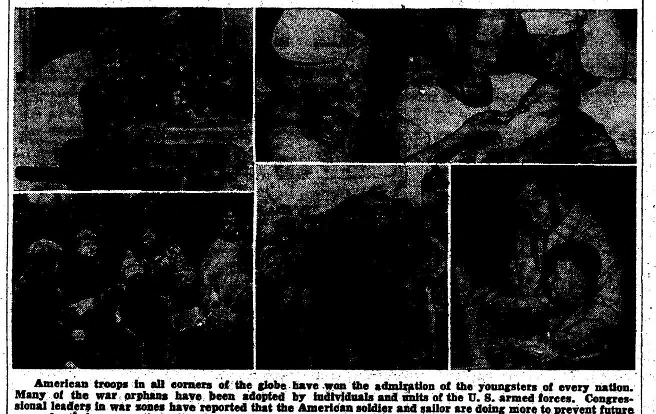
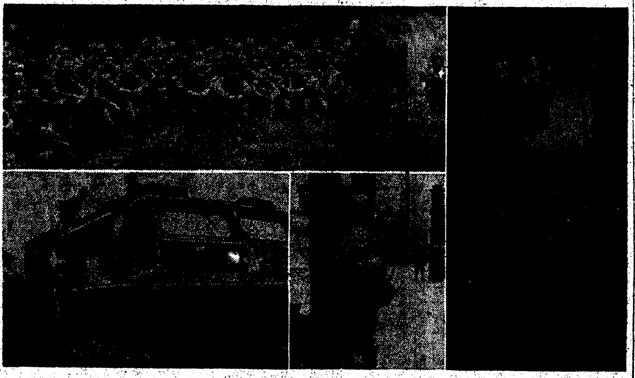
How to Win Friends and Prevent Future Wars



American troops in all corners of the globe have won the admiration of the youngsters of every nation. Many of the war orphans have been adopted by individuals and units of the U. S. armed forces. Congressional leaders in war zones have reported that the American soldier and sailor are doing more to prevent future wars, by their cooperation with children, than any act of congress.

'Fighting Third' Giving a Good Account of Itself



The U. S. Third army has given an excellent account of itself during the entire war. Upper left, shows Maj. Gen. E. V. Landrum addressing officers and men during lull in activities somewhere in northern France. Lower left, largest ordnance tractor, used to haul 8-inch and 240-mm. guns for Third army. Center, searching streets for lurking Nazis. Right, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, commanding general of the Third army.

Take Nazis in Greenland

On an isolated stretch of northeast Greenland, U. S. coastguardsmen surprised and captured a German radio-weather station, last enemy outpost in Greenland. A 183-foot Nazi trawler and its crew was also captured in nearby waters. Above shows coastguardsmen moving captured radio supplies.

Household Hints

Soft, figure-acknowledging jerseys and crepes are favorites this year. They should be laid away when not in use and not hung from hangers or hooks, because even their own weight will distort them.

Pin perfume-soaked dabs of cotton to the hems of garments to lend a subtle fragrance to body and clothes.

Use a curling iron to stretch the fingers of washable kid gloves.

Bacon fat and salt pork drippings add to the flavor of kale, turnips and legumes.

Because of the residue of animal fats, which pelts naturally have, some perfumes suffer unpleasant distortions when applied to furs. So, it's a good idea to test out the compatibility of your muskrat or mink with your own perfume before you whoosh on a lot of the fragrance.

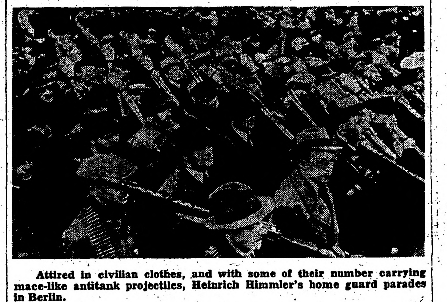
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

German Drive Reminder of Last Desperate Fling in World War I; Farmers Harvest Banner Crops

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Attired in civilian clothes, and with some of their number carrying mace-like antitank projectiles, Heinrich Himmler's home guard parades in Berlin.

WESTERN FRONT:
History Repeats

To many, the mighty German counter-offensive Field Marshal Von Rundstedt launched against Allied armies on the western front was reminiscent of General Ludendorff's last desperate throw of the dice in 1918 in an effort to improve Germany's position for the negotiation of a peace.

Then, Ludendorff's drive failed; this time, resolute U. S. troops moved in to stem Von Rundstedt's attack, with decisive Allied countermeasures expected to not only blunt the enemy's thrust but also sap the most formidable part of his force and reduce his war potential for next spring.

There was one difference between Ludendorff's suicidal gamble in 1918 and Von Rundstedt's of this war, however, and that lay in Heinrich Himmler's success in holding the German home front together to supply the wehrmacht with men and materials for the big drive. In 1918, on the other hand, Ludendorff was faced with a crumbling home front, once rising to a bawling rage in those months because a tottering government failed to provide sufficient troops and supplies.

As the Germans' desperate drive developed, it followed the pattern of other major Nazi attacks of World War II, with powerful armored spearheads punching through forward defenses and then speeding onward to let the trailing infantry deal with opposing elements surrounded to the rear.

It was thus that the Germans wiped out the Poles; broke France, and marched a third of the way across Russia. This time, however, the enemy faced a stronger, better equipped, more resolute foe, and as his attack developed, U. S. reserves thrown into the battle moved to dam the surge.

In launching the offensive, Von Rundstedt followed the 1940 invasion pathways, pointing spearheads across Belgium and Luxembourg. In choosing this battleground below Aachen, the Nazi field marshal concentrated the bulk of his forces against the First army, which had thrown the Germans onto the edge of the Rhineland plain.

In the early fighting, the Nazi thrust against Monschau was appreciably contained by the Yanks, but the spearhead farther south probed as deeply as 22 miles to the important road juncture of Stavelot in Belgium. Still another Nazi force pushed across the Belgium border and threw a pincer around St. Vith.

In Luxembourg to the south, the Germans drove through the Ardennes forest beyond Echternach after meeting stiff U. S. resistance.

Once the German attack got underway, the battle turned into a slugging match, with the enemy pouring men into the initial breaches to exploit their breaks, while the Allies moved reserves to the front to check the drive.

Coincident with Von Rundstedt's smash to the north, Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. First army encountered stiffening Nazi resistance in the Saar, with the enemy following his favored pattern of throwing in short, sharp armored counter-attacks in an attempt to momentarily check the Yanks' push.

Meanwhile, it was announced that Himmler himself had taken over command of German resistance in the Colmar pocket in Alsace, throwing in strong detachments of his motley but fanatical home guard units.

PACIFIC:
Put on Heat

All through the scattered Philippine islands, the enemy came under increasing pressure of U. S. land and naval forces as the Americans speeded up their attack on this great archipelago guarding the Japs' vital inner imperial lines.

Latest threat to the enemy was the U. S. landing on Mindoro island, where the Yanks drove forward against negligible opposition to establish air bases from which land-based bombers could join carrier planes in hammering the main island of Luzon to the north, nerve-center for the whole Jap defense in the Philippines. Even as the doughboys plodded forward, carrier planes ripped at enemy shipping feeding island garrisons from the main staging point.

On Leyte, General MacArthur's triple-pronged offensive continued to squeeze the Japanese into an ever narrower corner on the island.

STATE DEPARTMENT:
O. K. New Setup

Amid fierce debate, in which charges were levelled that the recent reorganization of the state department put the House of Morgan in an influential position in the shaping of U. S. foreign policy, the senate confirmed President Roosevelt's appointments of William L. Clayton and Nelson Rockefeller as assistants to Secretary of State Stettinius.

With ardent New Dealers Pepper (Fla.) and Guffey (Pa.) leading the attack, it was charged that the new setup in the state department following Secretary Hull's resignation might indicate a reversal in a liberal U. S. foreign policy, to which Senator Connally (Texas) replied that President Roosevelt would chart the country's course regardless of the reorganization.

As the storm over the state department reorganization first mounted then subsided under presidential pressure, Mr. Roosevelt told newspapermen that the Atlantic Charter was not a formal document signed by this country and Britain, but merely a statement of principles to guide the Allies' war aims.

CROPS:
Banner Year

Surmounting weather and manpower problems, American farmers again answered the nation's call for high level production with a near record output of crops, 24 per cent above the 1923-'32 pre-drought average, the U. S. department of agriculture reported.

Pointing to near record acreage, the USDA said: "... Farmers planted only when they could and they kept on planting past the normal season as long as there seemed half a chance of success...."

Production of grains, fruits, nuts and commercial vegetables were all above last year, with all-time top harvests of corn at 3,228,361,000 bushels and of wheat at 1,078,647,000 bushels. Output of dry beans and peas, oil seeds, tobacco and hay and forage crops has been seldom exceeded. Cotton was about average.

People in the News . . .

Testifying that her husband refused to work as long as Mr. Roosevelt was president, Mrs. Catherine Ingrassia of Detroit, Mich., was granted a divorce.

* * *

Only a few days after purchasing his own plane, 24-year-old Howard Hoy of Urbana, Ill., was killed when it crashed in the barnyard of his own farm.

Delivery of a premature two pound baby boy to Mrs. James Snodgrass of Forest Park, Ill., came as a complete surprise to both husband and wife. "We had no idea we were going to be parents again, and I ought to know," said Mr. Snodgrass. "I've got two boys already, one seven and the other eight years old." The child was born after Mrs. Snodgrass' complaint of a back-ache.

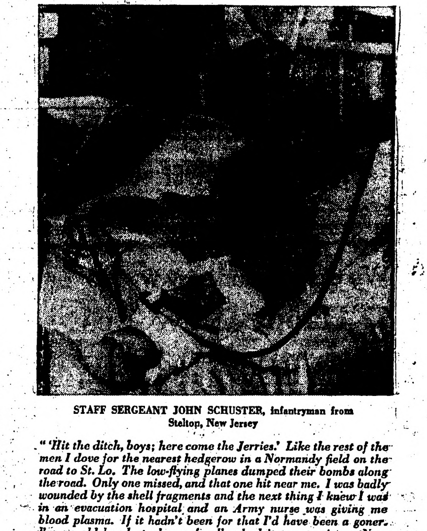
"I'd Have Been a Goner . . ."



STAFF SERGEANT JOHN SCHUSTER, infantryman from Stelton, New Jersey

"'Hit the ditch, boys; here come the Jerries.' Like the rest of the men I dove for the nearest hedgerow in a Normandy field on the road to St. Lo. The low-flying planes dumped their bombs along the road. Only one missed, and that one hit near me. I was badly wounded by the shell fragments and the next thing I knew I was in an evacuation hospital and an Army nurse was giving me blood plasma. If it hadn't been for that I'd have been a goner. I'm an old hand at plasma for I've had it twenty times. Now they're giving me whole-blood transfusions. There were Army nurses with me all the time and, tired as many of them were, they'd spend their off-duty time with us wounded men, helping to bring us back to where we thought things were really worth fighting for. We need all the nurses we can get. If you can, join the Army Nurse Corps."

Jitterbugs Defended

Jitterbug dancing is nothing but an outlet of physical energy, in the opinion of Miss Ethel Bowers, field secretary of the National Recreation association. She said youth needs violent dancing, running and racing games as well as mental games, observation games and educational games.

Two Inches—Four Miles

This is one case where two inches equals four miles. Ben Thorn, city hall park caretaker in New London, Wis., was given a new lawn mower two inches narrower than the old one. Where he used to walk 12 miles in cutting the ball park lawn, he figures he now has to walk 16 to cut the same area.

Mortgage Money

National Resources Planning Board, in a booklet by Miles Coleap, predicted last January that residential buildings in the United States would approximate a million new dwellings each year for ten years after the war. There was an "if" in the forecast: If the price could be held down to an average of about $4,000. Well, ten million $4,000 units represent 40 billion dollars, which is a lot of money.

The vision of a million people planking down $4,000 each for a house in a single year is a pipe-dream. People able to make such cash outlays have houses already. These new houses will be sold on credit. Buyers will sign instalment notes. Debts will be protected by mortgages in the hands of life insurance companies, loan associations and certain kinds of banks. Uncle Sam may insure the mortgages.

Unfit to Repeat

There is an old bromide about history repeating itself but some history is not good enough to repeat. We told last week why 9.4% of government-insured mortgages defaulted and cost the national treasury more than $600 apiece. If that should be repeated on ten million homes to start building soon after the war, government's loss alone would shoot well above half a billion, and that's the small part.

Suppose only 9% of ten million new, post-war homes are lost by foreclosure; that would be 900,000 homes. Hopeful owners usually pay 20% down, which is $800 on a $4,000 house. Few buyers, living in such a house a year, could escape a loss of $1,000 at least. This profitless payment for vain hopes would total 900 million dollars. Worst of all, it would come from frugal, industrious, home-making people.

Need Not Happen

The foregoing simple arithmetic would seem pretty gloomy if it absolutely had to happen, but it does not. It offers an idea of how much tax money will be wasted if pre-war methods are used in financing post-war houses. The danger is real. All the controls affecting the quality of building today existed during the boom that followed World War One. Sorry houses may still be built and sold on payments.

Instalment home-buying is practical economy. Discounting notes is sound banking. Government insurance of loans has been a blessing; saved many a family from calamity and many a lender from ruin. But shoddy construction blights this. It makes neither good homes nor good security for a bank loan. Lending is the cue. Mortgage money is the key to better building.

Houses Warrantable

Buildings under construction need competent and impartial supervision and rating, somewhat as steamships are rated, or as a business firm's credit is rated. This is to protect lender and borrower both against mortgages far out of line with a building's actual worth. Such an agency exists, Certified Building Registry, relatively little used, but known to leading associations of architects, engineers and general contractors.

Few money lenders are qualified to judge structural fitness. Many a home buyer never sees his house until its inner defects are hidden by decorative enticements. Yet buyer and banker both deserve the protection of a rating that means (1) a home worth its price in a working man's money, and (2) security for the bank that holds the paper.

Protects the Buyer

In the interest of public safety local governments require periodic inspection of passenger elevators and pressure boilers. Stock selling schemes must stand rigid inspection by state authority. It would seem even more important that ready made residences carry a seal of merit. In the welter of a buying boom it would distinguish a speculative builder to sell impartially rated houses.

Holt School Notes

Beginning next Monday each pupil will be permitted to have a dish heated, as was done last year. The beverage, soup or whatever is may be, is brought from home and warmed just before lunch time.

Total sales of war stamps up to and including the past week amounts to $196.90. This money has been brought in by the pupils as follows: grades 1-3, $64.95; grades 4-6, $80.80; grades 7 and 8, $36.85; high school, $14.30.

There will be no movies at the school house this week on account of a farmers meeting which will be held in the movie room. Beginning Friday, Jan. 19, movies will be given each Friday. Five very interesting pictures relating to sports have already been contracted for, and others have been ordered without specific dates having yet been set.

The scrap paper is being moved from the warming house to the bus shed and the snow is being removed from the skating rink so it can be flooded. It was impractical to do so during the severe cold weather of the past week as the water might freeze as rapidly as it was put on the ground, leaving the surface very uneven. We are anticipating a warm spell when the rink can be properly flooded.

The following families gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Peterson on Friday evening to help the former celebrate his 44th birthday: George Johnson, Herman Peterson, O. T. Ness, Lars Ring, Harold Nohre, V. E. Johnson, Alfred Larson. Also Ole Maakstad, Bertha, Gerald and Clifford Moberg and Verna Peterson. A delicious lunch was served by the self-invited guests and the table was centered with two birthday cakes. The honor guest received many nice gifts and a cash purse.

Werner-Gavere Wedding

On Tuesday afternoon, December 26th, the Community Church at Thief River Falls was the scene of the marriage of Opal Werner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Werner of Holt, and Pvt. Harold K. Gavere, son of Mrs. Anna Gavere of Tacoma, Washington. Rev. D. T. Beadle read the service in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends at 4 o'clock.

Large baskets of ferns decorated the church for the occasion and flanking the alter were tapers in tall candelabra, which were lit by the ushers immediately preceding the ceremony. Mrs. H. F. Harrison at the Hammond organ and Mr. Harrison at the piano played the traditional wedding marches, and Mrs. Harrison played soft strains of nuptial music throughout the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a white satin dress fashioned with fitted bodice and sheer yoke edged with a wide ruffle of lace. Self-covered buttons extended to the waist in the back and her full gathered skirt formed a train. She had a lace edged veil held in place by a beaded crown and she carried a bouquet of calla lillies and white roses. A gold locket, the groom's gift, was her only jewelry.

As her attendan the bride chose her sister, Miss Ruby Werner, who wore an aqua taffeta formal cut on princess lines and carried a boquet of yellow snapdragons and white roses. Frank Gavere, brother of the groom, was best man, and serving as ushers were S-Sgt. Lawrence Gulseth and Pfc. Kennet Muzzy.

Mrs. Werner and Mrs. Gavere, the couple's mothers, were both attired in black dresses with matching accessories and corsages of pink carnations and American Beauty roses.

A dinner was given in the Terrace room of the Rex cafe immediately following the wedding for 30 close relatives of the bride and groom. The dinner was served in two courses by candlelight, and centering the table war a two-teired cake topped with bridal figurines.

Pvt. and Mrs. Gavere left on a short wedding trip, the bride wearing a gray suit with white and black accessories.

The bride is a graduate of the Lincoln high school, Thief River Falls with the class of 1939 and of the Moorhead state teachers college. Prior to her marriage see taught school at Newfolden and Montevideo. Her husband, a graduate of the Lincoln high school the same year and of the Dunwoody Institute, Minneapolis is now with the army air corps at Camp Willow Run, Upsilanti, Michigan.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Anna Gavere of Tacoma, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gavere of Mieneapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hagen of Alvarado, Mrs. Jesse Sorum and Mr. Jerry Beauchamp and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Nelson and Fern Elaine of Grand Forks, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hanson and Mrs. John Hagberg of Holt, Pfc. Kenneth Muzzy of Panama, S-Sgt. Lawrence Gulseth of Camp Miranar, San Diego, California.

Local Women In Hospital

Mrs. John Simonson was taken suddenly ill on Sunday and was rushed to a hospital at Thief River Falls where she is receiving medical care.

Mrs. C. H. Gunheim was taken to a hospital at Thief River Falls last week for medical treatments.

Letter From Cpl. Hagglund

Following is a letter from Cpl. Irvin Hagglund who is serving in the Medical Corps in the European theater of war:

Dec. 17, 1944.

Dear Mother:

Here we have the worse part of was laid right in our laps. We are on detached service to a field hospital who specialize in the care of the most badly wounded cases. Those who cannot be evacuted further back in the rear without prompt medical attention

We have the best of doctors here who have saved many lives that would have surely been lost had this happened twenty years ago. The modern doctor can accomplish miracles. One really gets a cross-section view of the miserable side of war in a hospital like this. You can only imagine what it must be like to sweat out a barrage of screaming meamies in some wet, desolate foxhole on the front.

Walked into a vacant living house the other day and all signs indicated that 'Jerry' had left in haste - the dirty dishes on the table, the pot on the stove, the food in the panrty, a pendalum clock ticked away lonesomely on the wall . . . its tick-tooks echoing in the silence . . . a lone cat was purring away on the divan - the sole inhabitant of the place. It's a funny thing about cats and dogs - they are the same no matter what their masters language, race or creed may be.

The churches around here are beautiful, masterwork of art. The war goes on its way and the countryfolk continue their everyday routine of tending cattle, toiling in the fields and on Sundays attending church.

Rec'd your three air-mails of Nov. 13, 18 and 24 and your V-mail of Nov. 30. Will answer them more fully later when time is not quite so pressing.

Merry Christmas.
Your loving son, Irvin,

Carsten Sagstuen and family have moved into the apartments above Carlson's store where they will make their home while Mr. Sagstuen is employed at the Cattail plant here.

To You--

With Appreciation and Best Wishes For 1945

WE APPRECIATE your confidence and cooperation, as a friend and customer, during the past year. These have been active days on all fronts, abroad and at home, calling for teamwork on every side. Here at the bank, we know that whatever we have accomplished has been made possible by loyal support of people like yourself. And so we pause at this year end and say, "Thank you."

WE WISH YOU every possible success in 1945, and hope that the new year will bring you your full full share of happiness. As we progress toward final victory, there will be more and more occasions when we can aid you with your financial affairs, and we shall welcome these opportunities to be helpfull. We pledge our fullest cooperation to you, to our community, and to our country.

Splendid Cough Relief Is Easily Mixed at Home

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen. Once tried, you'll never be without it.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is amazing. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you sleep. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

According to Chinese epicures—as epicures know more than any-one else on this subject—the side whiskers of tigers make ideal tooth-picks.

The tiger's side-whiskers, it is said, are not too hard to hurt the gums, not too soft to fail in the purpose, nor too crisp to snap. A genuine tiger's side-whisker cost several taels of silver in the old days.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In spite of wartime restrictions, American motorists traveled 280 billion passenger miles in 1943, a drop of about 44 per cent from the all-time high set in 1941. Steam railroad passenger miles traveled in 1943 were 2000 per cent above 1941.

Another proof of the importance of rubber in tires: 34 large cities in the U. S. receive all their milk by motor trucks.

A single skid can take as much as 100 miles off a tire. Wartime speed and careful driving will prevent this mileage waste.

MONTGOMERY WARD: U. S. in Again

The government's second seizure of Montgomery Ward, unlike the first, headed for settlement in court as the U. S. again took over the huge corporation on charges that its disrespect of War Labor board orders threatened vital war production.

With the legality of the second seizure scheduled for judicial review, the government contended that Montgomery Ward's importance in the war effort was attested by its sale of farm machinery and supplies and manufacture of military products, while the company replied its major operations did not directly affect the war and it would be unconstitutional to accept the War Labor board's order for a closed shop denying individual workers the right to decide on joining a union.

In filing suit in court for affirmation of its right to take over Montgomery Ward, the government declared that the company's persistent refusals to abide by War Labor board settlements led other parties to defy WLB directives and threatened a wave of strikes and lockouts.

LABOR: Stay in Unions

Apparently sold on the strength of organization in the achievement of better working conditions, the great majority of union people have retained their membership when given the chance to quit, the U. S. bureau of labor statistics reported.

Covering 21 plants and 75,000 union members, the BLS discovered that only 395 of these workers, or less than 1 per cent, withdrew from labor organizations during the 15-day period allowed for such action before maintenance of membership contracts went into effect.

Industries covered by the BLS study included shipbuilding and ship repair, textile, radio, auto parts, chemical, electrical machinery, steel products, transportation equipment, and tobacco.

Postwar Projects

With wartime income remaining substantial, and projects postponed because of manpower and material shortages, many states are accumulating huge balances to be used in the postwar period, when their expenditure should help bolster the economy.

Although far from possessing the biggest surplus, Oregon, with $61,535,000 available, already has completed $190,000,000 of postwar construction plans, far more than any other state. Although possessing the largest of all balances at $344,000,000, Oklahoma has only $114,000,000 of projects in the ready to go stage.

Other states with big surpluses and the dollar value of completed postwar construction plans include California with $195,000,000 balance and $75,000,000 projects; New York with $163,000,000 and $65,400,000; Pennsylvania with $150,000,000 and $25,000,000, and Illinois with $100,000,000 and $10,000,000.

WAR RELIEF: Buy Clothes

In the largest purchase so far undertaken for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration, the U. S. treasury will buy $15,000,000 worth of outmoded but warm and durable clothing.

In making the purchase, a treasury official said, the government hopes to obtain the major share of the clothing from manufacturers' and dealers' old stocks, and to speed up the procurement, it appealed to these businessmen to take a rapid inventory of such supplies.

With 170,000,000 people looking to UNRRA for relief, a treasury spokesman said, the present purchase program is but a drop in the bucket.

STEEL: Peak Output

Hitting its peak in March before gradually leveling off, U. S. steel production for 1944 reached a record 89,400,000 tons of ingots and castings, 80 per cent over maximum output in World War I and 1½ times over Axis Europe's probable turn-out last year.

Because of the industry's heavy output during the first part of the year, it was able to top 1943 production by 600,000 tons. Output in the last part of the year dropped more than 600,000 tons over the same period in 1943.

"Despite higher production, earnings, after taxes, for 1944 probably will approximate 170 million dollars, compared with 201 million in 1943," a spokesman for the industry said.

GI PLANS

One enlisted man out of every eight plans, on being discharged from the army, to operate a business or farm of his own, according to a survey.

Seven per cent of the men now in the army have definite plans for operating a business, 5 per cent plan to operate farms. For the most part they are interested primarily in relatively small enterprises, with half of those having definite plans saying they will invest $4,000 or less.

To prevent marks from galoshes on suede shoes, cut the feet from an old pair of stockings and slip them over your shoes before putting on your galoshes.

Cut the material with which you wish to cover your ironing board on the bias. This will prevent wrinkles.

Cheese will not mold or dry out if the cut surface is rubbed with salad oil and waxed paper pressed against it. It should be stored in a cold place, closely covered, and away from moist air.

When the rope clothesline needs washing, wrap it around a washboard and scrub with a stiff brush, rinsing thoroughly. Give the clothespins an occasional dip too.

If cutting roofing composition with tin shears, dip the shears in old crankcase oil for each cut. This will keep the shears from being gummed.

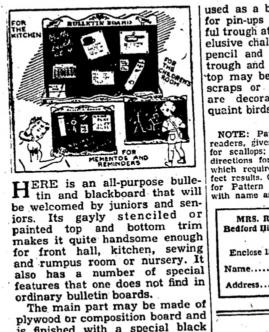
All-Purpose Bulletin Board With Wide Trough Useful to Juniors or Seniors

By Ruth Wyeth Spears



HERE is an all-purpose bulletin and blackboard that will be welcomed by juniors and seniors. Its gayly stenciled or painted top and bottom trim makes it quite handsome enough for front hall, kitchen, sewing and rumpus room or nursery. It also has a number of special features that one does not find in ordinary bulletin boards.

The main part may be made of plywood or composition board and is finished with a special black paint mixture so that it may be used as a blackboard as well as for pin-ups of all sorts. The useful trough at the bottom holds that elusive chalk, eraser, memo pad, pencil and thumbtack. Both the trough and scalloped finish at the top may be made of plywood or scraps or other thin wood and are decorated with a pair of quaint birds and hearts.

Patient Had Aptitude For Variety of Tasks

An inmate of an asylum was about to be discharged as cured. As he was preparing to leave, the superintendent called him in and asked him about his plans.

"Well," was the reply, "I was admitted to the Bar, so I may practice law. I used to be an accountant, so I may become a bookkeeper. I speak six languages, so I could be an interpreter. If I find the going tough, I may become a house painter or a carpenter."

With that he arose, placed his left hand on his hip, the back of his other against his forehead, extended his fingers, and added: "Or—I may become a tea kettle!"

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President, Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Place to Live

A few weeks ago this column closed with the statement: "Industry must have security of investment and hope of profit in order to do its part toward post-war prosperity." Starting right there, a New York reader took time to inform me that industry was not alone in needing security of investment. He presented a most astounding set of figures about personal investments.

The largest single investment made by most Americans, he declares, is in a place to live. Then he adds: "Jerry-built houses bring us more than ten times as much loss as fire. In the last ten years, fire losses in the U. S. have been about three billion dollars while losses resulting from poor building construction exceeded 30 billion dollars in the same period."

An Ugly Picture

Imagine Sergeant Joe D'Oaks coming home from war. The date of his wedding is set and home-making is in order. He pays his only $1,000 down on a $5,000 house in a suburb of his home town. The sub-divider allows him 15 years to pay off the remaining $4,000 in rent-like payments of $35 a month. They cover principal, interest and a few small assessments. A new home has been started.

Nearly five years pass. Joe Junior is four years old. There have been a lot of costly repairs, especially when the piano broke through the living room floor. The front door no longer fits its frame. Heating costs are like robbery. The place is not worth the $2,000 yet to pay on it and Joe is ready to quit. The D'Oaks family enters temporary quarters and takes a loss of $3,000 plus.

The Other $2,000

The house is not paid for. Joe signed instalment notes before he moved in. The real estate man discounted them to a bank. Does the bank lose the $2,000? Certainly not; the loan was insured by the Federal Housing Administration. Soon the FHA takes the mortgage and tries to sell what Joe couldn't endure. Government's average loss on such deals exceeds $600 and there are plenty of them.

As of December 31, 1940, the FHA had insured 634,023 mortgages. During 1941 trouble started developing in houses built in 1935 and 1936. Foreclosures (and delinquencies with expected foreclosures) number 5,456 which is 9.4% of loans insured in 1935 and 1936. If the same ratio applies all the way through 1940 when 634,023 loans had been insured, foreclosures reached 59,598.

The Taxpayer Pays

On the theory that FHA would be self-sustaining, Congress started it out in 1936 with about 35 million dollars. But the government's loss of $600 per re-possessed house, figured on 59,598 houses, exceeds 35½ million dollars. It is not a fantastic figure. FHA's annual report says foreclosures in 1940 increased 26.4% over 1939. These pre-war figures warn that post-war safeguards are needed.

The building industry is enormous. It affects everybody. When the building industry prospers, most industries prosper. The riveter's hammer and the carpenter's saw mark the tempo of prosperity. Building trends affect rents, taxes, social conditions and matters of health. Its very hugeness presents a temptation to pirates, especially in times of acute demand and general prosperity. But pirates benefit nobody.

It is not fair if home-coming fighters and war workers, bent on making homes, waste their savings in houses that fall apart. It is not fair for older taxpayers to liquidate notes that these defrauded young men must default. The solution is in sound construction and mortgage money is the key to better building. Next week's column will be on the subject of "Mortgage Money."

"Sad little personal belongings are strewn all over these bitter sands." Thus wrote Ernie Pyle from a beachhead in Normandy.

More than 2,000 bundles of these belongings, carefully collected and packed by the armed forces, are sent monthly from a Kansas City depot to homes throughout America. That's the current price of victory over enemies who forced this war upon you. These "souvenirs" are enveloped with heartaches and drenched with tears.

How long this tragic depot stays in business is up to you. Every second prolongs the slaughter. Every extra $100 War Bond in the Sixth War Loan helps to shorten the fighting. Can you do less than to lend your money for speedy victory?

Letter From Rev. Hanson

Roseau, Minnesota,
January, 9, 1945,

Dear friends in Holt and vicinity:

Another Christmas has come and gone. To many of you, it has been much the same as in previous years. For the Hansons, things were different. They spent Christmas in a new place this year. Little did we realize a year ago that we would not be with you. But so are the viccitudes of life.

First of all, a sincere thanks for the Christmas gifts sent by the Nazareth Congregation and the Nazareth Ladies Aid. I suppose that one could insert a card of thanks. But I thought that I would prevail upon the good natures of the editor and his wife and make a letter out of it. It was so nice of the congregation to send us the $25.00 as a Christmas Gift. We appreciate so much to be remembered in such a way, both in the spirit of the gift and likewise its intrinsic value. Then too, the stitched quilt with all the names of our friends sent by the Ladies Aid was a most beautiful present. We have always said that we would never forget the kindness of you people. Now with this reminder, every name will bring back cherished memories of the eight pleasant years pent there. We also thank you for the many cards sent. To acknowledge each one would be impossible. So to all of you, each in a collective way, who made our Christmas brighter, we say thank you and may you have a joyous New Year with the Lord smiling upon you in 1945 and the succeeding years.

As to ourselves, we like it fine here in Roseau. I must say we are all very busy. Even the boys are busy from morning till night with something. This is a very busy parish but I have always said I would rather wear out than rust out. So far, the people have been very kind and the response to the work has been very good. So we can truly say that everything is going well.

I am so happy to hear that pastor E. O. Urness will become your pastor. I think that you will find it was worthwhile to wait a little longer and get a good man than to take the first one available. I look forward to a continued growth in the work of the Lord and further progress in extending the Kingdom there. He will do many things where I failed and will reach many souls with the Gospel. And so it seems to work out in the ministry and the Lord has His Own reasons for changing pastors occasionally. I ask for Pastor Urness and family just one thing: be as kind and responsive to him as you were to us. And I am assured of that.

And so again, thank you for those fine gifts. We deeply appreciate them and they serve to cement our love for you people in Nazareth. On behalf of Mrs. Hanson, Harold, Luther and myself, we wish you all the joys and happiness of the new year which Christ alone can bestow upon you.

Very cordially yours,
T. C. Hanson.

Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Larson and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre were supper guests at the Orville Harstad home west of Newfolden. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Iver Harstad and Virginia and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sorenson and family of Newfloden.

Grygla Trapper Wins Award

George Richardson, a well known trapper from Grygla, Marshall County, is a winner of a Daily Award in the Sixteenth National Fur Show conducted by the Raw Fur Marketing Service of Sears, Roebuck and Co.

Richardson's carefully handled Red Fox pelt brought him one of the $5.00 Daily Awards, as a result of its being judged one of the three best handled skins among all pelts received at Sears Raw Fur Marketing Station in Chicago on Tuesday, January 9th - - and, in addition, entitles Richardson to consideration for one of the Major Awards including $1,000.00 First Award, to be selected at the final judging which will be held in April.

Correct pelt preparation - the prime purpose of Fur Shows - has proved to be of vital importance to trappers due to the fact that millions of dollars were formerly wasted through careless, incorrect skinning, stretching and drying furs - dollars which could readily have gone into the trappers' pockets instead of being cast to the winds. Well prepared pelts command more money than poorley handled ones - thus increasing not alone the value of our country's natural resources. Sears Fur Show was established to stress the point and, thus, to encourage correct pelt handling.

The season's 16th National awards again total $7,590.00 in cash, including 918 Daily $5.00 Awards, ten Major Awards, amounting to $1,950.00 - topped by and eagerly sought-after $1,000.00 First Award - plus 12 Sectional Awards for complete fur shipments - - aggregating $800.00. All awards for pelt handling only, not kind or value of skin. Every pelt shipped to Sears, during the term of the Fur Show, is automatically considered for one or more awards. Full details are given in the 1944-45 edition of Tips To Trappers; free copy of this book may be obtained by writing Sears Raw Furr Marketing Service at Chicago.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Bill With the Bull Voice Was Keeping It Quiet!

Two heavily laden trucks were approaching each other on the busy highway. When they were still separated by about a hundred yards, the respective drivers recognized each other and began their long-distance greetings, slowing their speed but slightly.

The vehicles soon passed each other and were almost out of hearing range when one of the drivers suddenly roared to the other: "Say, how's that daughter of yours, Bill?"

"Oh," replied Bill, in his bull-like voice, "she's gone and eloped, she has, but we're keeping it quiet!"

Are railway freight cars carrying heavier loads in these war years than before?

In 1943 the average loading of carload freight reached a new high record of 41 tons per car. This was the fifth consecutive year in which a new record was established. The average increase in 1943 over 1942 was 0.9 ton per car.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President-Harding College

Moral Courage

Only three dangers seem big enough to threaten America's direct course to post-war prosperity. They are (1) scarcity of capital, (2) loss of foreign markets and (3) government bungling in matters of business. Two previous chapters of "Looking Ahead" discussed the first two obstacles. Either of them could wreck America's hope of world leadership; both can be avoided.

The courage of our people to brave the first two hazards depends on knowing what government means to do about the third. By investing the cost of six months of war, industry can create the 7 to 10 million new jobs needed. Competent American workers can make these jobs pay good wages and returns on the investment. Industry and labor can succeed together with favorable government regulations.

Pays to be Ready

Stalling and delaying at the war's end may, in three ways, stop all progress of labor and industry back toward prosperity. Indeed one obstruction can keep recovery from even starting, might wreck Private Enterprise before it starts. Taxation is the deadly tool. No new laws are necessary. Many a small industrial plant will never turn a wheel after the emergency until present tax laws are changed.

A factory in Texas works 150 men. I know the owner. His taxes ran $1,000 a day last year, about the same as his pay-roll. He manages today because the government takes his complete output; no risks to run, no selling to do. After the war it will be different: Uncertain demands, sure selling costs, competition to meet. Without tax relief he does not see how he can afford to take such risks.

Time Has Value

The case is typical. Most manufacturers believe tax revisions will come, but they fear delay. If work starts on a new tax bill after V-Day, it will be a year in the making and a serious business depression can get under way in that time. If employers might know today how peace-time taxes will be figured, they could estimate prices and shift into post-war production and employment without a shut-down.

Something else business men can't wait for too long: News about government competition. The U. S. owns outright 25 per cent of the nation's manufacturing plants and equipment. Will these be sold into private ownership, or what? If supported by taxes, such plants could make anything from foot-valves to lightning rods and leave the employees of bankrupt competitors weeping in the streets.

Sedition is Unlawful

Sabotage is government's third fear to remove. Alien agitators unmuzzled in this country can be expected to start promoting revolution as soon as hostilities have ceased. Many new-made Americans still hold slave-land notions and believe anything that injures their employer helps them. Arson, violence and vandalism should be restrained in years when life and liberty depend on efficiency.

The world's only free people must stay free. Independence must be retained by the world's only nation not reduced to beggary. No sane baseball player would go to bat with two strikes on him, and, by the same token, America's rational business men deserve an open statement of government policy on three things: (1) taxation, (2) sedition and (3) government competition. If government will clear the track, industry will come through.

Cash Award Won By Local Trapper

Skillful Handling Of Red Fox Pelt Earns Award for George Richardson in Sears 16th National Fur Show

* * *

Read How You, Too, May Win an Award as High as $1,000.00 Cash

Proving again that "better pelt handling pays," this local trapper got an extra $5.00 in cash—one of the Daily Awards in Sears 16th National Fur Show—and, besides, a chance to share in the big major awards!

What this trapper did, you too can do—whether or not you sell your furs through Sears Raw Fur Marketing Service. For Sears Fur Show offers, this season, a total of 942 different cash awards, including the First Award of $1,000.00 for the best handled pelt of all.

942 Awards—$7,590 Cash

Yes, a total of 942 cash awards for fur shippers—942 opportunities to share in $7,590.00 in cash.

MAJOR CASH AWARDS: There are ten major cash awards, ranging from $50.00 to $1,000.00.

SECTIONAL CASH AWARDS: There are sectional awards, too—for complete shipments of five or more pelts—one award of $250.00; eleven of $50.00 each.

DAILY CASH AWARDS: Finally, there are 918 daily cash awards of $5.00 each, for pelts received during the Fur Show.

Pays You 3 Ways

First, every award is in addition to the cash Sears get you for your pelts.

Second, Sears can be depended on to obtain for you top prices.

Third, even if you don't win an award, careful handling enhances the value of your furs.

This third feature is the real reason for Sears 16th National Raw Fur Show with 942 Cash awards, totaling $7,590.00.

By encouraging careful pelt handling, Sears believe the annual value of America's raw furs can be increased by millions of dollars. And that the income of every trapper can be given a big boost.

Sears 15th NATIONAL FUR SHOW

Miss 15th National, during the judging of last season's Fur Show.

Get In—It's Easy

Every fur you ship to Sears, during the term of the Fur Show, is automatically considered for awards.

Only the handling of pelts counts; not the kind of fur, not its value.

This season, why not try for some big extra money? Remember, everybody has an equal chance. You have everything to gain—nothing to lose.

When your furs are ready, ship them to Sears, Roebuck and Co., Raw Fur Marketing Service at the nearest of these points: Chicago, Philadelphia, Memphis, Dallas, Kansas City or Seattle. Thousands of trappers have earned awards. YOU CAN too!

Freezer Locker Foods Make Zestful Duet

On those "just home from town" evenings, try a baked corn and pork chop casserole, the Country Cooking editor of Capper's Farmer advises housewives.

"It's an appetizing combination of two foods you've frozen in your locker or canned this last season," she writes. "Catsup with corn gives the casserole color and a palate-teasing quality."

Corn and Pork Chop Casserole

5 pork chops	1 c. diced celery
Fat	1 c. soft bread crumbs
Salt and pepper	½ c. tomato catsup
2 c. whole kernel corn	1 tsp. salt

Have chops cut ½ inch thick; season and brown well. Combine remaining ingredients and place in greased casserole. Top with browned chops, pressing in slightly. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 45 minutes or until chops are done. Serves 5.

Besides adding something temptingly different to the family bill-of-fare, this dish gives a tantalizing aroma and a bright new look to the table, the Capper's Farmer expert points out.

History

Most of the things that really matter in your life and mine are events that took place before we were born. Whether we are rugged or frail, rich or poor, happy or miserable result in large part from decisions and struggles that somebody made long ago. The old saying, "Life is what you make it," is only partly true. Life is what you make it from what you had to begin with.

Of course men and women are free moral agents and can do a great deal with their own lives if they will, but departed years influence every generation. They affect everybody more or less and have more to do with some people's lives than the people themselves. In order to take from the past what helps us and avoid what hinders, men have to study history and learn its good from its bad.

A Patriotic Duty

American history, and I don't mean a sketchy catalog of wars and elections, should be a required study in every American school. How can the youth of the United States be proud of this country's success and prosperity without some knowledge of the background that made it successful and prosperous? Decisions and struggles out of which our institutions have grown will tell the important "why" of America's power in the world.

Many encouraging stories have come back from the European theatre of war recently. Not one of them has shed more hopeful light on America's future, however, than a feature article in the New York Times relating that American soldiers in many foreign lands are calling for books on American history. They want to know what makes them different from people they see over there.

What Do We Have?

The article quoted a Pennsylvania buck private as saying, "Something in our history makes us different. Why aren't we taught about it at school?" It is my sincere hope and belief that this soldier's children will be taught more about it at school. At least I hope we don't have to wage a foreign war every quarter of a century so our sons can go see how bullied and comparatively poor other people are.

Our fighters have begun to realize that something goes on in America which encourages and promotes better living than people in foreign countries can enjoy. Farmers' sons in the invasion can't help but see that France, for example, has fertile soil, favorable seasons, and abundant crops but poverty stricken people. There's a reason. It's a long story but an interesting one.

An Educator's Job

Undoubtedly Uncle Sam has some tall, blonde fighting men who used to say, proudly, "My grandfather came from Prussia." But when they get back they will be ready to add, "Leaving that past-blighted country was the smartest thing the old gentleman ever did. It gave him a chance, and me too." History shows how taxes and customs and castes keep many a noble race of people hungry most of their lives.

I wish I might plead with every honest teacher to help keep the United States an oasis in this desert of human oppression. An impersonal, objective attitude is admirable until it points toward slavery. If it forbids telling students that representative, constitutional government is better than dictatorship, or that a successful economic system like Private Enterprise is better than communism, let's tell the truth even if we have to be unorthodox.

The Sophomores in Biology are taking a health course for a period of 12 weeks.

The Sophomores are now making outlines for the topics chosen for term papers. They are studying prefixes, roots or stems, and sufixes in English.

This six weeks period is coming to a close and the students are hoping their marks on their report cards have improved.

Freshmen Class Notes by Shirley Larson, reporter.

Your reporter has gone on a sitdown strike. There is no lack of news but reporters sometimes lose ambition.

Junior Class Notes by Delores Engen.

The members of the American History Class handed in their Bibliographies last Wednesday. They have two weeks in which to write their term papers.

Notes added by the faculty.

The skating rink has been flooded three times and we are anxiously waiting for a good freeze so that we can make use of it. As it is now, the surface is too wet in places, and we must keep off. While we don't want the weather to be too cold, we are hoping for one good freeze followed by low enough temperatures to keep the ice from melting.

A movie entitled "Foot Ball Thrills" will be shown on Friday afternoon. We hope to be able to present a picture on each Friday afternoon hereafter.

Due to the shortage of material in the school library on some of the subjects chosen by the Sophomores for their term papers two of them have had to change their subjects. Myron Sorter has now chosen as his subject - Winston Churchill and Violet Erickson has chosen Louis Pasteur.

The Freshmen are completing their unit on Addition, Subtraction, Multiplication and Division in Algebra and are having their unit test on Thursday.

Another Newspaperman Shot

Another gaugland murder was pulled in Minneapolis on Monday evening when the underworld shot and killed Arthur Kasherman, 48, scandal sheet editor.

He is the third editor of expose papers to meet his death in this fashion in Minneapolis in recent years. The other two murders were those of Howard Guilford and Walter Liggett, both still unsolved.

Guilford, publisher of the "Saturday Press" and "Pink Sheet," both of expose character, was shotgunned to death on September 7, 1934.

Ligget, editor of the "Midwest American," of similar character, was killed by machine gun or pistol December 8, 1935.

Kasherman had served 2½ years in Stillwater on a conviction in 1937 for the shakedown of a prostitute whose establishment he threathened to expose.

Tax Collections Increased

An increase of $23,684'47 in current tax collections paid in 1944 was noted over payment made in 1948 in Marshall county, in a report issued by P. E. Kvikstad, county treasurer.

The current collections during the past year totaled $507,439.74 while in 1943 the current collections totaled $483,655.27. These tax payments are a further indication of the general prosperity of the county, there being only a 3½ per cent delinquency in collections during the past year.

Tax delinquencies are rapidly falling off, with delinquent payments, outside of payments on forfeited lands totaling $40,765.17 which is $14,669.74 less than the delinquent payments made in 1954 when the totaled up to $55,734.91.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Technical men say that about three gallons of alcohol are used to produce sufficient butadiene to make an average-size synthetic tire.
Use of synthetics and alternate materials, particularly in field wire and telephone cable, resulted in the conservation by the Signal Corps of the U. S. Army of more than 12 million pounds of crude rubber in the first 4 months of 1944.
The importance of rubber tires to the economy of Michigan is indicated by the fact that 65.2 per cent of all inbound and 69 per cent of all outbound freight in that state is carried by motor truck.

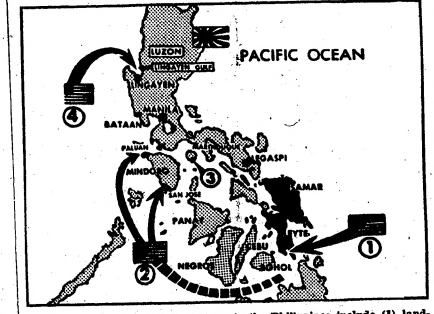
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Great Battle Shapes As Yanks Move on Manila in Philippines; Extend Controls on Home Front

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Key steps in MacArthur's return to the Philippines include (1) landing on Leyte and neighboring islands; (2) invasion of Mindoro; (3) landing on Marinduque, and (4) great invasion of main island of Luzon.

PACIFIC:

Battle Looms

On the great plain leading southward to Manila in Luzon, the decisive battle of the Philippines shaped up, as the U. S. Sixth army moved inland from an expanding 25 - mile beachhead on Lingayen Gulf and the Japanese brought up troops to counter the liberators.

General MacArthur Outfoxed Wily Foe

As the first large-scale open fighting of the whole Pacific campaign loomed, after three years of arduous undercover jungle warfare, U. S. war planes clouded the Philippine skies in endless attacks upon enemy installations and lines of communications leading to the big battleground.

Like a good prize-fighter, General MacArthur struck on Luzon in a 800-ship, 70-mile long convoy after successfully feinting the enemy out of position, with the result that the American landings were almost bloodless. In establishing a base on Leyte, and overrunning Mindoro and Marinduque, all just south of Luzon, MacArthur compelled the enemy to keep a strong guard strung below Manila. Then, he moved to the north.

With Luzon the center of their whole Philippine defense system guarding the Asiatic mainland, the Japanese appeared determined to put up a stiff fight for it, with the enemy's top field marshal, Tomoyuki Yamashita, reportedly commanding some 200,000 troops.

Working in close coordination with the ground forces, Adm. Chester Nimitz' Pacific fleet rode the enemy's inner sea lanes in an effort to prevent the Japanese from rushing reinforcements to their Philippine armies.

EUROPE:

Back Again

Their drive stopped, their flanks under increasing pressure from Field Marshal Montgomery's forces on the north and Lieutenant General Bradley on the south, the Germans slowly withdrew from their big bulge in Belgium and Luxembourg, seeking satisfaction in their claims that the offensive had relieved Allied pressure on the Ruhr and Saar.

Meanwhile, the Nazis continued their limited offensive in Alsace on the southeastern end of the winding 460-mile front, shifting the weight of their attacks to the Strasbourg region after the U. S. Seventh army blunted their attempt to split it in two near Bitche.

Although relinquishing most of the ground gained during the initial burst of his great December offensive, Field Marshal Von Rundstedt managed to extricate the bulk of his forces from the bulge, leaving only scattered rearguards to cover his retreat through the swirling blizzards.

By diverting the bulk of Allied forces with the drive into Belgium, the Nazis claimed, they preserved much of their war-making potential by temporarily stalling the drives on the great steel, chemical and coal centers of the Ruhr and Saar.

Action on the eastern front continued to center in Hungary, though the Russians were reported probing into German defenses in the Baranow region, some 120 miles below Warsaw on the road to Silesia.

HOME FRONT:

Tighten Economy

Congressional hearings on a work or fight bill for men from 18 to 45 years old; imposition of an $18 ceiling per 100 pounds on live beef cattle; an appeal to householders to keep temperatures at 68 degrees, and a ban on all advertising lighting using power developed from coal marked the government's latest moves on the home front to fit the nation into the tightening war economy.

Considered after President Roosevelt's demand for a national service act, the work or fight bill under discussion provides for the induction of any draft registrant from 18 to 45 into army labor battalions if he fails to enter essential employment or shifts jobs without permission of local boards. With the services planning to take 900,000 men within the next six months, and with another 700,000 persons needed in essential war work plus replacements for those drafted from industry, some sort of legislation was held to be the most effective way for routing manpower in the future.

Regarding the draft, Secretary of War Stimson said practically all able-bodied men under 30 will be drafted this year, because of the services' emphasis on younger men.

Establishment of an $18 ceiling on live cattle up to July 2, when the top will fall to $17.50, came after lengthy discussion between government representatives and feeders, who declared the move would result in less choice beef because of rising production costs. Emphasizing its desire for output of more low grade beef, Economic Stabilizer Vinson ordered OPA and War Food administrator to limit choice and good cattle slaughter for each month.

The appeal to householders to keep temperatures at 68 degrees, and the order to cut off advertising lighting, were both aimed at conserving fuel, what with estimated consumption of soft coal for 1945 set at 620,000,000 tons and production at 580,000,000, with the latter figure reflecting a reduction of 45,000 in the mining force since 1943. Furthermore, the industry's stockpiles amount to only one month's supply.

Exclusive on Farm Draft!

By Walter Shead
WNU Washington Correspondent

The farm public is unduly alarmed over the recent directive of War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes subjecting 360,000 agricultural workers 18 to 26 to induction in the new mobilization of manpower for the army and navy, according to farm leaders in the nation's capital.

There is no evidence, they say, that the Selective Service commission intends to nullify the Tydings amendment to the Selective Service act, which specifically provides for deferment of farm labor, if replacements are not available, and if local draft boards determine the workers are more essential on the farms.

It could be, authorities say here, that if there are any farm workers who have left the farm for other work . . . if there are any who may be considered nonessential, such as workers on hop farms, or mushroom growers . . . they may be called to military service under reclassification.

WACS SAVE UNCLE SAM $2,700,000 YEARLY ON FOOD BILL

The rigor of army life notwithstanding, the WAC, true to her femininity, still eats less than the average G.I., the war department has discovered, with the result that a readjustment of the women's army corps' menu will effect a $2,700,000 annual saving to Uncle Sam.

The WAC, though a soldier and leading an active life, does not eat a man's ration. She can be adequately nourished on rations providing 3,100 calories per day—which is 650 calories less than the number required by male soldiers, but is still 600 calories over the minimum recommended by the national research council for the moderately active woman.

The WAC likes about the same food that her soldier brother likes, but in different quantities.

Russian Scientist Swaps Frogs' Hearts; No Change

Five months ago, a Russian scientist removed the hearts of a number of frogs and transplanted the hearts of other frogs in their place in the blood-vessel system, says Collier's.

Following the operation, the animals, many of which are still alive, showed no change in their behavior, and an electrocardiograph recorded no difference in muscle action between their original and transplanted hearts.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Syrup, at Home
No Cooking. No Work. Real Saving.
Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.
It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.
And you'll say it's really amazing, for quick action. You can feel it take hold promptly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it eases breathing, and lets you sleep.
Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Your Taxes
COULD BE MUCH HIGHER

Everybody wants lower taxes. But everybody also wants better schools, roads, police protection, old age pensions, and other government services.

How to get these without boosting the tax rate—that's the problem.

Well, here's the most practical way—encourage industry. For example, the Brewers of Minnesota paid the following taxes this year:

$1,745,309.41 { In excise taxes on beer alone to the State General Fund Fiscal year ending June 30, 1944

$1,500,000.00 { 1. License fees 2. Personal and real property taxes 3. Personal and corporation income taxes

$3,245,309.41

It would require a 30% increase in individual State Income Taxes to raise a like sum. (using the 1943 tax receipts).

In addition the Brewers of Minnesota paid the Federal Government $18,333,952 in excise taxes on beer produced during the first ten months of 1944. This sum would purchase approximately 36 B-29 Bombers to help the war effort.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey local laws.

The Brewers of America pay daily approximately $2,000,000.00 to Federal and State Governments. This amount would purchase 20 medium tanks each day.

Red River Valley Winter Shows

The exhibition of livestock, crops and poultry sponsored by separate organizations in the Red River Valley Winter Shows at Crookston will be held as planned on February 5-9. T. M. McCall, president of the Board of Managers of the Northwest School Farmers' Weed and Red River Valley Winter Shows states "all group meeting for men, women and 4-H club members including the evening general sessions, have been cancelled for 1945 to comply with the action of the War Committee on Conventions and Conferences.

The livestock shows and sales, according to O. M. Kiser, secretary of the Red River Valley Livestock Association, are commanding more interest this year than in previous years. Advance entries in livestock indicate that all barns will be filled to capacity and that many new breeders will be exhibiting stock this year. The livestock sales of dairy cattle, bred ewes and the beef cattle sale will be held on February 8 and 9. respectively. 200 head of purebred foundation stock in leading breeds of dairy and beef cattle, sheep and swine will be sold at the two-day sales by the nationally known auctioneer, Freddie Chandler of Chariton, Iowa.

Harold Thomfordo, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Poultry Association states that the added space made for the poultry department by a rearrangement of the poultry room this year will be needed to take care of new exhibitors. All classes in the poultry division will be represented by birds from leading poultry breeders from the Red River Valley area. The showing of utility breeds of potltry promises to the best in years.

We Owe Us

There is a five-year-old epigram that runs like this: "Who cares anything about the national debt? We only owe it to ourselves." It implies that we are sure to be very easy with ourselves on collection day, but a lot depends on whether we can afford to be lenient. We owe ourselves a lot of money and we never will be able to collect even the interest on it unless we work hard and pay our taxes.

The debts we owe ourselves are genuine debts, and bigger than most of us realize. I know some people who owe themselves new cars, or new tires for their old cars. Since they can't buy these items, they are spending their money for other things . . . things to enjoy now. Have you heard about the errand boy who needed shoes but had no stamp, so he spent $6 for theatre tickets?

Tinkling Cymbals

Easy money that rattles in our pockets because there is nothing to buy is not prosperity. Actually it is bogus money. We must never forget that prosperity is born of work. If higher income can't help me live better, my improved income is phony. America is bleeding in war and suffering in want this very day. Our needs are no less real because certain items have been taken off the market.

National income figures for the United States illustrate the point perfectly. On paper, national income was 135 billion dollars in 1943, breaking all records, but much of the money our people received was "stage money." It wouldn't spend. Actually we Americans received 20 billion dollars less take-home money in 1943 than we did in 1929, call it 150 million dollars a day less. Add nine 0's to each of the figures in the following table, making them billions:

Figures in billions	1929	1943	Short
National Income	$81	$135
Government Deficit	none	56
Federal Taxes	3	21
Net	$78	$58	$20

The average 1944 wage is more cents per hour; the average salary is more dollars per month; our national income is more billions per year than in any previous boom, but we are in debt. It is plain from the figures that when the debt is subtracted from what we call our national income it is by no means large. The debt must be paid in money that represents constructive work, doing and making useful things for better living.

A Homely Story

On the morning of November 12, 1918, so the story goes, a dusky soldier in a U.S. labor battalion overslept two or three bugle calls and was waked at last by his sergeant gruffly ordering him to rise.

"Y'all kan't boss me roun' no mo," he said, half asleep. "Dis wah am ovah. I jes sign up fer de duration."

"How right you is, boy!" the sergeant replied. "De wah am ovah, sho 'nuff, but de duration . . . it have jes begin."

More Responsibility

Official accounts of military gains, one after another, can't help but build hopes for peaceful years to come. The foregoing anecdote is offered to suggest this:

When the fighting stops, it will not be a signal for everybody to commence sleeping late and trying to subsist on income from wartime earnings. Unless we are ready to tighten our belts and do our part to meet our national obligation, the duration will have just begun.

County 4-H Leaders Had Meet

Twenty one 4-H leaders representing seven Marshall County Clubs attended the Leaders' Institute at Argyly on Friday in order to become more familiar with the 1945 club program. Miss Margaret Fobes, state club agent and Mr. H. A. Pflughoeft, district club agent' presented valuable suggestions regarding better meetings and presenting project information.

It was emphasized at this meeting that although 4-H club work is built primarily around the projects which teach better ways of farming and homemaking there are other values of great importance-opportunities for teaching courtesy, ability of getting along with folks, appreciation of home, right attitutes toward life, appreciation of nature and many character building features.

A feature of the of afternoon session included a typical meeting of which all in attendance played the roles of 4-H club members. This proved to be fine help in using correct parliamentary proceedure.

Three club members participated in the Radio Speaking Contest using the topic "Why I Believe Education for Peaceful Living is Necessary." Miss Gloria Bergan, member of the North Star Club placed first in this contest and will take part in the district contest to be held at Crookston on February 6th. STORY BEHIND MONTGOMERY-BRADLEY COMMAND SHIFT

There is significant background behind the appointment of British Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery to command two American armies, thereby taking away most of the command of Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley. There are also interesting reasons why it was kept such a hush-hush matter from the American public.

General Bradley has now been awarded the bronze star by Eisenhower and congratulated by Churchill to take the sting out of his loss of the First and Ninth armies. The idea that Bradley made the transfer himself also has been publicized. Despite these maneuvers it is known inside the war department that highest U. S. war chiefs opposed the transfer to Montgomery and that it was put across by General Eisenhower anyway.

Background of the reshuffle goes back to the landing in Normandy last summer when Montgomery was given Caen as his objective, while Bradley was to take Cherbourg. Bradley reached his objective ahead of schedule in a new type of offensive fighting, in which U. S. troops did not wait for supplies to come up nor for snipers to be wiped out.

Montgomery, using more conservative, slow-moving, old-fashioned tactics, sat with his army at Caen and either could not or would not break through until long after schedule, and until Bradley, ignoring Montgomery, smashed the Nazi lines to the south and started the lightning dash to Paris.

'Montgomery Demoted.'

Afterward, the Stars and Stripes carried a story that Bradley was being promoted to the rank of full general and would supersede Montgomery. The Stars and Stripes being an official army newspaper, the story naturally was true. But publication in London caused such a furor among the British that the British broadcasting company went on the air with an emphatic denial.

After that the shift of armies was held up for a while, until Montgomery could be made a Field Marshal to appease both him and British public opinion. Bradley then took over command of all the American armies under Eisenhower, and Montgomery was left only with the two British and Canadian armies in Holland and Belgium.

Since then Monty has been waiting for his chance to stage a comeback. His friends of the British press—of whom he has many—have been doing the same. So immediately following the German break-through, he began pressuring Eisenhower to give him the American First and Ninth armies.

Montgomery is a superb defensive figher. When his back was to the wall at El Alamein just a few miles from Cairo, he did a great job. When given offensive jobs as in Sicily, at Caen, and at Arnhem he failed to make the grade.

How much of Eisenhower's decision to put Montgomery in command of the two American armies depended upon his ability as a defensive fighter, and how much on British pressure is not known. It is known, however, the transfer of commands was opposed in the war department and was carefully hushed-up for two weeks and not even all of the top-ranking executives in the Pentagon building knew about it.

Also it is a significant fact that Eisenhower is answerable to Churchill as well as Roosevelt. He cannot be removed by Roosevelt without Churchill's O.K. and he has to get along with both. That is an important point not realized by many. But not to be forgotten.

Note: Rivalry among high ranking generals exists in every war, probably worse in the last war. General Pershing and Gen. Peyton March, U. S. chief of staff, were hardly on speaking terms. General Pershing also sent Gen. Clarence Ransom Edwards of Boston, hero of New England, home from France because of clashing personalities.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Every gas mask issued by the U. S. Army contains 1½ pounds of rubber.

Even now, with the rubber situation improved, it is important that car owners have their tires recapped in time. In time means when the tread is worn smooth, but before the fabric shows.

It is expected by industry authorities that the early post-war period will bring a demand for from 16,000 to 40,000 long tons of rubber for the production of latex foam sponge used in cushions of various types and in furniture and mattresses.

Germans Strive to Check Great Russian Break-Through in East; Congress Ponders Labor Draft

Evidencing cooperation given Yank forces in Philippines, native volunteers information of enemy activity on Mindoro island.

PACIFIC:
Advance Inland

Moving deeper inland down the great central Luzon plain to Manila, with elements probing into the mountains on either side to secure their flanks, Americans of the 6th army under Gen. Walter Krueger proceeded with caution as the Japs held back on committing their major forces to the battle.

At the same time, U. S. carrier planes ranged far to the west to strike at enemy sources of supply and reinforcements along the south China coast, and U. S. army airmen swept up and down Luzon hammering at communications lines and airdromes harboring the remnants of the Japs' air force.

Strongest opposition to the U. S. drive was encountered in the mountainous terrain on the east flank, where the Japs fought back hard from caves and entrenchments in an effort to hold open the country to the north of them.

NATION'S CUPBOARD:
Well Stocked

With larger supplies in some foods offsetting smaller stocks in others, civilians should eat as much during the first three months of 1945 as during the preceding three months, the War Food administration said.

In comparison, the WFA said, more milk, eggs, cheese and citrus fruits will be available for civilians, but less meat, chicken, fats, oils, butter, canned fruits and vegetables, potatoes, sugar and dry beans.

Reflecting prospects for a longer European war than anticipated last fall, farm production goals for 1945 were upped upon the War Food administration's recommendation for more milk, hogs and beef, and dry beans, potatoes, tobacco, flaxseed, sugar beets and clover seeds.

For 1945 as a whole, the WFA declared, civilian supplies will be smaller than 1944, but slightly larger than the 1935-'39 average. More milk, eggs, meat, chicken, fresh vegetables and fruits, lard, margarine, syrups, honey and cereal products will be available than before the war, but less butter, sugar, dry beans, canned fruits and juices, evaporated milk and canned fish.

LABOR DRAFT:
Push Bill

Spurred on by the President's insistence, congress gave increased attention to Rep. Andrew May's modified labor draft bill, prohibiting men between 18 and 45 from leaving essential work without their local Selective Service board's permission, or compelling them to accept jobs designated by such boards.

With the army calling for younger men for replacements, War Mobilizer Byrnes outlined procedure for the induction of registrants in the 26 to 29 group, with less important employees in essential and so-called critical war industries to be called up before key men. Probably half of the present 365,000 deferred farm workers between 18 and 25 now being examined prior to review of their cases can expect to be inducted, Draft Director Hershey said.

While the President said some sort of national service act was necessary to channel workers into necessary jobs, representatives of both labor and industry told congress that the present comparatively small manpower shortage could be best met by voluntary recruiting.

BUILDING MATERIAL

Because it is looked to as the largest single field of expansion, the building trade will have to employ 6½ million workers if the postwar objective of 60 million jobs is to be attained, R. J. Thomas of the CIO Automobile Workers union told the American Home Builders convention in Chicago, Ill.

With 6½ million workers, Thomas said, a minimum of 1,750,000 homes could be constructed each year, a small percentage of the new housing needed.

EUROPE:
'Greatest Offensive'

Their lines shattered and their border lands imperilled by what was described as the greatest offensive in history, Germany's armies of the east fell back for a feverish reorganization in an effort to stem the Russian tide that threatened to roll right on to Berlin.

Although the Russians plunged forward all along the sprawling Polish plains, the drive of their First Ukrainian army under Marshal Konev on the rich industrial province of Silesia to the southwest constituted the greatest immediate danger to the Germans, with the enemy frankly admitting its loss would seriously impair their ability to continue the war. In an effort to shore up the Russian advance there, Heinrich Himmler's home army was called into action under a hail of aerial and artillery bombardment.

To the north of this sector below Warsaw, the First White Russian army of Marshal Zhukov speared westward toward Pomerania, and also threw one wing southward in a move designed to hook up with the First Ukranian force and trap German units in a huge pocket. As these two drives developed, Marshal Rokossovky's Second and General Cherniakvsky's Third White Russian armies squeezed East Prussia from the north and south.

Nazis Outnumbered

Frankly admitting the gravity of their situation, the Germans reported the withdrawal of their forces to the west, and the husbanding of their reserves for counter-action if the rapidity of the Russian advance should result in the spreading of their strength. Because of the numerical superiority of the Russians, it was said, it was impossible to stop the Reds' advance by attempting frontal resistance on the open plains along the whole line.

Yanks Regain Initiative

As the Russian fighting developed, the Nazis looked with apprehension to the west, where they feared another all-out thrust against the Rhineland.

Regaining their balance after the German break-through of a month ago, Allied forces were back knocking against the Nazi frontier, with the British Second army punching toward the Roer river along a broad front, and the U. S. First and Third armies whittling down the remains of the big bulge.

As the First and Third armies hacked off the shoulders of the bulge, they encountered stubborn rear-guard action as Von Rundstedt sought to pull his prize troops back into the Siegfried line.

While British and American forces exploited their initiative to the north, the Germans maintained pressure on the lower Alsatian plains, throwing in tanks and infantry to hold the positions gained in limited offensives while main Allied power was diverted to Belgium.

"They Say . . ."

In the event definite assurances are given to American corporations and business enterprises that their property rights will be respected and that they will be given the opportunity of making legitimate profits, it may be expected that a considerable flow of private American capital abroad in the form of direct investments will take place.—Alexander Hamilton Institute.

Rail Quiz

What railroad man was known as the "Empire Builder"?

This name is frequently applied to James J. Hill, under whose organizing and directing genius the Great Northern Railway was built. The railroad opened up a vast and diversified territory, and Hill devoted his great energies to developing the agricultural, mineral and forest resources of this far-flung "empire."

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President, Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

My Doctor

Last spring a woman of culture left her home in one of America's principal cities to spend six months in Arkansas. Soon after her arrival she came down with a common ailment and needed a surgeon. Her new neighbors almost failed to convince her that the village doctor was safe to consult. She asked: "If he's so wonderful, what's he doing here? A really good doctor can make a lot of money in a city."

She was right on one point. This doctor could make a lot of money in a city. He has not fared poorly where he is, but he never will be rich. He is not so much interested in money, however, as in a certain kind of success that's not measurable in dollars. He has a priceless estate of human lives. He can't leave his house without meeting people who owe their very existence to his skill.

A Rich Estate

This country doctor has the unfeigned love of his neighbors. His work and ethics have their unqualified approval, but that's only part of the story. He likes them too. Nobody suffers for medical attention where he lives. "He gets paid for it," do you say? Yes, he collects from about half his patients. But the humblest share-cropper can have the best doctor he ever heard of, and never see a bill.

Writing this, I have a particular physician in mind, but I'm satisfied you are thinking about another doctor as you read it. There is one in just about every country town; two or three in big places. America still has plenty of neighborhoods where men grow up and live to a ripe old age at one address. These are the spots where a doctor is a real person, not just a service.

The Case History

Knowing the people of his neighborhood is worth a great deal to a physician's success. Even a specialist, who treats strangers almost exclusively, will agree that a patient's history is more helpful to the doctor than an examination. That's why I don't want to swap doctors with you, and I hope you feel the same way. Together, we can save this country from the political curse of socialized medicine.

A firm protest from the forks of the creek, mountain coves and farming towns can keep the Wagner National Health Bill, now decomposing in a pigeon-hole of a Senate subcommittee, from ever coming to life. It was introduced with small hope of passage, its chief purpose perhaps was to raise the issue and start people talking about medical service as something to be standardized and rationed like gasoline.

Certain to Lose

My doctor is a busy man. He works more nearly 16 hours a day than eight. A standardized working week of, say, 40 hours for him would make two new doctors in our neighborhood necessary. Of course both new men would have to study the community's health record, have to be as well schooled as the older doctor and have to receive suitable salaries.

It would be a bad deal, three ways: (1) Some of my doctor's patients would have to accept treatment from a man with all to learn about them. (2) Since three men cost more to maintain than one, all of us would spend more money for medical aid. (3) My good doctor wouldn't be busy. This is the worst feature. The work he loves (his estate of lives) would be taken away from him. I figure his agile mind would turn to something else, and that he'd quit being a doctor at all.

Your Taxes
COULD BE MUCH HIGHER

Everybody wants lower taxes. But everybody also wants better schools, roads, police protection, old age pensions, and other government services.

How to get these without boosting the tax rate—that's the problem.

Well, here's the most practical way—encourage industry. For example, the Brewers of Minnesota paid the following taxes this year:

$1,745,309.41 { In excise taxes on beer alone to the State General Fund
Fiscal year ending June 30, 1944

$1,500,000.00 { 1. License fees
2. Personal and real property taxes.
3. Personal and corporation income taxes.

$3,245,309.41

It would require a 30% increase in individual State Income Taxes to raise a like sum. (using the 1943 tax receipts).

In addition the Brewers of Minnesota paid the Federal Government $18,333,952 in excise taxes on beer produced during the first ten months of 1944. This sum would purchase approximately 36 B-29 Bombers to help the war effort.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey local laws.

The Brewers of America pay daily approximately $2,000,000.00 to Federal and State Governments. This amount would purchase 20 medium tanks each day.

New Highway Chief Takes Over

Deterioration of moter vehicles and their tires will make it doubly important that drivers observe all possible safety precaution during the coming months, Elden Rowe, chief of the Minnesota Highway Patrol, said in his farewell statement last week. Mr. Rowe recently tendered his resignation to take effect January 31.

"For more than three years we have had practically no new cars and very few new tires," said Mr. Rowe. "By cutting down mileage, reducing speed, and careful maintenance, we have been able to keep at least four-fifths of the cars in operation, Their condition is slowly but steadily getting worse. Cars now on the roads are three to ten years old or older, and a majority of the tires are more than three years old. With careful driving, strict observance of wartime speed limits, care in stopping and starting, most of them can be continued in use a long time. Yet a moment of careless driving may result not only in destruction of the car but in serious injury or death of its occupants. A momentary burst of speed may cause a blowout in a tire otherwise good for many months of service.

"While taking steps to conserve vehicles and prevent accidents during the war, we should give some though to postwar traffic problems. There is danger that when tire and gasoline rationing and other wartime restrictions are lifted, we will have a serious increase in traffic accidents. This can be prevented if the motoring public will continue to observe the sams caution that has been practiced by the majority of drivers during the war, and if all the state and local agencies interested in traffic safety will continue their good work. Minnesota has made commendable progress in reducing accidents, and the number of fatalities in proportion to traffic mileage is more than two-third lower than the average for the United States. With continued and accelerated efforts, we can do still better."

Earl M. Larimer, formerly of Jackson Minn., has been appointed chief patrol officer to succeed Mr. Rowe on Feb. 1. Mr. Larimer served four years in the U. S. Marine Corps. He became a member of the patrol force in 1930, assistant supervisor in 1933 and acting assistant chief in 1942.

O. L. Davis of St. Peter will succeed Larimer as assistant chief. Davis is a veteran of World Was 1. He has been a member of the patrol since 1930 and assistant supervisor since 1935.

Rail Quiz

Editor's Note: This is the first in a quiz series that will appear in this newspaper. "Rail Quiz" is dedicated to the curiosity of readers about the vast railroad network serving this community and nation.

What is the longest railway tunnel in the United States?

The Cascade tunnel of the Great Northern Railway, through the Cascade mountains in Chelan and King counties, Washington, is 7.79 miles in length, and is the longest railway tunnel in the western hemisphere. It was completed in 1929. Boring began simultaneously at the eastern and western portals, nearly eight miles apart, and when the construction forces met in the center, after many months of continuous boring, they found they were only a fraction of a foot out of perfect alignment.

The average attendance of the high school for the first semester was 88 percent. The Freshmen class led with 95.1; the Juniors 87.5 and the Sophomores trailed with 81.5. JoAnn Benitt led the school with perfect attendance. Marion Forum missed only one-half day. Shirley Larson, Donna Tonneslan and Dale Grondahl were absent one day, One Freshmen, four Sophomores and two Jniors were below average in attendance.

Farm Home Destroyed In Fire

The farm home of the Floyd Holmstrom farm southwest of Holt burned to the ground early Friday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sabo and family were renting the farm and lost all their new furniture in the fire which it appears had started from an overheated stove about 5:30 in the morning while the family were all asleep. The fire had gained such headway that the family had to jump out the bedroom window in their night clothes and did not save a thing. Clarence Ness, who drives the school bus past the place, was the first one to discover the family, who had taken refuge in the barn. At the same time as he found them, Mrs. Russel Nelson, who teaches near there, came by and picked the family up in her warm car and took them to the farm home of Mr. Sabo's brother at Rosewood.

Mrs. Sabo and children are suffering from exposure and frozen feet. Mr. Sabo also suffered frozen feet but is able to be around and take care of the livestock at the place. According to reports they had no insurance on their household goods, which was all new, and the sympathy of the entire community goes out to them in their loss and sufiering.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Bottem and family who have been renting the Martin Jarshaw farm the past year, have now moved onto the Ivan Ose farm east of Steinear corner. Mr. Bottem has taken care of the farming interests there for Mr. Ose.

ThisHome-Mixed Cough Syrup Is Most Effective
Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. Or use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving because it gives you about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough relief. Promptly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and makes breathing easy. You've never seen anything better for prompt and pleasing results.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

As huge Allied pincer squeezes Germany from three directions, map indicates disposition of Nazi troops, with majority concentrated in East.

EUROPE:

Reach Reich

Having severed the rich agricultural province of East Prussia from Germany, the Red tidal wave of upwards of 4,000,000 men rolled clear up to the eastern border of the Reich itself, with the Nazis desperately trying to check the drive.

Biggest threat to the Reich lay in the Russian advance on Silesia, the "little Ruhr" of southeastern Germany, where Red columns closed in on the rich coal, zinc and iron resources and the industrial centers built around them. Once able to produce about 700,000,000 tons of coal annually during the height of her conquests, defeats in both the west and east, coupled with severe aerial bombardment, are said to have reduced Germany's output to around 200,000,000 tons.

From Silesia northward, the Germans fell behind the flat, forested banks of the Oder river in an effort to check the Russian tide, relying on defenses reportedly in the making as far back as two years ago, when the Nazis foresaw the probability of being forced to fight alone. Reaching the river, the ~~Russians boldly~~ exploited their initiative, throwing armor across its frozen expanse, and bitter fighting raged as the Germans attempted to contain their bridgeheads.

Fanatical Resistance

Himmler

Having given no quarter during their invasion of Russia, the Germans asked none as the Red tidal wave swept onto their own soil, with the army putting their own villages and factories to the torch to deny the Reds the use of any facilities.

Meanwhile, thousands of German refugees streamed back toward the Reich from East Prussia and Warthegau province, which Hitler took from Poland after the latter's fall in 1939, further straining the already burdened transport system. As the German army fell back, women and children were hoisted onto tanks and other military vehicles and carted to the rear.

Rushing to the eastern sector, Home Front Commander Heinrich Himmler was given sweeping powers to complete the organization of the "people's army" (the volkssturm) for military as well as labor service, evacuate civilians and industrial facilities, and confiscate or dispose of personal property.

Hold in West

Despite the seriousness of the Russian attack, the Germans continued to resist Allied pressure in the west in strength as they once again found their backs to the important industrial Rhineland.

As the enemy pulled back into the Siegfried Line, reconnaissance showed extensive Nazi troop movements inland, with conjecture that the high command was sending reinforcements to the east. But even as the shifts were being made, the Germans themselves expressed concern over a new Allied drive in the west, with claims that General Eisenhower was massing troops above Aachen.

Meanwhile the British maintained their pressure against German lines above Aachen, while the U. S. 1st and 3rd armies, having ironed out the Belgium bulge, proceeded to punch to the Reich border. In Alsace to the southeast, the Germans continued to harass General Patch's 7th army, extended by the original withdrawal of elements of the 3rd from this sector to relieve the threat of the enemy's Belgium breakthrough.

PACIFIC:

Sight Bataan

With mountainous Bataan hovering ahead in the distant haze, U. S. motorized elements, followed by the 40th division, swarmed onto Clark Field's airdrome, 40 miles above Manila.

Eager to avenge the gallant Yanks who stood their ground so steadfastly on Bataan in the early weeks of the war, the advancing U. S. troops encountered but little stiff opposition, but farther to the north, on their left flank, their comrades faced strenuous enemy resistance.

It was here that the Japs continued to put up their stiffest fight from entrenched mountain positions, in an effort to check the Yanks' drive to cut off their forces on the northeastern neck of Luzon. As the Americans creeped forward against the embattled Japs, U. S. warships were called upon to train their big guns on the enemy fortifications, also being heavily pounded by field artillery.

MANPOWER:

Channel Workers

"Even as congress considered "work or fight" legislation for 18,800,000 men in the 18 to 44 year age group, the War Manpower commission tested a new voluntary plan for channeling employees from unessential to essential industries in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

Under the WMC's new plan, the number of workers unessential plants can retain is reduced, with men released then offered suitable jobs in essential industry. If they refuse to accept, the United States Employment service will not give them a referral card, necessary for obtaining work elsewhere.

Under the work-or-fight legislation shaped by congress, workers in less essential jobs would be asked to shift to more critical employment by their local draft boards, with the latter then ordering them to transfer if they failed to act voluntarily. Physically fit men violating the order would be inducted into the army while the physically unfit would be liable to fine and imprisonment.

CLOTHING:

Shape Controls

In an effort to increase the output of more essential apparel like work clothes, children's wear and underwear, the War Production board revealed that it would grant priority assistance to manufacturers producing such goods from cotton, wool and rayon.

At the same time, the Office of Price Administration announced plans for reducing present clothing prices from 6 to 7 per cent by fixing costs at the average level of the first half of 1943. In reporting its plans, OPA said that better than 100 per cent rise in the nation's clothing bill from 1939 to 1943 threatened the whole anti-inflation program.

Although the effect of the WPB's program will eliminate luxury clothing, medium-priced apparel, along with essential grade, will continue to be made, it was said. Quality of cheaper garments will be controlled to provide maximum serviceability.

ON THE FARM:

Not All Profit

Although U. S. net farm income for 1944 is officially estimated at about 12.4 billion dollars, figures nearly double that amount have appeared labeled as farm income.

A farmer's real farm income is not the total value of his sales of crop and animal products plus the value of things used from the farm but only what is left after business expenses, economists point out.

Dairy Outlook

Because of the absence of seasonal adjustments in ceiling prices, prices received by dairy farmers for the next few months probably will decline less than usual. But dairy production payments will continue at record levels, at least during the first quarter of 1945 for which period payments have been announced.

Milk production during the first part of 1945 is expected to continue at the record rate of 120 billion pounds in October and November.

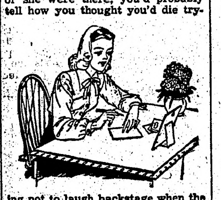
BOOST G. I. MORALE WITH GOOD LETTERS, GIRLS ARE URGED

WRITE the kind of letters that will make your G.I. Joe, service brothers, sisters, cousins, friends say "That sounds just like Jeanie!," is the advice Holly Miller gives 'teen age girl readers of her column in Capper's Farmer.

"You'll be lifting morale and at the same time having yourself a good time," she declares in the nationally-circulated farm magazine. "The trick is to write as if you were talking to the person. If he or she were there, you'd probably tell how you thought you'd die trying not to laugh backstage when the villain's beard dropped off just as he raised his gun in the second act of the Junior Class play. And how he covered it by saying 'That was the quickest shave I ever had.'



"Put in a little spice. Give your correspondent the low-down on the latest gossip, if you will, but keep a light unmalicious touch. For a good will bonus, tuck in snapshots, clippings, cartoons.

"As to the actual letter, remember it's the only tangible evidence the receiver has of you. You'll want it to look neat and legible. Use nice paper, V-mail if it's to go overseas. Your special G.I. Joe will probably like the faint scent obtained by sprinkling bath powder or sachet in the bottom of your stationery box."

"WON'T YOU BE MY - - - - ?"

TWO hearts, one dart—they have come down the ages to say Won't-You-Be-My-Valentine and to remind us that in an age which bristles with dollar-signs and flaunts sophistication, Romance is not dead.

Then why not give a Valentine party with all of the fol-de-rols which are supposed to be old-fashioned and which your guests will gloat over? Herald the event with a lacey valentine. If your shops are too modern to carry them, make the invitations by pasting paper lace on the edge of a red cardboard heart with two hearts and a dart drawn in the center. Place your initials in one heart and the initial of your guest in the other heart, and write underneath.

Guess Who Is Inviting You
To a Valentine Supper

For a contest game, give the guests bows and arrows to shoot at a heart target. The winner should be presented with a heart-shaped box filled with heart-shaped nut cookies, and each loser who failed to hit the target might be consoled by being allowed to kiss one person for each arrow that went astray.

A Supper That's a "Honey"

Set the Valentine supper table with a lace cloth, red candles and a red heart-shaped box of candy at each place. And here is the supper menu with tested recipes:

Chicken and Ham Shortcake
Cranberry Jelly cut in Heart Shapes
Grapefruit Cream Sherbet with Cherry Garnish
Cocoanut Kisses Coffee
Fairy Gingerbread

Chicken and Ham Shortcake: Make a white sauce of two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one and one-half cups milk and the contents of two 6-ounce cans of evaporated milk. Add one slightly-beaten egg yolk. Then add the contents of one 12-ounce can of chicken which has been diced, one cup of diced cold boiled ham and two tablespoons diced pimiento. Add two tablespoons cooking sherry and season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve between and on top of split, hot baking powder biscuits which have been buttered. This serves eight persons.

Grapefruit Cream Sherbet: Soften one tablespoon gelatin in two tablespoons of cold water. Dissolve in grapefruit juice from a No. 2 can which has been brought to boiling. Add one and one-third cups sugar. Dissolve and cook. Add three tablespoons lemon juice and one well-beaten egg. Pour the cold fruit juice mixture slowly into one cup cream and freeze at once in refrigerator trays or in an ice-cream freezer. Stir often if you use the refrigerator. Serve garnished with chopped cherries. This serves eight persons.*

Up to the tenth of February the pupils of the Holt school had spent $249.75 for war sayings stamps. The purchases of the various departments of the school are as follows: grades 1-3. $90.65; grades 4-6, $93.40; grades 7 and 8, $48.75; high school, $16.90.

About 1800 pounds of paper were brought in during the paper drive last week, and about 100 pounds have come in since that time. This paper will be held until the weather permits the bundling of it. It will then be sold to a dealer and the money will be placed in the students activity fund.

The 1945 Flax Program

A program to increase the production of flaxseed to fill minimum U. S. requirements for linseed oil has been announced by the War Food Administration. Authorization for the expenditure of 30 million dollars to carry out the program was contained in recent Congressional Legislation.

Under the program, payments of $5 will be made to farmers for each acre planted to flaxseed up to the acreage set as a farm goal. Payments will not be made on any flaxseed acreage which AAA county committees determine is not adapted to the crop or which is not tended in a workmanlike manner.

The national flaxseed goal for 1945 is 5 million acres. The goal for Minnesota as set for 1945 is 1,555,000 acres. The county goal will be announced shortly.

Under the flaxseed program, State goals will be broken down into county goals on the basis of adaptability of soil; avaiability of cropland, equipment, labor; the acreage and production of flaxseed in the county during recent year and other related factors. County goals will be broken down into farm goals on the same basis. To encourage maximum production and at the same time afford desirable flexibility in operation, it is provided that the sum of farm flaxseed goals in a county will be between 100 and 120 percent of the county goals.

Since the demand for wheat and feed crops in 1945 has eased somewhat, producers in areas where those crops compete with flax are being asked in 1945 to increase their flax production.

Through the Red Cross the American people serve the men of their Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Red Cross Faces Greatest Task in Fourth War Year

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Facing the greatest task in its history in serving American fighting men on advancing war fronts overseas, their families at home, their buddies returning to the United States after discharge, and the American people in emergencies on the home front, the American Red Cross will launch its third War Fund campaign March 1.

That the American people will respond with overwhelming generosity to the appeal for $200,000,000 to carry on this world-wide program is already indicated in the nation-wide determination to meet all its war needs and to bring the five-year struggle to an early and successful conclusion.

In every invasion during the past year, Chairman Basil O'Connor of the American Red Cross said, Red Cross workers have either gone with the troops, or have followed within a very short time. Red Cross field directors were with General Eisenhower's men in the great amphibious invasion of France, and with General MacArthur's forces when they returned to the Philippines.

Ten thousand men and women wear the Red Cross uniform overseas, serving in every theatre of war and with every command. They work in leave clubs, clubmobiles, rest houses, hospitals. Red Cross men attached to fighting units are with those outfits even in actual combat. Red Cross girls dispense snacks at air fields, along trucking supply routes, behind front areas and in liberated cities.

Many, both men and women, are on duty at scores of isolated outposts throughout the world, and give aid to wounded men in hospitals and on hospital ships, planes and trains. Away from the battle areas, thousands more serve at military and naval installations within the United States.

Red Cross service on the home front has expanded with the ever-increasing demand upon it, Mr. O'Connor said. In addition to collecting more than ten million pints of blood for plasma since the beginning of the war, the Red Cross has met requests of the Army and Navy for whole blood shipments to European and Pacific battle areas. Ten centers on the East and West coasts already participate in the collection of Type O whole blood, while others stand ready to join in that program as military needs warrant.

At four packaging centers, manned by volunteer workers, more than 20,000,000 food parcels have been turned out in a steady stream for shipment to prisoners of war and civilian internees in Germany and the Far East. Surgical dressings—775,000,000 of them—were prepared in the past year alone for front line and hospital use. Production workers in hundreds of communities have continued the never ceasing program of making warm garments for destitute civilians in war-torn countries overseas, and in those countries the Red Cross has assisted the Army in caring for refugees and homeless people.

Nor has its service to the armed forces on a global scale caused any relaxation on the part of the Red Cross to carry out its traditional service to the American people in time of disaster. More than 200 domestic disasters—floods, high winds and fires—have found Red Cross workers on the job to relieve stricken families and to aid in the rebuilding of communities.

"The need for Red Cross services in the coming year will be greater than ever before," Mr. O'Connor said. "In fulfilling the Red Cross appeal for $200,000,000, the American people will indicate its wholehearted backing of men in the front lines."

Sheep Shearing Short Course

With the sheep shearing season coming up before many months, sheep growers have an opportunity to protect themselves against what may be a serious shortage of shearers.

County Agent Forbes announced today that the state department of education and the extension service are offering once more to hold sheep shearing schools in this area for persons wishing to learn how. The schools will be for two days. There is no charge for the instruction, although the sponsors ask that those who take the course do some custom shearing for neighbors, if possible, besides shearing the home flock.

Russians Strike for Berlin As Nazis Plan Last-Ditch Defense; New Landings Aid Manila Drive

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Members of Fifth division of Third army warm themselves about bonfire in Luxembourg comfortably ensconced in furniture salvaged from the town's debris.

EUROPE:

Berlin Goal

Berlin was their goal as the First White Russian and the First Ukranian armies plunged to the winding ice-packed Oder river on a wide front, with German resistance growing stronger as columns of reenforcements rushed to the front and took up their positions in the flaming battle line.

With the two Russian armies drawing up to the Oder on an almost solid front from above Berlin clear down to the Czechoslovakian border, Berlin was imperilled by a powerful outflanking maneuver by Marshal Zhukov from the north and Marshal Konev from the south.

The great thrust on Berlin promised to put the Germans' vaunted Oder river defense line, over two years in the making, to the test, and further strain Nazi strength, already outnumbered by about three to four in the east. In early assaults on the Oder in the Silesian area, German regulars, reenforced by fanatical 16 to 65-year-old home front troops, stubbornly held their ground against the powerhouse attacks of the First Ukranian army, which had been the first to reach the defense line from central Poland.

Finish Fight

Long the hallowed center of Prussianism, Berlin, it appeared, was not to be spared the fate of other great European capitals as the Nazis made strong points of its public buildings and institutions for a desperate stand and prepared to blow up all factories and installations in the district.

> Declaring "there is no evidence yet of any rout in the German retreat," Navy Secretary Forrestal said: "They are withdrawing to the great line of defenses on the Oder river . . . where . . . they may fight with the same tenacity and ferocity they have shown in the west. . . . All that will beat Germany is power, sheer, crude power."

"Not one stone atop another . . . will be left . . . when the Russians enter," proclaimed Propaganda Minister Goebbels.

Meanwhile, as thousands of German refugees streamed into the Reich from the east and Hitler called upon all able-bodied men for a last ditch fight and all others for industry, Nazi leaders threatened ". . . cowardly creatures who try to desert the fatherland in its hour of need." Said they: "We shall not permit them to throw a wrench in the works. . . . Germany will fight on no matter where or under what conditions. . . ."

Fear Yank Drive

Attacking in snow and slush in strength along an expanding front below Aachen, Yanks put the enemy's vaunted Siegfried defenses to the test again even as Berlin feared an all-out drive to break the deadlock in the west.

At the same time, the Germans began to slowly break ground in Alsace to the south, where mixed U. S. and French forces increased heavy pressure on their huge pocket below Strasbourg and threatened the enemy's escape roads eastward to the Rhine.

No less than 100,000 U. S. troops reportedly burrowed their way into the outer defenses of the Siegfried line along the sector from which Von Rundstedt had burst into Belgium and Luxembourg in his great December drive. As the Yanks plowed through heavy snowdrifts, they met bitter opposition at Nazi strong points.

PACIFIC:

Strategic Moves

Strategist and tactician, Gen. Douglas MacArthur scored two more landings in Luzon, directly aiding his triumphant march on Manila, while far to the north, U. S. forces continued to drive to the eastward in bitter hand-to-hand fighting, which threatened to cut the island in two.

In one of the landings, U. S. troops overran the Subic Bay area, which opened up a big harbor for naval use and supply of American forces above Manila, while the other landing Yank stepped ashore below the Philippine capital itself, threatening any enemy effort to bring up reenforcements from the south. As long as MacArthur still appeared to be holding back some of his strength, Jap commanders were reluctant to commit sizeable forces into the battle in the Manila region.

General MacArthur (right) studies maps with aides on Luzon.

In one of the most dramatic episodes of the Philippine invasion, picked men of the 6th Ranger battalion and Filipino guerrillas made a surprise attack on a Japanese prison compound behind enemy lines on Luzon, freeing 486 Americans, 23 British, three Dutchmen and a Norwegian. Although over 100 were so weak from malnutrition, disease and old battlewounds that they had to be carried off on husky Ranger backs or in carabao carts, only two failed to survive the 25-mile journey to safety.

CONGRESS:

Busy Session

With publication of President Roosevelt's agreement to the separation of the Reconstruction Finance corporation with its vast loaning powers from the U. S. department of commerce, the senate passed the George bill authorizing the action by a 74 to 12 vote and thereby paved the way for the confirmation of Henry A. Wallace as the department secretary.

Although Wallace's confirmation was postponed to March 1, it was considered likely at that time, since principal objection to his appointment had been based on the fact that he would have controlled the vast resources of the RFC in the postwar period, with fear of their use on government projects to provide full employment. House approval of the bill to separate the RFC from the commerce department was expected to meet speedy approval.

At the same time, the house passed, and then sent to a none too sympathetic senate, a work or fight bill, under which all men between 18 and 45 would be frozen in essential occupations or asked to take jobs designated by their local draft boards under penalty of induction or fine and imprisonment in case of refusal.

ARMY PURCHASES

The army quartermaster corps in 1944 placed more than 65 per cent of its prime contracts, representing 46 per cent of the dollar value of all QMC depot contracts, with smaller business organizations, the war department said.

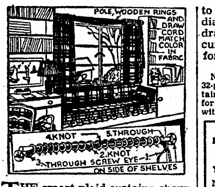
Total purchases of subsistence and other supplies for the army and military services by the quartermaster corps amounted to $6,037,872,909.

On Nation's Honor Roll

To Pvt. John Hartman of Exeter, Calif., went the Silver Star for gallantry in action. During a fierce enemy counterattack in Italy, seeing that two machine guns 200 yards to the front and right front were causing considerable trouble, he moved forward into the face of these firing machine guns on his own initiative. Edging his way forward with enemy bullets landing within inches of him, and in spite of the fact that he had received a serious wound in his arm, he fired till he had silenced both machine guns.

Making That Problem Window Fit Perfectly Into the Room Setting

By Ruth Wyeth Spears



THE smart plaid curtains shown herewith match the window seat and several slip covers, and the wooden curtain pole, rings and draw cord match the dominant color in the plaid repeating the color of small cushions and lamp base. The window lets in the maximum of light and you would never guess that originally it looked like a postage stamp in the middle of a blank wall. At first it seemed impossible to curtain it because fixtures could not be screwed to metal casements or the plaster.

The built-in book shelves helped that. A space a foot wide was allowed at each side of the window so that the curtains could hang over the wall, and the painted wooden pole was then screwed to the sides of the shelves. The diagram shows this and how the draw cord was knotted so that the curtains could be pulled back and forth.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.

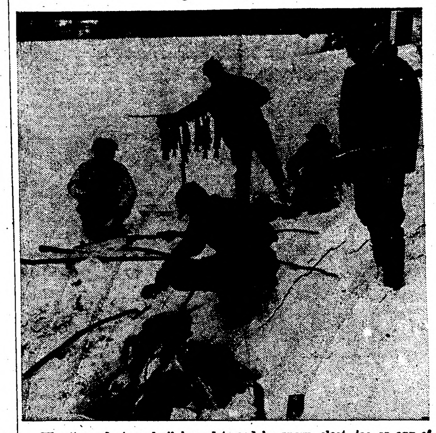
Ice Fishing a Popular Sport



The "compleat angler" is undeterred by snow, sleet, ice or any of Mother Nature's vagaries. In the frozen wastes of Maine, the sport has become an institution. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first use of motor trucks — and that means rubber tires — by the U. S. Army in active campaigns occurred during the Punitive Expedition into Mexico in 1916. About 800 motor vehicles were in use on the Mexican border.

B. F. Goodrich's latest analysis of the rubber situation shows that after the war annual potential rubber production of the world should be 2,800,000 long tons. This is more than twice the amount of rubber used by the entire world in 1941, the record year, when consumption totaled 1,300,000 long tons.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

THE CHERRY CLIMAX COMES IN FEBRUARY

CHERRIES are eaten all year round in this country, including February, but the peak of their consumption probably comes in this famous month not only because it is the month of George Washington's birthday and we are reminded of the story of his truthfulness about the cherry tree, but because "red" is a pretty color to put in party foods for St. Valentine's Day and Lincoln's birthday. A National Cherry Week is held annually, from February fifteenth to February twenty-second, this year, at a time when housewives are interested, too, in putting some fruit into the diet to offset the effects of the necessarily heavier winter foods.

A Thrift Opportunity

With the current sales of canned cherries it is a good time for the thrifty housewife to stock up on a variety of them. There are two principal types of canned cherries—sweet and sour. There are both black and white sweet cherries. Sour cherries are red. The most abundant black sweet cherries are the Bing and Windsor, and the most famous white ones are the Royal Annes. Sour cherries are usually either Richmond or Montmorency. Sweet cherries are canned unpitted. Sour cherries are always canned with the pits removed.

This is a good season, too, to check up on your cherry recipes, and make sure they include some of the best ways of serving these fruits. The sweet cherries are delicious and decorative for use in salads, and the sour are grand for making cherry puddings and also for serving with meats when their tart flavor is needed.

Here are two new cherry recipes which you will be glad to add to your repertoire:

Baked Cherry Pudding: Cream together four tablespoons butter and one cup sugar, add three-fourths cup of milk alternately with the following sifted dry ingredients: one and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons of baking powder and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Pour into a buttered baking dish. Meanwhile boil together for five minutes the contents of one No. 2 can of pitted red cherries, one-half cup sugar and two teaspoons grated orange rind. Pour this on top of the batter, and bake for about thirty minutes in a medium oven—350 degrees. The dough will rise to the top, the cherries and syrup sink to the bottom forming a sort of sauce. Turn out upside down and serve warm with plenty of cream. This serves eight persons.

Cherry Queen of Puddings: Pour two cups of hot milk over one cup of dry bread crumbs which are fairly fine. Add one-half cup of sugar and two tablespoons butter. Let soak for five minutes. Then add the lightly-beaten yolks of three eggs, and pour into a buttered pudding dish. Bake in a slow oven—275 to 300 degrees—for from forty to fifty minutes, or until a knife, inserted, comes out clean. Meanwhile cook the contents of one No. 2 can of pitted red cherries with three-fourths cup of sugar until the syrup is thick, then cool slightly. When the pudding is done, spread this cherry mixture on top, cover with a meringue made of three egg whites and six tablespoons of sugar. Return to the oven for about fifteen minutes or until the meringue is firm and a delicate brown. Serve cold. This serves eight persons.*

Reclaim That Brush

Good paint brushes being scarce these days, it behooves the housewife to clean up old ones and give them better care, declares the Home Editor of Capper's Farmer, Topeka, Kan., whose advice on household matters is read by 1,250,000 farm families. Fortunately commercial preparations are available. The powder forms are perhaps easiest to use, since they are mixed with hot water in needed quantities.

Rail Quiz

How does a railroad keep track of its wandering freight cars?

Every railroad has a car record office which, by means of daily reports from agents, keeps a complete up-to-date record of the movements of all freight cars on its own lines regardless of ownership, and all of its own cars on other railroads. When a car moves from one railroad to another, the agent at the point of interchange reports the fact to the car record offices of the railroads concerned, including the railroad which owns the car. Thus the location of every freight car is known to the car service organizations and its movements and wanderings become a matter of permanent record.

India Curry Sauce Peps Up Cauliflower

Crown a plump head of cauliflower with teasing India curry sauce containing onion and apple and you'll add unsuspected newness and pleasure to a cold-weather meal.

That's a tip to home-makers given by Marjorie Griffin, Home Editor of nationally - circulated Capper's Farmer. Parsley or watercress garnish will give color, she says, while curry powder and tabasco sauce will pep up the blandest cauliflower.

India Curry Sauce

2 tbsp. butter	1 tbsp. curry powder
4 tbsp. minced onion	2 tbsp. flour
4 tbsp. diced apple	1 c. cauliflower water
½ tsp. salt	Parsley

Melt butter and add onion and apple; cook slowly until tender. Add salt, curry powder and flour, stirring until well blended. Slowly add cauliflower cooking water, stirring constantly. Cook over low heat about 7 minutes. Pour sauce over a head of cooked cauliflower, garnish with parsley, and serve at once. Serves 6.

"You'll be amply paid for the time and ingenuity used in planning appetite-whetting dishes such as this," Miss Griffin writes.

Sheep Shearing Short Course

With the sheep shearing season coming up before many months, sheep growers have an opportunity to protect themselves against what may be a serious shortage of shearers.

County Agent Forbes announced today that the state department of education and the extension service are offering once more to hold sheep shearing schools in this area for persons wishing to learn how. The schools will be for two days. There is no charge for the instruction, although the sponsors ask that those who take the course do some custom shearing for neighbors, if possible, besides shearing the home flock.

If a school is to be scheduled in this area, registrations must me made at the county agent's office within the next two weeks. If there are enough requests for the schools arrangements will be completed and the dates announced and place designated.

Benefits to Our Readers

THE PUBLIC nature of advertising benefits everyone it touches. It benefits the public by describing exactly the products that are offered. It benefits employees, because the advertiser must be more fair and just than the employer who has no obligation to the public. These benefits of advertising are quite apart from the obvious benefits which advertising confers—the lower prices, the higher quality, the better service that go with advertised goods and firms.

The burlap or canvas foundation is cut in twelve-inch squares. Each square is hooked separately and, when sewn together, they form this fascinating design. No large frame is needed and your hooking is easy to carry with you or to use for pick-up work.

Household Hints

Corn flakes or rolled oats are excellent substitute for breadcrumbs.

For a pleasant flavor in tea, add a bit of dry orange peel to the canister, and keep tightly closed.

Baste velvets with silk thread. This leaves no mark of bastings.

When a light bulb breaks off, leaving the top screw part in the socket, first be sure that the current is turned off. Then insert a cork into the socket and turn to remove the cap.

To freshen a felt hat that becomes soiled, rub lightly with fine sandpaper. Go over the entire surface in order to avoid a spotted effect.

Use the cardboard from your husband's shirts between your linens to keep them in order and easy to remove when only one piece is desired.

Rayon threads are plenty weak when wet. Therefore, have a care when straightening stocking seams, pulling up hose, or removing them after having been caught in a shower.

When washing a knitted wool garment, don't lift it out of the water, as the weight of the wet garment will stretch it. Squeeze suds through instead and support the garment firmly with the hands. Gentle always is first rule in right wool care.

In painting radiators your aim should be to make them as inconspicuous as possible. Therefore a color nearly like the surrounding wall is desirable. Radiators should be refinished in the summer or fall before the fire has been started for the winter. First wipe off all grease with a rag immersed in gasoline or dry cleaner.

U. S. TREATMENT OF GERMAN PRISONERS

Parents of boys who are prisoners of Germany get increasingly burned up at reports showing how badly they are fed by the enemy, while German prisoners in the U. S. are eating better than American civilians.

German prisoners of war, many of them arrogant, insolent, and considered beyond political rehabilitation, get rationed foods denied civilians, and in some cases receive scarce foods requiring four times the food stamps now allowed American civilians.

The provost marshal, of course, is living up to the strict letter of the Geneva convention regarding prisoners, which provides that they be fed the same rations as U. S. soldiers.

Thus at one Florida camp, a one-week menu recently showed that the Nazi prisoners' ration for a single week would have required 45 meat points and 63 processed food points per man. Here is a sample of some of the meals German prisoners of war received at MacDill field, Florida.

Dinner: Turkey a la king, parsley potatoes, cauliflower, celery and pickles, bread, butter, chocolate cake, coffee.

At breakfast the next day they received grapefruit, dry cereal, fresh milk, boiled eggs, toast, butter, jam and coffee.

For luncheon they had veal steak, lyonnaise potatoes, stewed corn, fruit salad, bread, butter, peaches and coffee.

For supper the PW's had veal loaf, gravy, escalloped potatoes, green peas, cabbage and pineapple salad, bread, butter, cinnamon rolls and coffee.

The prisoners are served butter three times a day, seven days a week. During other days of the same week they had fried pork chops, bacon and eggs, beef stew, spareribs, roast veal, veal a la king, roast beef with gravy, baked ham and baked beans with salt pork. They were also given Boston cream pie for dinner, butterscotch pudding, pineapple fritters, marble cake, fruit cobbler, mince pie, peach shortcake, and other fancy dishes.

Meanwhile, American boys held by the Germans complain that were it not for Red Cross packages provided them by relatives they would be hungry constantly.

ARMY DISCHARGES

With all the pressure the army has been bringing for a work-or-fight law, no one in congress has taken time for a real investigation of the army's own wasteful disposition of manpower. Among other things, there has been no probe of army policy regarding medical discharges.

Actually, army medicos all over the country are discharging men for minor ailments which, although rendering them unfit for front-line action, don't effect their ability to do clerical, construction, or other types of work.

Last summer General Marshall also ordered discharges for men found to be developing nervous disorders as a result of their army service. But last October, so many men were successfully faking these difficulties that a six-week freeze was called, and a much stiffer discharge examination required.

But "goldbricks" and "gripes" are still the men who most frequently win their discharge papers. If a man dislikes the army, is uncooperative and is determined to get a medical discharge, the attitude of his officers is usually "good riddance." But a good man on other than combat duty who has a legitimate illness which merits discharge, finds it extremely difficult to get his release because "he's a good man and we need men like him."

CAPITAL CHAFF

¶ The office of War Information so far has banned Lester Cowan's new movie hit "Tomorrow the World" from distribution in European liberated countries. The story shows a Nazi youngster transferred to the U. S. A. and being beaten up when he still sticks to Hitler's idea. OWI officials say they may release the ban for France and Belgium, but will not let the film get to Germany.

¶ An inside row is being waged over the reappointment of Al Woll, son of AFL labor leader Matthew Woll, as U. S. district attorney in Chicago. Matt Woll is 100 per cent against Roosevelt and White House advisers don't see why his son should be rewarded by FDR. However, Sen. Scott Lucas, friend of Jake Arvey, is pulling wires for Woll's reappointment.

¶ Behind the United Automobile Workers' nationwide referendum to continue the "no-strike" pledge, was the feeling on the part of some workers that this pledge originally was forced on them by the union bosses. Union leaders therefore wanted to give them all a chance to vote. . . . The Walter Reuther faction of the auto workers previously favored a "no-strike" pledge until the war with Germany was over, but Reuther is now supporting the all-out "no-strike" pledge for the all-out effort against the Japs.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber does not enter into the making of tents, yet the demand for military tents has reduced the manufacture of passenger car tires. Tire cord and yarn for tent duck are made with the same machinery.

Assuming that the trees are in reasonably good condition when the Far East rubber plantations are reoccupied, experts anticipate that within two years some 1,600,000 tons of natural rubber will be made available, enough to fill one year's estimated needs. That is why B. F. Goodrich officials believe civilians will still have to depend upon synthetic rubber tonnage in addition to that required for natural security.

Red Cross War Fund Head Enlists Full Public Support

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Urging each American citizen to consider the Red Cross as his personal emissary to his particular serviceman, Colby M. Chester, chairman of the 1945 American Red Cross War Fund campaign, today asked all Americans to give to their fullest ability in support of the 1945 national goal of $200,000,000.

"Those of us who must stay at home and fight by doing our daily tasks as efficiently as possible," he said, "like to feel that though we are not beside John or Jim or Bob on the battle field, we do have a personal ambassador in each of the ten thousand Red Cross workers now serving with the troops overseas."

Opening March 1 and continuing throughout the entire month, the third Red Cross War Fund will not only fill intensified needs on advancing war fronts, but will provide needed services to those who have returned from action; their families, their buddies awaiting transportation overseas, and their friends and neighbors at home in time of natural or war-caused emergency.

More than 3,000,000 volunteer solicitors stand ready to aid in local collections in every American community. Each will devote his time and effort toward reaching the goal so that men and women in military service will know the Red Cross "is staying right with them, right up to and beyond the day of peace and victory, Mr. Chester explained.

Without personal gain or remuneration, the 3,000,000 men and women volunteer canvassers will represent 3,756 Red Cross chapters throughout the nation. Seeking from door to door those contributions which will not be made through factory, office, school or theatre, each will carry an official identification card for the protection of the householder. For the most part, however, such identification will be unnecessary because the solicitor will be a neighbor or friend. To each contributor, he will give a red, white and blue window sticker bearing the well-known Red Cross emblem.

Sheep Shearing Short Course

With the sheep shearing seasson coming up before many months, sheep growers have an opportunity to protect themselves against what may be a serious shortage of shearers.

County Agent Forbes announced today that the state department of education and the extension service are offering once more to hold sheep shearing schools in this area for persons wishing to learn how. The schools will be for two days. There is no charge for the instruction, although the sponsors ask that those who take the course do some custom shearing for neighbors, if possible, besides shearing the home flock.

If a school is to be scheduled in this area, registrations must me made at the county agent's office within the next two weeks. If there are enough requests for the schools arrangements will be completed and the dates announced and place designated.

This Bank is Eager to Make Loans

The money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earning, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

Unlike the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A loan helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed—all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

Gen. Stilwell Road Completed to Supply China

The greatest engineering feat in the annals of the United States army was the completion of the Stilwell road through Burma, by Brig. Gen. Lewis A. Peck, his American engineers and thousands of native laborers. Not only was the road constructed, air fields built, mountains and jungles conquered, the monsoons defeated, raging rivers bridged, but malaria was licked in solving the problem as General Peck and his men slaved against time, nature and the Japanese, thousands of miles from home.

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Silk Patchwork Quilt Colorful and Quaint

AN OLD - FASHIONED crazy-patch quilt aglow with color and quaint stitchery makes a decorative slumber throw for the sofa in today's living room. It picks up and repeats all the room colors and the hit-and-miss pattern harmonizes with furnishings old and new.

In Victorian days great grandfather's cravats were the source of many a rich piece of silk for these quilts. Why not look over the old ties that G.I. Joe left behind with an eye to the same purpose? The ends are always good no matter how worn the center part may be. Collecting bits of bright silk, ribbon and embroidery thread will be an exciting hobby and it costs nothing.

NOTE—BOOK 2 of the series of 32-page booklets offered with these articles gives complete directions for making crazypatch quilts with dozens of diagrams showing the old-fashioned embroidery stitches used. Champ Without Training

When the Olympic Games were held at Athens in 1896, the first time since they were abolished at Rome in 392 A. D., the ten men representing the United States had no trainer and no time to train. Yet, of the twelve events, they won nine.

Incidentally, Harvard's J. B. Connolly won the initial event, the hop, step and jump—the only time in his life he had ever tried it—and was crowned first Olympic Games champion in 1,504 years.

—WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS—

Harmony Note of Big Three Meet; Mighty U.S. Aerial Blows Carry War to Heart of Jap Homeland

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Freed by daring U. S. Ranger attack on Cabanatuan prison camp, liberated Yanks joyfully make their way back to American lines for transfer to evacuation hospital in Philippines.

EUROPE:

Postwar Pattern

Their historic conference at Yalta having ended in agreement, the Big Three departed from the balmy Crimean watering resort determined to maintain equal harmony on the implementation of the new course they struck for trodden Europe, envisaging the return of democratic government and obliteration of Nazism and Fascism.

Thorniest problem in Allied relations before the conference, the Polish question was met by U. S. and British recognition to Russian annexation of part of eastern Poland, and the agreement to include independent democratic leaders into the Red-sponsored provisional government until the people themselves can name their own regime in a free and open election.

In respect to free elections, guaranteeing the people of all the liberated countries the right to pick their own governments, the Big Three pledged their support to assist any nation in measures designed to bring about such polls.

With agreement on the vexatious Polish problem and restoration of democratic government in the new Europe, the Big Three also moved toward maintenance of such an order by further discussion of steps on a postwar international security organization, with the talks at Yalta designed to meet Russian objections to the Dumbarton Oaks plans for prohibiting any nation charged with aggression from voting on measures to bring it in line.

> Declaring that the Big Three's terms for Germany released its people from all moral scruples of warfare, Nazi propagandists said: "Every enemy will be met by fanatical men, women and children, who know what treatment is in store for them, and, therefore, wish to kill, murder and poison all who attempt to oppress them. . . ."

Overwhelming agreement was reached on treatment for a defeated Reich, with Messrs. Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin determined to crush German militarism by dissolution of the wehrmacht, breakup of its general staff, elimination of all industry that could be used for war production, and complete eradication of all Nazi and Junker influences in the nation's life.

Further, Germany would be made to pay for war damage, with an Allied commission set up in Moscow determining on the extent of reparations, probably in terms of manpower and goods.

Allies Advance

With their hopes of an Allied division blasted at Yalta, and with the combined weight of the U. S., Britain and Russia drawn up against them, the Germans maneuvered in both the west and east for a last-ditch struggle.

In the east, so-called "alarm units" and the "people's army" were thrown into breaches to hold open avenues of retreat for German forces falling back from Silesia to Saxony as the Russians drove on this all-important Nazi industrial district. As the Reds pushed ahead, one wing of this offensive nosed northwestward toward Berlin, sorely pressed by a frontal assault of Marshal Zhukov's forces.

In the west, the Germans fought hard to thwart the Canadian and British attempt to turn their far northern flank, drive into the industrial Ruhr and trap Nazi forces guarding the Rhineland from the rear.

WAR COSTS

With this war costing the world some $200 billions a year, or more than $500 millions a day, in direct military expenditures alone, the annual expenditure is roughly equal to the whole direct cost of the First World war, estimated at $208 billions by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Staggering though these figures are, they do not include indirect costs of war, such as the value of human life lost, property destruction, etc.

PACIFIC:

Mighty Strike

To Tokyo's 8,000,000 terrified residents, it was as if the whole host of demons themselves had swooped from the skies; to American aviators and sailors, it offered the supreme satisfaction of slapping a vicious enemy in his own backyard, and to millions of people at home, it represented the opening of the battle for Japan itself.

Thus shaped Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's mighty strike against Tokyo and the home island of Honshu, with 1,500 Hellcats, Helldivers and Avenger planes taking off from about 15 to 20 carriers of the 27,000-ton class, escorted by a formidable screen of fast battleships, cruisers and destroyers. Though meeting strong opposition, the aircraft shot up enemy planes, cratered airdromes and pulverized other military installations around the Jap capital.

While the major attack roared on, with the once vaunted, since battered Jap imperial fleet failing to challenge Mitscher's force riding 300 miles off of Honshu shores, other American warships and army planes hammered the Volcano and Bonin islands, 600 miles to the south.

WAR PRODUCTION:

Schedules Increase

With emphasis on more bombers and engine parts, the government increased its war contracts in recent weeks, indicating that the rapid pace of the conflict is forcing readjustment of needs.

Besides the boost in the bomber and engine parts program, it was revealed, ground troops were scheduled to get 21.9 per cent more ammunition, heavy artillery and tanks.

To meet a critical emergency of engine parts in battle zones, the government has undertaken a 50 million dollar expansion of the industry, and established special panels, or committees, in the seven major plants for speeding up of output.

Labor Relations

Supplementing its previous policy of plant seizures to back up War Labor board rulings designed to settle industrial disputes, the U. S. drew a new weapon to force compliance through cancellation of a firm's government contracts.

In following such a course of action against the E. A. Laboratories of Brooklyn, N. Y., Economic Stabilization Director Vinson said that the U. S.'s procedure was legal, insofar as the courts have frequently held that no business has an automatic right to getting a government contract.

Despite the U. S.'s power to influence compliance with WLB orders through plant seizures and withholding of priorities, in addition to contract cancellations, OES Chieftain Vinson said that still more effective action could be obtained through legislation furnishing non-compliance.

G.I.s Long for Civvies

Discharged G.I.s are so anxious to get back into civilian clothes, a survey of the Northwestern National Life Insurance company showed, that they want alterations on their new suits "done in the next ten minutes"; they shun cheap clothing and buy good quality suits—averaging about $45 in price; they don't shop around, but go to one store and buy as nearly a complete outfit as the store can supply; they usually pay cash, even when they could "charge it," and they seldom shop alone.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

During at least the first three years following the end of the war, experts believe that 70 million tires will be needed annually in the U. S. alone. The peak year, 1941, saw a production of 62 million tires in this country.

Greater use of mechanical farm implements in post-war years is expected to make agriculture one of the largest consumers of rubber.

Despite the Far East war, the Foreign Economic Administration expects that 73,100 tons of natural rubber will be shipped to the U. S. from Ceylon and India during 1944.

BOOST G. I. MORALE WITH GOOD LETTERS, GIRLS ARE URGED

WRITE the kind of letters that will make your G.I. Joe, service brothers, sisters, cousins, friends say "That sounds just like Jeanie!," is the advice Holly Miller gives 'teen age girl readers of her column in Capper's Farmer.

"You'll be lifting morale and at the same time having yourself a good time," she declares in the nationally-circulated farm magazine.

"The trick is to write as if you were talking to the person. If he or she were there, you'd probably tell how you thought you'd die trying not to laugh backstage when the villain's beard dropped off just as he raised his gun in the second act of the Junior Class play. And how he covered it by saying 'That was the quickest shave I ever had.'

"Put in a little spice. Give your correspondent the low-down on the latest gossip, if you will, but keep a light unmalicious touch. For a good will bonus, tuck in snapshots, clippings, cartoons.

"As to the actual letter, remember it's the only tangible evidence the receiver has of you. You'll want it to look neat and legible. Use nice paper, V-mail if it's to go overseas. Your special G.I. Joe will probably like the faint scent obtained by sprinkling bath powder or sachet in the bottom of your stationery box."

America's No. 1 War Producer

There are millions of him.

The Top Producer in this war is the American Dairy Farmer.

With the manpower shortage and less equipment, this man has produced 13% more milk. This man has kept right on producing —50—60—70—80 hours per week—actually 50% more output per man!

The Farmer has kept right on producing by himself because America needs milk and butter and cheese. Because he knows 39% of the total food consumed by the armed forces comes from the cow. Milk and butter are vital!

Yet, America today is failing to recognize the Dairy Industry as a No. 1 vital war plant—in Manpower—or Prices.

Actually—the Dairy Farmer loses money today when he produces butter.

We need a new parity formula for the Dairy Farmer. Our present parity formula is antique. It does not even include the cost of labor—the biggest cost item to a Dairy Farmer.

Cows need milking twice a day. No Sundays off. No holidays. Who says labor isn't important?

Who says labor doesn't cost money?

Labor is the biggest cost item of our war effort . . . and rightly so. Why leave labor out of the formula that governs production?

The Dairy Farmer is the No. 1 War Producer. He has proved it. But his efforts—his labor—need recognition NOW!

This is a balancing problem. Government must decide where to direct men and money. If America wants to keep dairy production high—The Dairy Industry needs a higher priority.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Stymie Law

On V-Day, when fighting ends and the peoples of a plundered world begin shouting their joy and gratitude in a thousand tongues, aerial bombs and floating mines are going to seem pretty cheap. All treacherous and destructive machines will appear in their right light again. Their values will show as minus quantities. Then slow, cautious men will set to work getting rid of them.

But there are instruments of war more treacherous than floating mines, more ruinous than any blockbuster ever devised. Uncle Sam will have one of these on his hands when war ends unless Congress does something about it. It is trained on American factories and farms now, ready to start a bombardment on Armistice Day and nothing can eliminate the serious menace but new legislation.

Congress Can Save.

The United States has a law against progress. It was not enacted to stop scientific and industrial development but, if it stays on the statute books in peace time, even for a short while, it will be a government freeze of creative work. It was passed five years ago to raise money for national defense and keep war-mongers from profiteering on the misfortunes of other people.

I am not criticiing the purposes of the act. America had to raise revenue quickly for defense, and right thinking people did not want to see a new crop of war-lords enriched with blood-money. Just the same, there ought to be a new act, worded to take effect on the day of victory, repealing certain provisions in the 1940 tax law which are war measures, ruinous to any people at peace.

Kills New Business.

The sense of the law is this: Add up all the profit a firm made in four pre-war years, 1936-1939 inclusive; figure 25% of the total and call it a sample pre-war year's profit. If a corporation earns more than that in any year of war, it must pay the government 85% of the difference in a special tax.

Small business concerns can't grow if the law stands. Really big corporations can escape being devastated. Some will want to expand further and can't, but they can stay big. Here is why: by percentage, not much of a giant corporation's business is ever new business; its profits (however big) grow slowly. Small firms, not so. What will be the net result?

Service to Humanity.

Thrifty little enterprises like you and I might form will be paralyed. They can't expand because their dollars of increased profit will be split two ways, 15c to keep, and 85c for the government. Many will die, as losses on development of new products wipe out their meager capital. Huge firms, which have no need for substantial growth, can develop new products with no risk to their strong financial position.

A big company's losses on new developments can be used to reduce taxes on profits from old business. In this way, government pays more than four-fifths of such losses for big concerns. It must be remembered, however, that big corporations are too few to solve the nation's post-war employment problem.

Small companies employ more than 80% of the nation's workers. They handle the lion's share of our national income. What their employees eat makes farm prosperity. If these little firms see a chance to earn a profit, they will get ready for peace . . . new business and new jobs in large numbers. But if until V-Day they remain scared to expand, America is stymied and so is the world.

Army, Navy Leaders, Others Endorse Red Cross War Fund

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In answer to President Roosevelt's appeal to the nation on behalf of the American Red Cross to fulfill the $200,000,000 Red Cross War Fund goal for 1945, America's foremost military and naval leaders, the press, and educational, religious, fraternal, industrial and labor groups pledged unstinting support.

Stimson — Gen. Marshall — Forrestal — Adm. King

Secretary of War Stimson expressed his gratitude to the Red Cross for discharging its responsibilities to the Army "with efficiency and humanity" throughout the war.

Chief of Staff General Marshall added: "The Red Cross has kept pace with the growth of the Army by enlarging its services to meet soldier needs both in this country and overseas."

Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal, citing Red Cross war contributions of blood plasma, prisoner of war food packages and civilian war aid, said, "In the blackness of war, the Red Cross stands as a beacon of mercy of which we can all be proud. Never has money been put to better use."

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, pointed out that "every time the Red Cross assists a man in the armed forces in any way. There can be no doubt that the humanitarian activities of the American Red Cross have a direct bearing on the outcome of the war."

Both the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the National Editorial Association's presidents promised complete cooperation from the American press.

Among groups endorsing the War Fund are:

AMERICAN LEGION: "The Red Cross has exemplified the fine, traditional spirit of American helpfulness. The approach of the postwar reconstruction period will not lessen the calls for Red Cross services."

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR: "We are determined that the war shall be won. Let us be equally determined that the Red Cross shall be enabled and permitted to measure up to the needs of the situation and the high standard which we have set for it."

CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION: "Each one of our members knows that the Red Cross is constantly at that loved one's or friend's side in his time of need."

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION: "Such vital Red Cross programs as home nursing, nutrition, disaster relief and other helpful activities during recent years have combined closely to identify this national organization with rural life in America. The American Farm Bureau Federation . . . urges every member to give it wholehearted support through the organization's local chapters."

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES: "It is obvious that the world situation at the present time will make greater demands upon Red Cross than ever before. We commend to the churches of the various communions in the United States the appeal for the American Red Cross War Fund in 1945."

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS: "American businessmen stand ready to assist in every way possible the American Red Cross in its fund raising efforts."

NATIONAL CATHOLIC WELFARE CONFERENCE: "The great worth of the American Red Cross has become more obvious as the war develops and as our fighting men testify. Gladly, therefore, we recommend every generosity on the part of the American people in the 1945 campaign. . . ."

CENTRAL CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN RABBIS: "The Red Cross is the most appealing philanthropic cause before the American people today. May the outstanding success of the 1945 Red Cross War Fund campaign demonstrate the spiritual calibre of the American people."

This Bank is
Eager to Make Loans

The money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earning, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

Unlike the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A loan helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed—all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Marines Use Land Based Rockets

Members of a marine rocket platoon tote their equipment over rough Bougainville terrain to the front lines. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Inadequate traction is one of the causes of automobile smash-ups in winter traveling. Inadequate traction can be due to smooth tires that should be recapped.

Rubber had a strong influence in the spending of 17½ billion dollars on street and highway construction and maintenance in the U. S. in the ten years ended 1942.

The materials used in the making of cord fabrics for synthetic motor vehicle tires are the same as used in prewar natural rubber tires—cotton and rayon.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Japs Fight to the Last on Iwo; Lend-Lease Aids Russ Assault; 9,000 Planes Pace Push on Nazis

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Floated to wherever it is needed, this huge drydock submerges to permit entry of vessel, which is then secured to keel blocks. Upon rising, the drydock lifts the ship from water and allows workers to service the vessel.

PACIFIC:

To the Last Man

Entrenched in caves, well equipped with light and heavy guns and ordered to fight to the last man, Japan's 20,000 defenders of tiny Iwo Jima island put up a fanatical, though hopeless, fight for this tiny stepping-stone to Tokyo in the face of an overpowering marine assault supported by the thundering bombardment of U. S. naval vessels and aircraft.

Sgt. Roy E. Heinecke 1st Marine on Iwo

Far to the south, U. S. army troops, mopping up remnants of Japanese opposition in Manila, encountered equally fanatical resistance in bitter close-quarter fighting, typified by the wild action inside the Manila hotel, where Yanks shot it out up stairways, through corridors and in rooms to clean the enemy from the top floors.

Iwo Jima's airfields, from which the Japs threatened the advance U. S. base in the Marianas 800 miles away, were the prize objectives of the marine assault, which carried clear across the southern end of the island in the early fighting. Holed up in the rolling country, and wiped out only after intensive fire, the Japs exacted a heavy toll of the invaders, with losses far above those suffered at Tarawa.

Inside Japan

From inside Japan came reports of a lowering wartime living standard of a country noted for frugal accommodations in peace, and of a rigid civilian discipline.

With 20 per cent less food than before the war, each Jap has been restricted to monthly allotments of a half pound of sugar, four pounds of vegetables and 20 pounds of rice. Matches, medicine, gasoline, fuel and clothing are rationed, and the nation's women are asked to cut off their kimona sleeves and wear overalls to ease the apparel pinch.

All men between 12 and 60, and unmarried women between 12 and 40, must register for compulsory labor, and employees must report for work in war plants despite air raids.

WAGE BOOSTS:

Held Up

Inter - governmental wrangling complicated recent War Labor board decisions boosting worker incomes within the framework of the stabilization program pegging general wage increases to 15 per cent of January, 1941, levels.

In the cases involving 145,000 packing-house and 50,000 textile workers, WLB grants were held up until settlement of WLB's dispute with office of Economic Stabilizer Director Vinson over necessity of OPA to determine whether any pay boosts would require a markup in distributors' costs, thus affecting the price control program.

In passing on the packing-house workers case, WLB called upon the companies to bear the cost of employees' clothing, tools and upkeep of implements, and also directed that the guaranteed work week must be extended from 32 to 36 hours. In the case of the textile workers, the WLB increased the minimum wage from 50 to 55 cents an hour and granted a flat 5 cents an hour boost to preserve present geographical and job differentials.

News Curiosities . . .

Army records show that young men of the present generation are about two-thirds of an inch taller than their fathers who fought in World War I. In the age group 20 to 30 years, the proportion of men 5 feet, 10 inches or over is 27.5 per cent, as against 22.4 per cent in 1917. The proportion of six-footers today is 8.8 per cent, compared with 6.5 in the last war, it was found.

LEND-LEASE:

Over 35 Billion

With lend-lease reaching an all-time high in the first half of 1944 due to preparations for D-Day and the great Soviet winter offensive, such aid for the whole year reached almost 15½ billion dollars and a grand total of over 35 billion dollars since going into effect.

In recounting lend-lease aid, Foreign Economic Administrator Leo Crowley pointed out that the U. S. has shipped 362,000 motor vehicles alone to Russia, and that on some parts of the eastern front American trucks are carrying more than one-half the supplies for Red troops. In addition, Crowley said, Russia has received 12,000 planes.

Compared with Russia, Britain has received 80,000 vehicles and 8,500 planes, Crowley revealed, but other shipments have made the United Kingdom the largest recipient of lend-lease, with 43 per cent of the total. With the opening of the new supply road from India to China, the U. S. expects to materially boost deliveries to the latter, with plans calling for shipment of 15,000 trucks.

Mentioning that it took only 1¼ per cent of cigarette production, and less than 1 per cent of the beef supply, Crowley said that lend-lease was not a determining factor in civilian shortages.

EUROPE:

Air Help

Massing almost their entire strength, Allied air chieftains threw upwards of 9,000 fighters and bombers at Nazi targets on both the western and eastern fronts in support of ground troops hacking forward against subborn opposition.

Disruption of enemy communications feeding their embattled forces in the west and Italy was the objective of the 7,000 planes the U. S. and British sent out, with the heavies cascading tons of explosives on rail yards and the fighters swooping down out of the skies to shoot up locomotives, freight cars and motor vehicles.

Fortifications as well as communications were the targets of some 2,000 Russian planes in the east, concentrated against the enemy in East Prussia, where the Nazis put up a stiff fight to hold open the Baltic port of Pillau above besieged Koenigsberg.

In the ground fighting in the west, the whole front was aflame as the U. S. 9th and part of the 3rd armies drove for the Rhineland with its all important industry, while the other part of the 3rd and the 7th armies clamped a tightening vise on the Saar basin with its rich coal and iron deposits.

As the Yanks slugged forward, in stiff fighting, British and Canadian Tommies continued to make slow, but steady, progress at the far northern end of the Siegfried line, enveloping the vital road hub of Calcar, upon which German defenses turned for preventing a sweep to the rear of their whole Rhine land front.

In the east, German women, in furs and plain clothes, were put to work building barricades in Berlin as Marshal Ivan Konev's First Ukranian army drew up from the south on a line with Marshal Gregory Zhukov's First White Russian force for the grand assault on the Nazi capital. Meanwhile, the Reds continued to press their attacks against German forces threatening the flanks of Konev's and Zhukov's armies.

Valuable State

Saxony, which is feeling the pressure of Soviet might, is the western neighbor of Soviet-conquered Silesia. It is one of Germany's most valuable states, ranking third in population and sixth in area. It led the Reich in the production of textiles, used its farms and forests thriftily, profitably worked mines among the oldest in Germany, made Dresden china known throughout the civilized world.

Roughly triangular, Saxony is a little larger than Connecticut.

We Owe Us

There is a five-year-old epigram that runs like this: "Who cares anything about the national debt? We only owe it to ourselves." It implies that we are sure to be very easy with ourselves on collection day, but a lot depends on whether we can afford to be lenient. We owe ourselves a lot of money and we never will be able to collect even the interest on it unless we work hard and pay our taxes.

The debts we owe ourselves are genuine debts, and bigger than most of us realize. I know some people who owe themselves new cars, or new tires for their old cars. Since they can't buy these items, they are spending their money for other things . . . things to enjoy now. Have you heard about the errand boy who needed shoes but had no stamp, so he spent $6 for theatre tickets?

Tinkling Cymbals

Easy money that rattles in our pockets because there is nothing to buy is not prosperity. Actually it is bogus money. We must never forget that prosperity is born of work. If higher income can't help me live better, my improved income is phony. America is bleeding in war and suffering in want this very day. Our needs are no less real because certain items have been taken off the market.

National income figures for the United States illustrate the point perfectly. On paper, national income was 135 billion dollars in 1943, breaking all records, but much of the money our people received was "stage money." It wouldn't spend. Actually we Americans received 20 billion dollars less take-home money in 1943 than we did in 1929, call it 150 million dollars a day less. Add nine 0's to each of the figures in the following table, making them billions:

Figures in billions	1929	1943	Short
National Income	$81	$135
Government Deficit	none	56
Federal Taxes	3	21
Net	$78	$58	$20

The average 1944 wage is more cents per hour; the average salary is more dollars per month; our national income is more billions per year than in any previous boom, but we are in debt. It is plain from the figures that when the debt is subtracted from what we call our national income it is by no means large. The debt must be paid in money that represents constructive work, doing and making useful things for better living.

A Homely Story

On the morning of November 12, 1918, so the story goes, a dusky soldier in a U.S. labor battalion overslept two or three bugle calls and was waked at last by his sergeant gruffly ordering him to rise.

"Y'all kan't boss me roun' no mo," he said, half asleep. "Dis wah am ovah. I jes sign up fer de duration."

"How right you is, boy!" the sergeant replied. "De wah am ovah, sho 'nuff, but de duration . . . it have jes begin."

More Responsibility

Official accounts of military gains, one after another, can't help but build hopes for peaceful years to come. The foregoing anecdote is offered to suggest this:

When the fighting stops, it will not be a signal for everybody to commence sleeping late and trying to subsist on income from wartime earnings. Unless we are ready to tighten our belts and do our part to meet our national obligation, the duration will have just begun.

Mrs. Theo. Ness was confined to her bed over the week end with the flu.

Several ladies gave Mrs. Paul Olson a party on her birthday.

Mrs. Eddy Henning and children have been on the sick list the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Swenson visited relatives at Oklee over the week end.

MINNESOTA FARMERS WARNED TO AVOID LAND SPECULATION

CHICAGO. — Minnesota farmers were warned not to let prevailing high food prices lure them into the pitfalls of land speculation and over-expansion, in a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Such a step brought economic ruin to many in the wake of World War I," the statement points out. "It can bring disaster again this time.

"After this war, American farmers will have to compete in world markets. Because of present high food prices, many farmers are being tempted to acquire additional acreage.

"The government is already planning to give homesteads to servicemen. When this is done, the owner of an expensive farm will be in a tough spot to produce crops in competition with a man who has no capital investment in the soil portion of his food factory.

"The only way the American farm can successfully meet either local or world competition in the postwar years, is to produce crops at a lower cost per unit. In such a program, the steady use of mixed fertilizer will be an enormously important factor. More bushels per acre can, and will mean, more food from less land. It will also mean more good food per bushel.

"Therefore, the wise farmer will be the one who does not buy more land, but who increases the crop-yielding capacity of his present land by soil improvement, by the application of mixed fertilizer, containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. He will actually make two stalks of corn grow where one grew before.

Ask ANY SERVICEMAN

He'll tell you he doesn't want to return to his home community and find a lot of drastic changes.

Talk to the newspaper or magazine correspondents who have lived with the boys overseas. They say that our boys have a vivid picture of their homes and the community life in their minds at all times.

The boys want to return to "Main Street" as they remember it. The Sweet Shop on the corner, a chocolate malted while they talk over the big Dance on Friday evening—or a "chinning bee" with a pal over a cold bottle of refreshing beer.

Would it be fair to the millions of service men overseas to change our present laws and customs at this time, especially those affecting personal privileges? Let the service men who are fighting to maintain the American Way of Living have a voice in making any changes in this way of living.

Regularly, evidence is received covering but two month and procedure is such that only one draft may be issued to a producer in any given peried.

The 1945 collections of current taxes were $21,339.71 greater than they were during a similar period in 1944 when they totaled $111,866.21, indicating continued prosperity among residents of Marshall county.

With delinquent tax properties at a low ebb in the county, collections of delinquent taxes continued to show a steady decline, the delinquent collections in January and February this year totaling only $4,845.69 or $1,331.45 less than during a similar peried a year ago when the collections reached $6,177.14.

Collections are now being turned over to the County Auditor's office for distribution to the various tax levying units of Marhall county.

The Fluff plant has now stepped up production. Two shifts are now working there. O. T. Ness, manager, reports that the company at Ashipun, Wis. were running low on processed fluff so they had to got out more here.

This Bank is Eager to Make Loans

The money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earning, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

Unlike the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A loan helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed—all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

Sheep Are Considered as Landowners in England

Because large flocks of sheep preceded man, many centuries ago, in the occupancy of the land that is now Cumberland, England, their descendants have since been regarded as the real owners by the farmers who have maintained them for their wool.

Thus, even today, the sale and purchase of one of these farms automatically includes its sheep.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

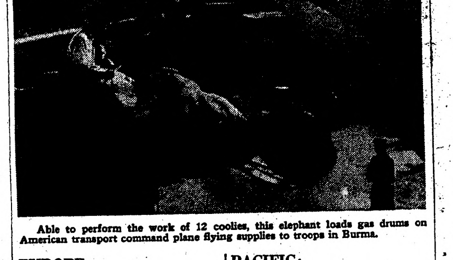
Germans Fight to Hold Vital Industrial Districts in West; F.D.R. Draws Pattern for Peace

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Able to perform the work of 12 coolies, this elephant loads gas drums on American transport command plane flying supplies to troops in Burma.

EUROPE:

Vital Areas

With Allied armies poised against both the vital Ruhr and Saar valleys, the Germans fought with their backs against the wall in a desperate effort to hold on to these industrial districts so important to their ability to continue the war.

Already heavily battered by aerial bombardment, the Ruhr and Saar faced the prospect of destructive artillery drum-fire, destined to lay their smoke-blackened cities and coal and iron-mining districts in gaunt ruins.

Offering only sporadic resistance to the rolling columns of U. S. and British troops west of the Rhine, the Germans beat a steady retreat back to the river, evidently intending to put up a strong stand behind the 1,300 to 3,270 foot wide waterway rather than in the rolling plains before it, where superior Allied armor could chew up their diminishing strength.

During the Nazis' withdrawal, fleets of Allied bombers roared over rear areas, not only smashing at road and rail lines in an effort to hamper troop movements, but also hitting at armored formations concentrated behind the Rhine for a last ditch defense of the Ruhr. Full extent of the magnitude of the Allied aerial bombardment can be gathered from reports that British-based U. S. planes alone dropped 51,000 tons on Germany in February.

While falling back to the Rhine on the U. S. 9th and 1st and the British 2nd army fronts in the north, the Germans utilized the rugged Eifel and Hunsbruck mountain country at the northern rim of the Saar in an effort to slow up the U. S. 3rd army's smash to the south. In every way, the Germans, familiar from A to Z with the country, were making every attempt to use the terrain to meet the Allied threat with a minimum of manpower.

Slightly larger than the state of Delaware, the besieged Ruhr cradled 75 per cent of the enemy's war industry in 1942, with its great coal deposits, estimated at 90 per cent of Germany's reserves and half of continental Europe's, forming the basis for its manufactories. Besides armaments, the Ruhr's 5,000,000 people produced steel, chemicals, pig iron, textiles, synthetic oil, high octane gas, rayon, drugs, plastics, dyes, bricks, glass and pottery.

Smaller than Rhode Island, the Saar also relied upon massive coal beds and iron deposits for the basis of its thriving industry, which produced steel, machinery, cement, plate glass, shoes, paper and textiles besides war goods.

Pocketed before by the Germans during the latter's great sweeps through Russia earlier in the war, wily Red generals were taking no chances on being nipped off all over again on the eastern front.

Although their forces had reached the Oder and Neisse rivers due east of Berlin on a broad front, the Red generals sought to minimize the possibilities of a German attack on their flanks far to the rear of the forward positions.

Holding up their fire on the central front until securing their flanks, the Reds exerted strong pressure against the Germans strung out along the Baltic coast immediately above the right wing of Zhukov's 1st White Russian army. To the south on the left wing of Konev's 1st Ukrainian army, the Reds guarded against the danger of a Nazi thrust from Upper Silesia, where the latter had set up strong lines to defend the industrial district and approaches to Czechoslovakia's Axis-worked war plants.

PACIFIC:

Share Spotlight

Carrier pilots, marines and army men all shared the spotlight in the developing attacks aimed at smashing Jap outposts of the home islands to smoothen the road to Tokyo.

Unchallenged by the once-vaunted Nipponese imperial fleet, Vice Admiral Marc Mitscher's famed Task Force 58 continued to roam in the enemy's home waters, with his carrier planes, following up daring attacks on Tokyo, smashing at the Ryukyu islands flanking the sea route to the east.

Having overrun the southern half of Iwo Jima, battle-hardened marines pressed the remnants of 20,000 defenders into the northern part of the island, using flame throwers along with light arms to root the enemy from well-designed natural entrenchments.

With face deleted according to censorship rules, Jap prisoner receives smoke from U. S. marines on Iwo Jima.

In the Philippines, army men, having cleared Manila, fanned out to the north, east and south to clear resistance from the rest of Luzon, with heavy fighting still ahead.

WORLD PEACE:

Pattern for U. S.

Once quoted as saying that scholarly Woodrow Wilson failed to secure U. S. entrance into the League of Nations because he was not a politician, Master Politician Franklin D. Roosevelt fired the first gun in the campaign to obtain approval for this country's participation in a postwar organization to preserve peace in an address to the nation and congress on the historic Yalta conference.

To assure the effectiveness of a postwar peace program, the President said U. S. collaboration must be two-fold:

First, this country must join in a world organization to suppress aggression, if necessary, by force.

Second, the U. S. must provide relief to alleviate suffering in the liberated states, and furnish credits for the reconstruction of their economy so that they might be able to resume full production and stand on their own.

"There can be no middle ground," declared the President. "We shall have to take the responsibility for world collaboration or we shall have to bear the responsibility for another world conflict. . . ."

Aid French

In an agreement that might set the pattern for future arrangements, the U. S. granted the French a 2½ billion dollar lend-lease credit to be paid within 30 years.

Under the agreement providing for shipment of over 1½ billion dollars of raw materials, food, petroleum products and light manufacturing equipment, repayment would be in 30 annual installments at 2⅜ per cent interest, while deliveries of almost 1 billion dollars of locomotives, freight cars, machinery for mines, industrial equipment, ships and barges would be made with a 20 per cent down payment and 30-year amortization of the remainder.

To maintain the present French army and double its strength of eight divisions, the U. S. agreed to continue lend-leasing military supplies. In return, the French promised increased reciprocal aid.

Price Supports Aid British Farmers

Although British farmers now are being paid adequate prices for practically all the main food products to return a profit on the farm by the government, the present British policy is not assured after the war, it was reported.

British farmers enjoyed prosperity during World War I, but the repeal of price and wage guarantees in 1920 left the farmers without protection when prices for their products dropped, driving much land into use as pasture.

In the early 1930s, British agriculture had become so hard pressed that a system of direct subsidization was adopted. The subsidization system was superseded after the outbreak of World War II by a policy of guaranteed prices for essential farm products.

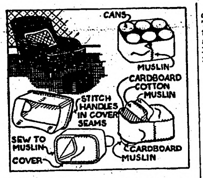
Add to the Comforts of Your Sitting Room With Footstool Made of Cans

By Ruth Wyeth Spears



THE "sitting room" of two generations ago was cozy and planned for use. Not the least of its comforts were the late footstools to be used with the most frequented chairs. These were covered with bright carpet or other heavy material and, if you examined them, you found that inside there were cans filled with sand for weight and then bound together and padded.

Such a stool cost not a cent. Nor did it require any carpenter work. Mother or the girls could put one together in no time from things on hand and there it was ready for years of service. You can do the same. The diagrams in this sketch show exactly how to go about it.

NOTE—This footstool is from BOOK 3 of the series offered with these articles. This book also contains more than 30 other things to make for your home from odds and ends plus inexpensive new materials. Booklets are 15 cents each postpaid and requests should be sent to:

THE best way to relieve the monotony of a job is to think up a better way of doing it.

One invention the world really needs—an amplifier for the voice of conscience.

Ideas are funny little things, they don't work until you do.

Be careful that you don't put clouds in somebody else's blue sky.

At times it shows a fine command of the language to say nothing.

Better an ounce of example than a pound of advice.

Many a man who takes himself seriously is looked on as a joke by others.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Spare synthetic tires carried on vehicles should be protected against sun and weather. Synthetic casings are particularly subject to sun checks, the beginning of cracks and mileage wasters.

Botanists designate the Eucommia ulmoides as "the only hardy rubber tree." It is an ornamental tree with 3 per cent rubber content, an amount that does not encourage commercial extraction.

Tests have demonstrated that in many respects typewriter and business machine rolls or platens of synthetic rubber are equal or superior to those of natural rubber.

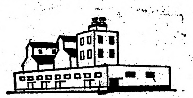
TO COMPLY WITH GOVERNMENT REQUESTS—OUR ANNUAL MEETING FOR 1945 HAS BEEN POSTPONED

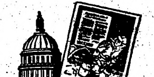
A year of progress

By and For the Farmers of the Northwest



NEW AND FINER FACILITIES

. . . to serve the growing needs of Northwest farmers. During this year Land O'Lakes erected a new Feed and Seed mill at Thief River Falls. Another new plant is under construction at Minneapolis. New poultry operation plants were opened at Aitkin and Albert Lea, Minn. A new cheese plant at St. Peter, Minn. A new locker plant at Lakefield, Minn.



"AMERICA'S No. 1 WAR PRODUCER"

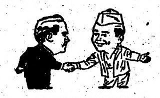
That's the title of an advertisemens which ran in Washington, D.C., and throughout the Northwest, in the interests of dairy farmers—promoting the inclusion of labor costs in the method of figuring parity. Through affiliation with other national farm and dairy groups, Land O' Lakes officials spent many days on similar industry problems—warding off dangers like the elimination of the price differentials in butter grading.

HOW CAN A BUTTER DEALER BE SHORT—AND STILL BE HAPPY?

20,000 regular Land O'Lakes Sweet Cream Butter dealers can tell you! During the critical butter shortage, Land O' Lakes has given all grocers—large or small—supplies in proportion to their previous sales. All have received a regular—though smaller—supply. In this way—and through advertising that "sugar-coated" the shortage—we insured our quality preference with grocers and housewives for Land O' Lakes Butter!

EXTRA INCOME FOR DAIRYMEN

By the promotion and construction of many dry milk plants, Land O' Lakes has brought a new source of income to dairymen. Five years ago, dry milk was a negligible factor in Land O'Lakes production. But the government needed dry milk, and Land O'Lakes responded! Today, Land O' Lakes is perhaps the largest producer of dried milk in the world. This past year new plants were started or completed at Alexandria, Foley, Sandstone, Sebeca, Roseau, Minnesota; and Mondovi, Wisconsin. Land O'Lakes now assists dairymen in the production and marketing of dry milk from 17 centers!

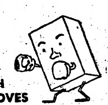


NEW MEMBERS

Scores of dairy plants started marketing through Land O'Lakes during this past year—thus assuring themselves a proportionate equity in this organization, strengthening the organization still more for older members.

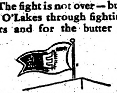
FOOD FOR FIGHTING MEN

Over 100 million pounds of dried milk, butter, cheese, dried eggs and poultry were supplied our armed forces and Lend-Lease. This is the most important part of all our war jobs. To do this job, it was necessary for Land O' Lakes members to work from dawn 'til dusk. It is estimated that the output per farm worker is now 50% above the pre-war level.



BUTTER WITH BOXING GLOVES

Throughout the year Land O'Lakes joined with other national dairy organizations and fought the inroads of substitutes—whose advantages are greater now because of rationing and shortages. The Maybank Bill, which would have eliminated the tax designed to protect the public from colored substitutes, was defeated. The fight is not over—but neither is Land O'Lakes through fighting for its members and for the butter industry.



AN ARMY AND NAVY "E"

The first such award ever given to a dry milk plant was received by the Land O'Lakes project in Whitehall, Wisconsin, November 30, 1944. This is one of a very few "E" awards ever given to an agricultural war enterprise.

A Message to Land O' Lakes Members

The past year is one of real accomplishment by your organization.

You have every right to be proud of the war job you have done, and, God willing, you will do until victory.

As farmers, however, we know our job in peace or war is never done. Ahead are critical days. Manpower and equipment are both dangerously scarce. Substitutes are making daily inroads into the buying habits of dairy product customers. Misunderstanding of the business of farming—its natural and economic problems—has and probably will again upset our prices and production.

But by cooperative effort, Land O'Lakes has accomplished much—and will accomplish more. In one generation, your organization has grown to a yearly volume of over $75,000,000.00. Every dairyman who markets through a member dairy plant is a proportionate owner of this vast business.

That is real and tangible evidence of your progress. Much more valuable are the intangible benefits of your cooperative efforts. Dollars cannot measure the spirit, the vision, the inner strength of mutual self-help that is the greatest asset of your own Land O'Lakes organization.

Mental Hazard

Driving a golf ball over a pond requires a type of skill altogether different from lifting it across a likesize patch of green grass. I don't know golf but men who play well have made me understand the difference. They call it a mental hazard, and life is full of them. A mental hazard seems to be something that offers a threat but presents no actual hindrance.

Observation makes me believe that the magnitude of many world problems, currently discussed in print and on the air, creates a mental hazard. Utter bigness causes people to turn their thoughts away from facts that concern them vitally. Postwar planning is a good illustration. It is something that needs the serious attention of millions of thinking Americans.

Like Seeing Ghosts

I have heard several intelligent people recently talk as if postwar planning might be something outside of their world; a job for some mysterious committee of mental giants or supernatural beings. Actually, only a small part of postwar planning needs to be central planning. It is a job for us all and the sooner we start it the more promptly prosperity will follow peace.

People who imagine they see ghosts are harmed as much by them as if they really existed. People who get alarmed at a big undertaking and run away from their part of it, are in much the same class. Planning is for everybody with a job, every firm with a business, every family with a farm. Things are going to be different soon, and we will need to be ready.

Millions Unemployed

Spectres of unemployment shaped in the smoke of war are scary enough to frighten even the wizard statisticians who know how to tame wild figures. That street corner estimate: "20 million without jobs," is probably 25% high. America has 40 million people working now at jobs they can keep after the war. After the war, however, 55 million will have to work if the nation prospers.

The difference is 15 million. This many will come from our armed forces and from war baby industries; too many to be idle. Fewer job hunters than that made 1932 a very bad year. But (not counting the jobs that will die with the war) our industries are using 40 million people now and should use 55 million in peacetime. It does not divide exactly even, but call it a gain of one man in four.

Intelligent Guessing

Men who won the war, men from uniform and men from munition plants, are returning to peacetime pursuits and we must have work for them. Anybody can plan on a oneman scale. The first step is for each of us in his own shop or office to figure out about three things that might happen to his business when peace comes. Then line up these "could be" postwar changes in 1-2-3 order, the most likely one first.

Step No. 2: Plan what's best to do in each of the three cases. Try to make plans justify four workers where three work now. Nobody can plan for you. Nobody knows your business like you do. When war ends, every man should have quick access to his own deliberate thinking, and be ready to welcome peace. It is an idea for small business, but small firms normally employ 85% of America's workers.

Had Income Taxes In 1864

As Minnesota citizens study and sweat over withholding tax receipts and Form 1040, while endeavoring to calculate their past, present, and future obligations in income taxes to the United States government, it is interesting to recall that their great grandparents some eighty years ago, in the midst of another great American war, were probably undergoing similar strains.

In order to meet the heavy costs of the Civil War, Congress on June 30, 1864, as a part of a general internal revenue act, established a federal tax upon incomes for that and successive years, up to and including 1870. The law is found in the "United States Statutes at Large" for 1864, a copy of which may be found in the library of the Minnesota Historical Society.

The federal income tax law of 1864, applying to all persons residing in the United States and to all citizens of the United States resident abroad, after allowing for a single $600 family exception, decreed a five percent tax upon all incomes up to $5000, seven and one-half percent upon any excess up to $10,000, and a ten percent duty on excesses above that amount. Persons in the civil, military and naval service of the United States, including congressmen, were assessed a flat five percent. Deductions somewhat similar to the major items in the present income tax law were permitted.

Because of the differences in the purchasing power of money and in wage scales between 1864 and 1645, it is not easy to determine how large a proportion of the population had to pay the tax. Legislation in 1870 continued the income through 1872, but reduced the rate to two and one-half percent, and increased the family excemption to $2,000.

Farmers from Holt, Excel, East Valley and Agdar townships met here Monday in connection with the sign-up meeting for the food production goals for Marhall County for 1945.

WAR BONDS WILL PAY FOR PEACETIME SOIL REPLENISHMENT WORK

CHICAGO.—Farmers were urged to set up a "sinking fund" of War Bonds to provide money later on for peacetime soil rebuilding expenditures to pay back to the land the plant food elements now being borrowed to meet present crop goals.

"That payment of this debt will be absolutely necessary once the war emergency is over," says a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee, "is evident from the peak rate at which nitrogen, phosphorus and potash have been used up.

YESSIR, I'LL BE SETTING PRETTY WHEN THIS WAR ENDS. NEW SOIL, NEW MACHINERY AND PARTS -
WAR BOND

"Growing crops to win the war is, of course, the farmer's prime job. A heavy draft on savings of plant food elements is a relatively small contribution to victory, if proper steps are taken to repay the borrowed soil wealth later on.

"Money reserves built up by buying War Bonds right now, during the present improved agricultural income period, means that farmers will be strong enough in cash savings to undertake necessary programs of fertility restoration."

With The Men In Service

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Ness received the sad news on Sunday that their son Pfc. Rubin Ness had been killed in action on Luzon Island in the Phillipines. Rubin had spent about two years in the army, and he was one of the boys from here who did not get a furlough home after he was through with his basic training. He was sent to the Pacific right after he was through the 13 weeks here and had been island hopping until he finally reached the Phillipines.

It was a sad shock to all to to hear this as Rubin was an up and coming young man, full of life and a good worker. He was one of the top ranking boys here in the Boy Scouts when he was a member of Troop 112. He was an Eagle Scout and the only one to receive the Silver Palm. He was about 22 years old.

Walter Peterson received word here Tuesday evening from his sister, Mrs. Sorenson in Minneapolis, that his brother-in-law, Pvt. Axel Sorenson had been killed in action in the mountains in Italy recently. Mr. and Mrs. Sorenson have been married 14 years and have three children, the oldest 13 years and the youngest 18 months. Pvt. Sorenson was 33 years old.

Oliver Backlund S2c returned to the Great Lakes Navy Training Station near Chicago after spending his leave here with his mother Mrs. Inga Backlund and other relatives.

Sgt. Johnnie Lillevold, Grygla, retured to Bakersfield, California on Tuesday after spending a 21-day furloug at his home in Grygla and with friends here.

4H Club Leaders Make Plans

The Marshall County 4-H Leaders' Club made plans for the remainder of this club year at their meeting in Argyle last week.

Important activities include the One-Act Play and Music Contest which will be held the first part of April. Where the contest will be held will be determined by the location of the clubs participating.

June 24 was the date selected for the County 4-H Picnic to be held at Middle River State Park. Having the Achievement Day earlier in September was discussed. September 8 is the date selected tentatively.

The program for Leaders' Meetings include the following topics: gardening and tree planting, food preservation (canning and freezing), preparation of projects for exhibits, and others of interest.

Some time was spent at this meeting in discussing making out yearly program for the local clubs. All Clubs are urged to complete their programs of work as soon as possible.

Notice, Milk-Cream Producers

Farmers should hold all evidence of the sale of milk and cream until such time as their evidence covers the three month period of January, February and March, 1945, before submitting it to the county office, and requesting us to issue the sightdraft stated Chas. N. Kranz, Chairman of the A. A. A.

Regularly, evidence is received covering but two month and procedure is such that only one draft may be issued to a producer in any given period.

He has served pastorates at Naicam, Sask., Irene, So. Dak.; Menahga, Minn.; Maynard, Minn. and Navarino, Wisconsin. This Bank is Eager to Make Loans

The money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earning, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

Unlike the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A loan helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed—all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

Origin of 'Taps' Unknown; Ancient Greeks Used It

The original words and music of "Taps" are of unknown origin and are older than history. The ancient Greeks used them and they themselves did not know from whence they came. The words are:

"Love, good night
Must thou go
When the day and the night
Need thee so?
"All is well
Hasten all to your rest."

Popular belief is that taps was first used in the U. S. army when Gen. Daniel Butterfield of the 83rd Regular Pennsylvania Volunteers taught the tune to his bugler, Oliver Norton, by whistling it to him. This occurred at Harrison's Landing, Va., in July of 1862, after seven days of fighting before Richmond.

Youth and Age

The 12th century proverb, "If youth but knew, and age could do," was founded on an exclamation of Louis VI, to his counsellor, Suger, "What a pitiable state is this of ours, to never have knowledge and strength together! In my youth had I had knowledge, and in my old age, had strength been mine, I might have conquered many kingdoms."—Guizot.

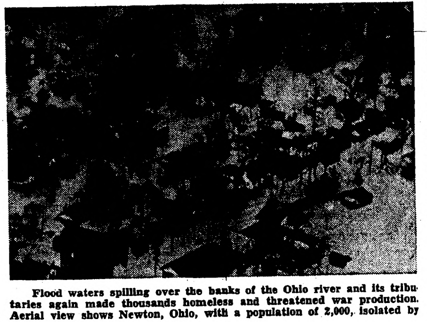
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Storm River Barriers To Mount Twin Drives on Reich; Thousands Homeless From Floods

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Flood waters spilling over the banks of the Ohio river and its tributaries again made thousands homeless and threatened war production. Aerial view shows Newton, Ohio, with a population of 2,000, isolated by the inundation.

EUROPE:
Span Barriers

From the west and from the east the great battle for Germany was begun, with a sorely pressed Nazi command, which once marshalled its legions in triumph, desperately attempting to stem the Allied tide.

Most significant of the Allied moves was the U. S. crossing of the Rhine in pursuit of a disorganized enemy, who had broken off the battle to the west of the river and attempted to flee to supposed security behind its broad span, previously uncrossed since Napoleon's time.

Smashing quickly through enemy rear-guards, who tried to slow up the U. S. and British advance and give the main body of their troops a chance to escape across the Rhine, Allied spearheads not only reached the historic river in short time but also spanned it with the intention of affording the disorganized enemy no opportunity to reform his ranks for a stiff defense of the waterway.

To Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges' 1st American army went the honor of being the first Allied unit to jump the Rhine below Cologne. Crossing where the river measured a quarter mile in width and its banks flattened out, Hodges' men steadily expanded their bridgehead for a thrust across the rolling hill country lying just below the vital Ruhr valley.

As Hodges' troops poured across the Rhine in the wake of Germans straggling inland, the enemy tried to chop up the American beachhead with mortar and artillery fire, and armored elements launched limited counterattacks in an attempt to trim the expanding foothold.

While Hodges' famous 1st attained the singular honor of becoming the first military force to cross the Rhine since 1813, the U. S. 9th and British and Canadian armies to the north and the U. S. 3rd army to the south also drew up to the river in record time, poised for the leap after having cleared huge pockets of enemy troops to their rear.

Meanwhile, the Russians launched a broad all-out assault on Berlin, with Red infantrymen, paced by armored columns, smashing deep into the enemy defenses west of the Oder.

Thus did the Allies breach the Germans' two river barriers guarding both ends of the Reich to carry the battle into the flatlands lying beyond, where the comparative levelness afforded their armored columns opportunity to wear down an enemy, whose recent strategy had called for extended use of terrain to economize dwindling forces.

From S/Sgt. Thomas J. Defilbaugh of Cumberland, Md., came the latest story of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's personal inspiration of his troops under fire. During the Allied comeback against Von Rundstedt's offensive in January, Yanks reached the swift and icy Sure river, and faced the task of crossing it to reach the strategic town of Bettendorf, commanding the countryside. When Patton saw that boats offered a perfect target for German gunners while it would be difficult to draw a bead on a man swimming across, he jumped into the swirling water and swam over to prove to his troops it could be done. Inspired, they followed, capturing Bettendorf.

Gen. Patton

PACIFIC:
Stubborn Foe

Despite the loss of over 225,000 men in the Philippine and Iwo Jima campaigns, the Japs continued to offer stiff resistance to American clean-ups in these sectors.

Indicative of the tenacity of the enemy was his withdrawal to the hulks of battered ships in Manila Bay to continue the fight with small arms fire after having been driven out of Manila itself. Although they already had lost over 212,000 men on both Leyte and Luzon, an estimated 60,000 Japs fought on from natural strongpoints against Yank attempts to compress them in the mountains lying to the east of Manila.

With more than 12,000 Japs already killed on Iwo Jima, marines still were forced to inch forward on the northern part of the tiny island to flush enemy remnants from the rocky hill positions. Because the Japs could retire to underground shelters during heavy aerial or artillery bombardment, the Leathernecks were compelled to root them out in close-in fighting.

FLOODS:
Thousands Homeless

Familiar but tragic scenes were reenacted again as the Ohio river and tributaries rose over their banks to flood surrounding lowlands and send thousands of homeless refugees scurrying to safety.

Operations of war industries in the rivers' paths were seriously affected as the waters rose, and residents of the great cities of Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Portsmouth and Louisville anxiously viewed the broadening crests, which threatened to spill over and flood their environs.

Of all the big cities, Portsmouth, with its 40,000 people, was most seriously endangered, with rising waters lapping at the 63-foot flood wall while state troopers and volunteers struggled to reinforce it with a sandbag levee.

With rain-swollen rivers flooding acres of low-lying farm land in Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi, thousands of residents of these areas also were forced to move to the uplands.

MANPOWER:
Showdown Near

With the senate still strongly opposed to compulsory labor, "work or fight" legislation headed for a showdown in conferences with the house, with sentiment strong for the grant of additional power to the War Manpower commission to continue to exert pressure toward the channeling of workers into needed industry.

At the same time, congress moved to draft unmarried nurses to provide the 20,000 needed to attend the growing battle casualties. Under legislation considered, nurses would be given the right to appeal induction, would be offered commissions even if drafted, and would be eligible for benefits under the G.I. bill of rights.

Vigorously opposed to the house's "work or fight" measure providing for army induction or fine and jail for failure of 18 to 45 year-old men to accept war essential employment, the senate pushed a substitute bill under which the WMC would set the limit on the number of employees any establishment could have, and regulate the hiring of people.

Wounded Pet Revives Stricken Master

This is the story of "Skippy," a Boston terrier that shared in the heroism attending the saving of an American freighter bombed off Leyte.

Though fired amidship by Jap explosives, with 14 members of the armed guard casualties, the vessel was saved by the crew's quick control of the flames and the merchant seamen's manning of the anti-aircraft guns against incoming enemy raiders between unloadings of supplies.

As bombs ripped Capt. Andrew W. Gavin's cabin, "Skippy," wounded by shrapnel, was blown into his master's room, where the officer lay unconscious amid the wreckage. Licking Captain Gavin's forehead despite his own injuries, "Skippy" revived him.

Noted Painter Didn't Sign Or Remember His Works

The famous Anglo-American painter, John Singer Sargent, who died in 1925, neglected to sign some of his works and even forgot, years later, ever having painted them. But he could easily identify these pictures in a unique way. If a painting was his, a microscope would reveal a fine red or green line painted around the white objects because, owing to an eye defect, he saw them bordered in one of these colors.

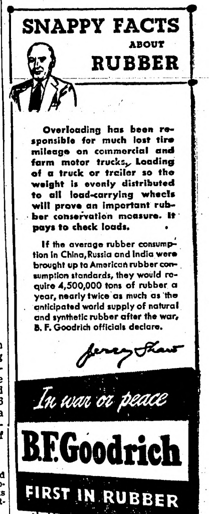
RUB ON MENTHOLATUM



SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Overloading has been responsible for much lost tire mileage on commercial and farm motor trucks. Loading of a truck or trailer so the weight is evenly distributed to all load-carrying wheels will prove an important rubber conservation measure. It pays to check loads.

If the average rubber consumption in China, Russia and India were brought up to American rubber consumption standards, they would require 4,500,000 tons of rubber a year, nearly twice as much as the anticipated world supply of natural and synthetic rubber after the war, B. F. Goodrich officials declare.

Production Payments For 1945

Announcement of tentative rates for continuation of dairy production payments throughtout 1945 should help Marshall County dairymen maintain their milk output at high levels, according to County AAA chairman, Chas. Kranz.

The War Food Administration has announced that, subject to approval by Congress, the dairy production payments will be paid in Minnesota at the following rates:

April thru June, 25 cents per hundredweight on whole milk and 10 cents a pound on butterfat; July thru September, 35 cents on whole milk and 10 cents a pound on butterfat; October thru December, 60 cents a hundredweight on milk and 16 cents a pound on butterfat.

Rates of payment for the program for the current three months, ending March 31, are 60 cents a hundredweight for whole milk and 10 cents a pound for butterfat. Farmers should hold their January, February and March sales slips until after April 1 since the next payment will be for the three-month period.

Chairman Kranz said that May 31 is the final date for farmers to file applications with the county AAA office for payment covering the January-March period.

He pointed out that the program proposed by WFA for the last nine months of this year should give dairymen about the same average returns on whole milk as in 1944 and should increase their returns on butterfat substantially.

The U. S. production goal for 1945 is at a record height, with Minnesota being asked to boost its production slightly above 1944. More production is needed to meet greater requirements for military as well as civilian uses.

Insure Wheat and Flax Crop

Marshall County growers of flax and spring wheat who are not contacted by a crop insurance sales agent before the deadline of April 10 for selling insurance in this county can get full insurance information from the county AAA office, according to County Chairman, Chas. N. Kranz.

Because of the great amount of work necessary to set up rate and yield figures for counties and farms since the insurance act became law last December 23 there will be only a short time for actual selling.

"We think that all farmers growing either flax or wheat are interested in the idea of Federal crop insurance," Mr. Kranz said. "It protects a farmer's investment of labor and money in his crop. The new Federal program is set up on a non-profit basis, and it is up to the farmers to make it work."

Premium rates for the new insurance contracts are same countywide with average yield basis being established for each farm through the help of AAA committeemen.

Farmers or landlords can now have his flax or wheat crop insured by calling at the Marshall State Bank of Holt.

Get Your Hired Man Now

The farm help situation in Marshall County may become critical this spring unless every farmer cooperates to the fullest extent on the labor program.

It is high time to get your hired help now. It is possible that workers can be brought into the county from other areas if we act at once.

There are quite a number of small, low income farms in the county, wthere the father and probably a boy 15 to 17 years of age are working. It would be well for these farmers to get these young men onto farms where they can work full time and draw good wages. There are a large number of farmers who will need tractor operators this spring, and who will be willing to pay top wages to get some one during seeding.

If you need a man see your County Agent at once.

The entirement allotment of birds of various kinds have come back for their summer stay the past two weeks. The crows, meadow larks, ducks and robins came early last week and more have arrived this week.

The roads in this area are the worst this spring that they have been for many years. This is due to the fact that it froze up so wet last fall and that we had early rains now. However, the heavy rain Monday let the frost out and the water in sinking, but a lot of frost boils are coming up in all roads including the State Trunk Highway.

Agricultural Credit Loans

Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation (RACC) loans are avaiable in Minnesota this year to finance the production of potatoes and turkeys, according to word received by County AAA and War Board Chairman Chas N. Kranz.

Since increased production of turkey meat and potatoes is a major objective of the 1945 war food production program in Minnesota, these loans are offered to farmers who cannot obtain credit from other sources.

Interest on RACC loans is charged at 5½ percent for the time the money is outstanding on the actual amount of the money used. In addition, there is a deduction of one-half percent for inspection fees and service charges.

This Bank is Eager to Make Loans

The money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earning, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

Unlike the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A loan helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed—all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

There are two big "unknowns" in trying to anticipate the eventual "balance of power" between natural and synthetic rubber, in the opinion of John L. Collyer, President of The B. F. Goodrich Co. These unknowns are respective production costs and the relative value of these types of rubber in different kinds of products several years hence.

During the manufacture of one variety of synthetic rubber, materials must be kept at a temperature of 100 degrees below zero.

Use of rayon has improved the performance of synthetic truck tires as much as 375 per cent compared with tires made of cotton cord, some industry authorities report.

CALLING ALL EXPERIENCED SEAMEN BACK TO SEA!

"The Need is Urgent," says the High Command!

43,000 experienced seamen now working in shore jobs are vitally needed back on ships—if our fighting men are to get supplies to finish the job!

ADMIRAL LAND: "Ships can't sail without experienced men—and we just don't have enough men for our expanding Merchant Marine. If you have ever been a Mate, Engineer, Radio Officer or "AB," your country needs you now!"

"Up-Grading is Fast," say Men Now at Sea!

What are your chances for advancement in a shore job when the war ends? Read what this seaman says and you'll get a hint of what the Merchant Marine offers!

L. O. WARREN, a Captain at 27, says: "I came up from Third Mate to Ship Master in three years because of the big opportunity now in the Merchant Marine. I know I'd never have made that rate of progress in a shore job."

"The Future is Bright," say Industry Leaders!

Government heads, large shipping companies and union leaders agree that the postwar prospects for the Merchant Marine exceed anything ever before known.

FRANK J. TAYLOR, Pres., American Merchant Marine Institute: "With nearly every country in the world to be rebuilt, there is every reason to believe the Merchant Marine will move into a great era of expansion after the war."

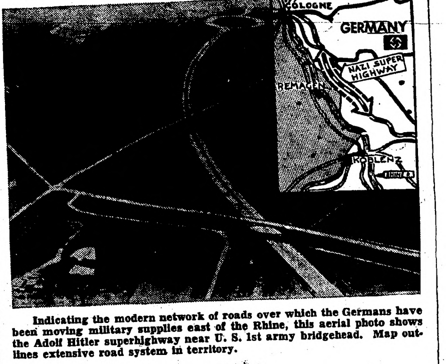
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Report German Peace Bids as Allies Press Attacks on Reich; Act to Assure Civilian Supply

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Indicating the modern network of roads over which the Germans have been moving military supplies east of the Rhine, this aerial photo shows the Adolf Hitler superhighway near U. S. 1st army bridgehead. Map outlines extensive road system in territory.

EUROPE:
Rebuff Nazis

Amid a flurry of talk that high German groups had sounded the U. S. and Britain out on peace possibilities, Allied armies maintained their heavy pressure against Nazi lines in both the east and west.

According to one report, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower rebuffed Field Marshal von Rundstedt's approach for an armistice, under which the latter offered to pull German armies beyond the Rhine, where they have been forced, and disarm them.

Published in Sweden's Svenska Dagbladet, the other report dealt with German overtures to a British official for an armistice for preserving the Reich as a bulwark against the "Bolshevik menace." To include the retention of the Nazis in office and the evacuation of occupied territory, the offer also was flatly rejected, it was said.

Even as the reports came through, Germany rocked under the tremor of continued heavy aerial assaults, aimed at Nazi industrial installations, communication lines feeding their armies and troop concentrations massed to meet Allied attacks in both east and west.

In the east, Russia grouped the bulk of her manpower for the grand assault on Berlin, heavily defended by an extended network of pillboxes, tank traps and infantry obstacles, which could be flooded.

As the Russians built up their forces beyond the Oder for the smash on the German capital, other Red forces were on the move in both Upper Silesia and Hungary, in an effort to pry open the roads to the rich industrial districts of Czecholovakia and Austria, feeding the Nazi wehrmacht.

In the west, German war production was seriously threatened as U. S. and British armies closed on both the Ruhr and Saar valleys. Not only was the Ruhr menaced by the U. S. 9th and British 2nd armies from the west, but Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges' U. S. 1st moved up from its Remagen bridgehead to threaten it from the south.

The U. S. 3rd and 7th armies also were applying a vise on the Saar valley, with the 3rd pressing in from the north and east, and the 7th squeezing ahead from the south. Taking full advantage of their extensive road system and short supply lines, the Germans fought viciously to hold both all-important regions.

'Town Buster' Latest Bomb

To Britain's famed "blockbuster" and "earthquake" bombs has been added another, the 11-ton "town buster," developed to penetrate to the underground factories the Germans established to avoid surface bombardment.

Carried by Britain's four-engined Lancasters, the "town buster" measures 25½ feet in length and almost four feet in diameter. Upon releasing the heavy load, the huge planes have bounced up as high as 500 feet from relief of the weight.

Packing a tremendous wallop in itself, the "town buster" supplements the six-ton "earthquake" bomb, which sank the German battleship, Tirpitz, and penetrated 15-foot-thick concrete roofs of U-boat pens.

SERVE G.I.

All over Europe the transportation corps military railway services are hauling 50,000 tons a month of meats, fresh vegtables and dairy products—literally bringing "fillets in his foxhole" to G.I. Joe. Reefer cars make it possible to deliver good food in good condition.

Months before the invasion, at erection depots in different parts of England, men of the railway shop battalions labored to construct the reefer cars from prefabricated sections sent over from the States.

FOOD:
Probe Supply

James F. Byrnes

Following hard upon War Mobilizer Byrnes' formation of a special group to review all demands for non-military exports to protect essential civilian supplies in this country, senate war investigating committee announced the conduct of an inquiry into the food situation currently marked by the growing scarcity of meat.

Revelation of the senate committee's probe followed demands of midwestern senators for rectification of government food policies, which, they declared, discouraged fattening of cattle because of failure to bring prices and feed costs in line with production, and failed to place agriculture on a par with war industry.

Just before the congressional storm broke, Byrnes proclaimed the organization of a special group to determine that Europe's demands for relief and rehabilitation would not interfere with U. S. civilian needs, and even to review past commitments in the same light.

Following Byrnes' action, capital circles buzzed with talk that the War Food administration, for one, had approached him for help in allocating the shrinking food supply during 1945, with prospects of from 20 to 25 per cent less meat, 10 to 15 per cent less vegetable oils and fats, and 10 per cent less sugar.

Meanwhile, it was revealed, lend-lease purchases in recent weeks have been severely reduced because of the growing meat shortage. Although the government has been receiving larger allocations than formerly, it was pointed out, still the drop in slaughtering has reduced the volume available over last year, and practically only military demands are being satisfied.

As a result, lend-lease meat tonnage has been slashed almost 80 per cent in the last two months, with pork purchases in one week down about 84 per cent from last year, canned meats 86 per cent, and other products from 93 to 97 per cent.

PACIFIC:
Air Lashings

With long range U. S. bombers based within flying distance of Japan as a result of the recent conquest of outlying islands in bloody but valuable fighting, the enemy's great industrial cities have more and more been feeling the lash of heavy bombardment.

Carried on even as General MacArthur's forces in the Philippines tightened their grip on the sprawling archipelago guarding the inner China sea lane, and as begrimed marines finished off a stubborn foe on Iwo Jima, the B-29 raids on such Jap centers as Tokyo, Nagoya and Osaka are designed to cut down factory production and impair the flow of supply to the enemy's armies.

Meanwhile, General MacArthur's forces moved toward the climactic battle with the bulk of the enemy cornered on northeastern Luzon, and additional American landings to the south secured the sea passage through the Philippines to Manila.

CRIME

Release of the FBI's annual crime reports bulletin for 1944 reflects a general upward trend in crime during the year, Director J. Edgar Hoover said. He added that arrests of boys and girls 17 years of age totaled more than for any other group.

Arrests of boys under 18 were 18.8 per cent greater in 1944 than in 1941, the last peacetime year, and arrests of girls under 21 showed a 134 per cent gain over the same period.

For Play or Street

AN IDEAL warm weather ensemble—the sunback dress will help you acquire a nice tan. For street wear, toss on the trim bolero edged in ric rac to match the dress. If you like, make the dress in a bold flower print and have the bolero in a plain harmonizing shade.

Household Hints

To make strong flat seams in a dress you are sewing at home, stitch them twice—once the width you want and again along the edge. This makes seams lie flat, and they seldom pull out.

T-Sgt. Saxberg Is Recovering

The 159th Gen. Hospital, England

Struck by fragments of an enemy mine during an American attack on the town of St. Vith, Belgium, Technical Sergeant Elvin H. Saxberg. 28 is now recovering from wounds of both lower legs, left hip and left elbow at this United States Army general hospital in England. He has been awarded the Purple Heart.

"His condition has shown considerable improvement but he will require further treatment" said his ward surgeon, Captain Vincent R. Tokar of Passaic, New Jersey.

Platoon Sergeant in an armored infantry battalion, Sgt. Saxberg said the enemy had laid down a heavy barrage of artillery mortar and small arms fire in a determined effort to hold the town.

"We were advancing across a field when one of my boys stepped on a German shoe mine" he explained. "He was killed instantly, and several fragments struck me, breaking the bones in my lower legs. I received emergency treatment within 30 minutes, but the roads were so heavily mined I was not evacuted until about 17 hours later. I returned to England on a hospital ship."

Sgt. Saxberg is the son of Mrs Alma Saxberg. His wife, Mrs. Clarice Saxberg is living at present at 1450 220th St., Torrance, California.

Cpl. Roy Hagberg arrived home Thursday for a furlough at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. John Hagberg.

With The Men In Service

March, 16, 1945

Dear folks:

It is now about a year since we set sail from our port of embarkation to we knew not where. We boarded the ship at noon on a beautiful, sunlit day. She was tied up fast to the dock when we got on board and the first mate was bellowing orders in a lusty voice to the sailors and longshoremen who were loading and preparing the ship for the long, aching journey to our eventual destination. The clanking of chains, the soft chugging of the steam hoist and other noises of a busy seaport were punctuated by the merry laughter and wise cracks of the sailors. It was just another sea voyage to them - to us it was the first act of a great adventure.

Rumors as to where we were bound for ran rife thruout the ship. No one knew and the Captain was sailing under sealed orders. We were out on deck leaning on the rail, looking at the busy harbor and watching the sailors and longshoremen nonchalantly performing their duties.

Soon a small tugboat churned its way toward our ship and with expert maneuvering on the part of it's able crew slid gracefully alongside and made fast to our great ship. We were ordered below deck. Our ship began to quiver and we started to move. The first step of our journey was about to begin.

The sun was low on the western horizon when we again came out on deck and our transport was sliding thru the smooth waters without a roll and barely a murmur. All was quiet. Each man seemed to be overcome with awe and wonderment as perhaps the greater part of them had never even seen a ship before— to say nothing of crossing an ocean. Shore was barely discernable now and growing more distant and hazy as the ship churned it's way ahead. Out in the bay we were to become part of a huge convoy — ships of all descriptions. We came within hailing distance of another ship likewise loaded with soldiers and the boys suddenly came to life shouting all sorts of bantering remarks to the fellows on the other transport. We soon passed the ship and all was quiet again. Of a sudden we slowed down, stopped and dropped anchor to await the moment to set sail with the convoy. The sun sank in the west, the seagulls glided overhead and all was serene and peaceful.

We retired to our bunks which were very crowded, stacked six high and just leaving enough room for us to squeeze in. The bunks were canvas and if one doubled up his knees he would poke the man above him. We were to find we had embarked upon our journey with a rough and hardy crew — Rangers, each one a walking arsenal and trained for a special secret mission which I later read about in Yank, the Army weekly. (I am a tall man but two of the men in the secret mission outfit were enormous. Alongside of them I felt as David must have to Goliath) Badinage and repartee finally dribbled off into nothing and we were asleep.

In the morning we were awakned by the cheery call of "Chow in 15 minutes!" There was a scuffle for clothing and a rush to get up front in the chow line as those transport chowlines are long! After sweating out the chowline and getting our rations we went up on deck to be greeted by the fresh sea air and raucous crys of seagulls. The dawn was beautiful — wispy, silk-like fog hung over the dank marshes on shore and the sun shone blood-red thru the mists of early morning. The gigantic convoy had gathered during the night and was spread out over the waters as far as eye could see. The anchor was hoisted and our ship shudered as the giant propellars began to revolve. We were on our way!

Nine days at sea — half of our journey completed — we ran into rough weather. Angry waves licked at the deck. Our ship rolled and lunged in the turgid, boiling, waters and was tossed around as if it were but a chip of wood. The First Mate uttered an oath: "This blankety blank old tub would rock in a dry dock!" Three-fourths of our men, I would guess, were overcome with sea-sickness and the decks were slippery from emises. I was one of the few who did not become seasick.

The days slid by, intermingled with numerous little adventures and monotomy until one day mysterious, shadowy mountains poked their snow capped peaks above the horizon. Land Ho! Old descript fishing smacks, feluccas, sloops and boats of all descriptions, manned by swarthy men in a state of deshabille, became more and more abundant as we neared the mysterious port. A rusty, old tug-boat, with a crew of surly, rough looking, dark skinned, pirate-like individuals, who wore red bandanas around their heads and gold earings in their ears, churned its way toward us to guide us into port. I almost expected them to board us with sabers clenched between their teeth! They made fast to our ship and eased us up to the dock. The seaport looked like a Hollywood set with all the trimmings. Turbanned morrocans, red-capped sengalese and the "mattress cover" caped and hooded slippery Arab' A little Arab boy started singing "Lay that pistol down babe" in complete contrast to the surroundings. Casablanca! We had arrived!

(T-Sgt. Irvin Hagglund.)

John Hoffman who has been ill the past few months, was taken to a hospital at Thief River Falls on Saturday.

The Nazareth Lutheran church was filled to overflowing for the Easter services on Sunday.

This Bank is Eager to Make Loans

The money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earning, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

Unlike the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A loan helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed—all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

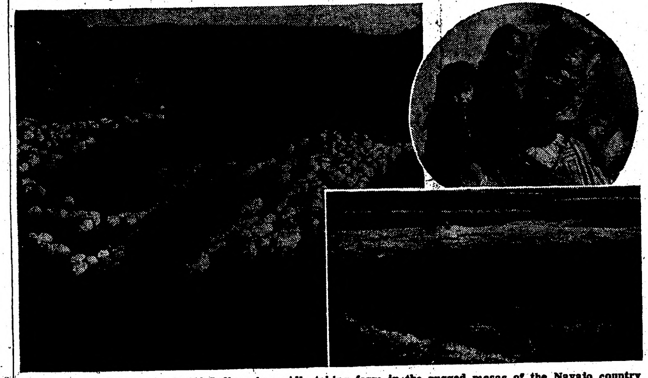
Children at Home Aboard Coast Guard Transports at Sea

Troop transports now consider the nursery as a "must." Thousands of refugees, repatriates and babies of U. S. servicemen are being brought to the United States aboard the U. Most of the children are bewildered but soon receive reassurance from Red Cross workers and members of the ships' crew.

Navajo 'Dust Bowl' Brings Disaster to Indians



Economic disaster for 55,000 Indians is rapidly taking form in the rugged mesas of the Navajo country in Arizona and New Mexico. A million or more sheep are the direct cause of the potential blight. Servicemen and women on the Burma front have organized several successful tiger hunts in this war theater during the last year.

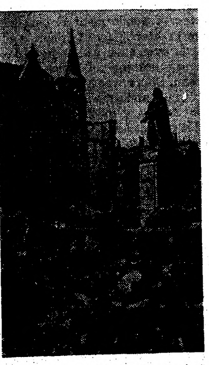
No Fish Shortage at Wauconda

This is the sight, and the smell, that greeted residents around Slocum Lake, Wauconda, Ill., when the ice went out. More than 100 tons of dead fish were washed ashore when the ice melted. Unfit for food, their only use will be as fertilizer, a shortage of which exists in many sections of the nation. Despite their condition they can be used.

Beethoven Standing



After the symphony of war had thundered through his home town of Bonn, Germany, most of the city was left in ruins, but the statue honoring Ludwig Van Beethoven, one of the great composers, still stands in the town square.

Household Hints

Clean the keys of your piano with denatured wood alcohol. This will help keep them from turning yellow.

A teaspoonful of ammonia added to the jar of water in which steel wool is kept will prevent rust from forming.

The more thoroughly plates and dishes are scraped, the easier the washing job will be.

Make sure that all of your soap dishes have drainage holes at the bottom. This will permit your soap to dry when not in use and the soap will last longer.

Plant grass in a flower pot for your cat, and set the pot where the cat can help himself, as grass is essential to his health.

Let the gelatin congeal a bit before adding the fruit. This will keep the fruit from going to the bottom of the mold.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

One government synthetic rubber plant, operated by The B. F. Goodrich Co., in 14 months produced in synthetic rubber the equivalent to the rubber yield of approximately 14 million rubber trees during the same period.

Four lumber companies subscribed to the cost of building a 50-mile private road for hauling logs from an Oregon forest. The road is entirely on private ground and free from all state and local regulations, and trucks can be operated thereon license-free.

Shoes made with new non-marking synthetic rubber soles are among the new items in the rubber footwear field.

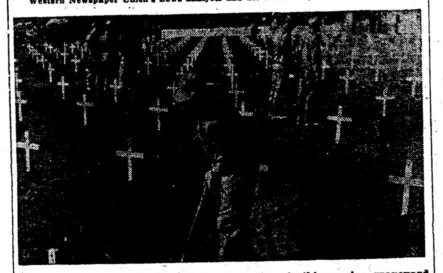
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Close on Ruhr Valley; Japs Gird for U. S. Invasion; Forecast Cut in Grain Acreage

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Indicative of high cost of taking Iwo Jima is this marine graveyard on the island, with row upon row of little white crosses. Approximately 4,000 Americans were killed in the struggle.

EUROPE:
Ruhr Target

Kesselring

To 60-year-old Field Marshal Albert Kesselring went the hapless job of assuming supreme command of German armies in the west as U. S. and British forces closed on the vital Ruhr valley after having conquered the coal and iron rich Saar basin to the southwest.

In picking Kesselring to try to hold the sagging German front in the west, Hitler chose an ardent Nazi, who gained notice through his development of strong defensive lines in Italy. Trusted by the Nazis to stand fast in the face of the overwhelming Allied onslaught, Kesselring succeeded Field Marshal Von Rundstedt, who was relieved of his command following reports that he had failed to negotiate an armistice with General Eisenhower.

As Kesselring took over the German command, his hard-pressed forces faced the Canadian 1st, British 2nd and U. S. 9th armies on the western border of the Ruhr, while the U. S. 1st army built up strength for a drive to the south of the vital industrial valley from its Remagen bridgehead.

Following a tremendous concerted aerial bombardment aimed at softening up the enemy's rear areas, these four Allied armies stood ready to strike to the east of the Rhine and break into the open German plains on the high road to Berlin. Farther to the south, the U. S. 3rd and 7th armies, having cleaned out the Saar, drew up against the forested mountain country to the east of the Rhine in this sector.

Double Trouble

Thus, while Kesselring had his hands full trying to hold the Allied armies off from the open northern plains, German commanders in the east experienced equal difficulty meeting the Russian onslaught over the other end of the level northern country in the east. From Stettin southward, the Reds menaced the serried defenses of Berlin while the Nazis still talked about a last ditch fight behind concrete pillboxes, bunkers, tank traps and irrigated flat land.

Though massed in the greatest strength before Berlin, the Reds also exerted considerable pressure to the south, seeking to batter their way through the mountain masses in Upper Silesia to enter Czechoslovakia, and smashing at German defenses in western Hungary in an effort to reach Austria.

U. S. SAVINGS:
In Billions

With a wartime economy restricting the supply of civilian goods, and income at peak levels, Americans continued to pour billions of dollars into savings, the Securities and Exchange commission reported.

With Americans putting away nearly 25 per cent of their incomes in cash, bank deposits and government securities within the last two and one-half years, total holdings of these assets reached 148 billion dollars at the end of 1944.

In saving 40 billion dollars last year, 10 times as much as in 1940, Americans amassed an additional 17 billions in cash and bank deposits; 15 billions in government bonds; 3⅓ billions in insurance, and 900 millions in savings and loans associations.

CITY EMPLOYEES

The 852,000 employees of the nation's cities and towns draw a monthly payroll of $122,000,000, the International City Managers association reported. Despite the decline in number of employees, however, the total payroll has shown a steady advance during the last two years.

Accompanying the general decline in number of municipal employees was a general increase in length of the regular, or normal work-week city hall personnel, though much occurred in the smaller cities.

PACIFIC:
Fear Invasion

Making no bones about their fear of an invasion of their homeland, the Japanese government moved feverishly to prepare the country for the eventuality, while at the same time pushing efforts to organize occupied China against a thrust from U. S. forces.

Her predicament underlined by the U. S.'s gradual advance toward the homeland, and the destructive aerial raids on her great urban centers, Japan's leaders called for the establishment of virtual martial law in the country, permitting expropriation of land and demolition of buildings for defense purposes.

Though high military authorities believe that Japan, like Germany, will not be bombed out of the war because of the decentralization of her industry, U. S. attacks have cut into some of the enemy's productive capacity, besides causing serious civilian dislocations. Already, almost half of Tokyo's civilian population has been evacuated, it was said.

Besides impairing the home effort, such raids as the recent carrier plane attacks on the Japs' great inner naval base in the Inland sea bounded by the home islands of Honshu, Kyushu and Shikoku serve not only to cripple the enemy fleet but also damage important repair and anchorage facilities.

Although the Japs feel that any direct assault on the homeland would give them the advantage of short supply lines and land bases from which to develop counter-measures, they are looking worriedly to the Chinese coast, where they believe the U. S. might drive ashore to set up invasion bases.

Thus, high military authorities presume, the enemy will continue to play for time in such outlying battle zones as the Philippines and Burma to permit further development of Chinese resources and troops reportedly fighting for them so as to be better able to meet an invasion of that country.

CROP ACREAGE:
To Drop

Because of a decrease in hog numbers in their own lots, an expected drop in demand for feed grains and a switchover to crops with lower labor requirements, farmers will put fewer acres to important grain in 1945, the U. S. department of agriculture reported.

Basing its report on farmers' declarations of intentions, the USDA said that corn acreage would be down 3 per cent under 1944, barley 14 per cent, and soybeans 2½ per cent. As exceptions, wheat acreage was expected to increase 4½ per cent and oats 8 per cent.

In addition, the USDA's reports on acreages for other crops showed general decreases from last year, with increases forecast only for sugar beets, flaxseed, tobacco and rice.

With the weather generally favorable, finances ample and seed and feed plentiful, chief obstacles to 1945 production lie in manpower and machinery shortages, the USDA declared. Indicated acreages in declarations of intentions might be notably changed through the year, the USDA said, in accordance with influences in weather, price fluctuations, manpower, finances and the effect of the report itself on farmers' plans.

Staples Output . . . .

Wool production declined along with sheep numbers in the United States in 1944 with production, both shorn and pulled, estimated at 418,094,000 pounds compared with 449,578,000 pounds produced in 1943. Average local market prices in 1944 were 42.4 cents per pound, however, compared with 41.6 cents per pound in 1943. Number of sheep shorn is estimated at 9 per cent less than 1943 or 44,324,000 head.

Easy to Make Your Upholstered Chairs

THIS pair of chairs, so much at home in a Victorian setting, would be just as appropriate in a modern room. They are comfortable too, and anyone who can nail together a box can make the wooden frame. Scrap or even old boxes will do, for this foundation part is entirely covered.

With the frame finished, the lady with needle and thread and a few tacks will probably take over. The padding is easy—just cotton batting basted to muslin over the seat and back. The cushion may have a cotton filling or may be filled with feathers or kapoc. The rest is a simple covering job.

Our Servicemen
WANT TWO THINGS

MAIL FROM HOME—Talk to any sailor or soldier on leave; he'll tell you that a letter from home is as welcome to him as a blood transfusion is to a wounded man. Mail is the life line between home and the "fighting fronts". Write often and keep your letters cheerful.

HIS HOME COMMUNITY TO REMAIN UNCHANGED—The lawyers call it "status quo" which means unchanged. Our servicemen step aboard troop ships with a definite picture of "home life" which they carry with them wherever they go. They spend many an hour reliving the memories of a strawberry soda at the corner drug store . . . the show at the Orpheum . . . or a lazy chat with Bob or Ed over a cold bottle of refreshing beer.

Many servicemen overseas have expressed themselves as being against any changes in our present laws and customs at this time, especially those laws affecting personal privileges. They feel that the servicemen who are fighting to maintain the American Way of Living should have a voice in making any changes.

Took Shot At Sheriff Toftner

Held in the Marshall county jail in Warren is J. C. Wilson, 76 years of age, former Grygla postmaster, on a charge of using a dangerous weapon with intent to kill, when he fired a shot from a 44 cal. Colt revolver at Sheriff O. C. Toftner, who was evicting him from his home in serving a writ of restitution on Monday.

Wilsons home had been forfeited to the county on non-payment of taxes and the place had been sold at a public sale in Warren several montns ago. Sheriff Toftner went to Grygla on Monday to seek the removal of Mr. Wilson from the property, but he refused to leave voluntarily.

The Sheriff then located Mr. Sorenson, the Grygla drayman, to help remove the household effects from the premisis, but in the meantime, Wilson had placed a new padlock on the door to prevent any removal of personal property. However the Sheriff quickly destroyed it and was inside the house to remove a large chair, when all of a sudden Wilson whipped out the revolver and leveled it at the Sheriff and fired a shot which missed him by inches. Splinters from the door casing near which the Sheriff was working spattered him in the face.

Mr. Toftner's son, Roy had accompanied him to Grygla and was assisting his father along with Mr. Sorenson, both of whom witnessed the shooting. All were unarmed at the time. Toftner and his son returned to Warren immediatly where he secured an arrest warrant and went back to Grygla to place Wilson under arrest and brought him back to Warren to be lodged in jail pending hearing.—Warren Sheaf.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been windy and cooler. Mostly cloudy too. Monday it warmed up and was nice until about 3 p. m. when the wind changed to southeast indicating that we could expect some adverse weather. It all held off until about 4:30 on Tuesday when it all broke loose with a dandy hail storm. This was followed by a heavy rain that put an end to any plans for springs work. Every slough is now a lake and many of the roads are impassable

Mrs. A. Bennes was given a birthday party on Wednesday of last week.

Sheep Shearing School

A sheep shearing school is being planned for Marshall County on April 23-24 for the purpose of giving instructions in actual shearing, in sharpening and adjusting equipment and in handling wool after it comes from the sheep.

Mr. W. E. Morris, livestock specialist from University Farm, will be assisted by Mr. Davis, a specialist on shearing sheep.

The need for more sheep shearers is urgent, and this type of training will enable interested farmers to shear their own flocks as well as help out the neighbors.

This is a war emergency, and anyone interested should contact the County Agent or Vocational Agricultutal Instructors in their community. Those interested will be notified of the place where the school will be held.

Saima Neimela received word that her brother Pfc. Wayne Neimela, who has been twice wounded in action in France, had arrived in New York.

This Bank is
Eager to Make Loans

The money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earning, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

Unlike the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A loan helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed—all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

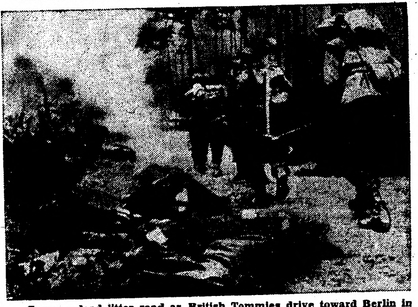
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies in "Big Heave" Seal Off Ruhr Valley Production Center; Clay to Rule Occupied Reich

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



German dead litter road as British Tommies drive toward Berlin in rout of enemy forces on 21st army front.

EUROPE:

Last Great Arsenal

The last great source of Germany's supply of war materiel had been sealed off as tanks of Lieutenant General Hodges' U. S. 1st army swept before them all resistance in their spectacular dash towards Berlin. The British 2nd army, pounding across the north German plain, had steadily drawn closer and closer to the 1st army. Ruhr valley war production centers had been effectively sealed off.

Typical of the magnitude of the American forces was the one-day bag of 14,000 Nazi prisoners taken by General Patton's 3rd army in its sensational drive eastward.

City after city had fallen into Allied hands under Eisenhower's steam roller. Among the rich prizes were Frankfurt-on-the-Main (546,000), ranking ninth in the German Reich, Mannheim (283,000) which fell to Lieutenant General Patch's 7th army, and Essen which led all Europe in the production of munitions.

Clearly the final doom of Nazi power was sounding. Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain declared he believed the "hour of success" was at hand. Still some military authorities pointed out that a final Nazi stand might be made in mountainous southern Germany buttressed by defenses in northern Italy and the industrial resources of Czechoslovakia.

Spring rains and fog had kept the Italian front quiet, but observers had expected Gen. Mark Clark's armies to begin massive smashes northward.

Relentless Reds

In the East, Russian armies had kept up their relentless pressure on Berlin and elsewhere with armored divisions sweeping over the Austrian border from western Hungary and closing ever closer on Vienna.

Marshall Rokossovsky's 2nd White Russian army battered deeper into Danzig.

Once unconditional surrender was achieved, civil affairs in Germany would be under direction of Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, who had had charge of materiel procurement for the army service forces when War Mobilization Director Byrnes borrowed him last December as his deputy in charge of the war program. The appointment, the White House said, was made by Gen. George Marshall, army chief of staff. Clay was appointed deputy to General Eisenhower.

PACIFIC:

Worst to Come

Already feeling the sting of heavy U. S. aerial bombardment, Japanese found no comfort in Gen. H. H. ("Hap") Arnold's announcement that America would bring the full weight of its tremendous air power to bear upon the Nipponese once the war in Europe ended.

As Arnold spoke, the strategic Ryukyu islands stretching between the Jap homeland and Formosa became the latest target for American assaults, with carrier planes teaming with warships in blasting the 500-mile-long chain preparatory to ground attack.

In declaring that the U. S. planned to use every plane against the Japanese after Germany's fall to hasten their defeat, General Arnold said that not only would American air power smash the enemy's industry, but it would also shatter his communication lines to bring about his collapse.

DEMOBILIZATION:

Small Scale

Though some combat troops in the European theater of war will be demobilized after Germany's fall, all service, air force and naval personnel will be retained to continue the fight against the Japanese, officials indicated.

Demobilization of some combat troops will result from inability to make full use of them in the Pacific for geographic reasons, it was said, but the exact extent of release will depend upon conditions in Europe. All members of the service branches will be needed for the construction of staging areas and bases in the Pacific, and the air force intends to bring its full weight to bear against the Japanese.

Because all approaches to the Pacific theater of war are over water, and because ships will have to bear the bulk of supplies, all naval personnel will be required to bring about the Japanese's fall as quickly as possible, Fleet Admiral King declared.

MANPOWER:

Buck Controls

Though the President made a strong appeal for passage of the compromise manpower control bill, under which plants would be limited in the number of persons they could employ and workers and farmers alike would be frozen to present jobs, the measure encountered rough going in the senate.

Despite the fact that the legislation fell short of military leaders' demands for a labor draft, the President said, its terms assured continued high production for the knockout blow against Germany, and provided for keeping workers on the job after the Nazis' fall.

Senators pointed up the great wartime production record of the U. S. in opposing legislation tightening control over both employers and employees, and O'Mahoney (Wyo.) hit arguments that passage of the bill would convince G.I.s that the home front was behind them. Rather, he said, defeat of the measure would assure them of retention at home of the freedoms for which they are fighting.

TARIFF:

Fight Renewed

Calling for authority to slash tariffs 50 per cent under January, 1945, levels in an extension of the reciprocal trade agreements act for three years, President Roosevelt touched off a renewal of the historic tariff fight in congress.

While the President said that further tariff cuts would offer other countries the opportunity to obtain funds for purchases here, the Republicans argued that a flow of cheap goods into this country would threaten American producers. And while the President declared that increased imports would add to employment in the processing and distributing businesses here, the Republicans predicted the program would defeat the announced goal of 60,000,000 postwar jobs.

Passage of the President's proposals would allow as much as a 75 per cent tariff reduction under the Smoot-Hawley rates of 1930 on some items, it was pointed out. Under the original reciprocal trade act of 1934, reductions of 50 per cent were permitted, and since these cuts already have been made on some items, another 50 per cent decrease would amount to 75 per cent in all.

Italian Prisoners Save U. S. Manpower

'Million Man-Days'

Italian service units in the U. S., helping to relieve the manpower shortage by contributing one million man-days per month of essential skilled and unskilled labor at military installations, total approximately 35,000 men, the war department reported.

The members of the Italian Service Units wear Class B army clothing from which all army buttons and insignia have been removed and on which have been sewn distinctive sleeve and hat patches bearing the word "Italy." They are paid $24 monthly, which approximates the 80 cents per work day paid ordinary prisoners of war engaged in labor. The government receives the regular wage scale for their work.

Household Hints

Seams in children's clothing should always be smooth and carefully finished so that no raw edges remain to irritate sensitive young skin. Avoid seams that pull and draw. These, too, cause discomfort.

When convalescent children are able to sit up in bed they need a place upon which to draw or color. By opening only two legs of a folding card table, it may be placed over the side of the bed and will take the place of a bed tray.

If you thumb-tack waxed paper to the pastry board before rolling out the pastry, the dough won't stick.

Machine stitch the drawstring on pop's and junior's pajamas firmly at center back. Then it's less likely to become detached and get caught in the washer.

When nuts need to be cracked with a hammer, hold them in place with an ordinary nutcracker. They crack more evenly, allowing less waste, and prevent many an injured finger.

To curl a feather that has been damaged by water, sprinkle it liberally with salt and shake before a fire or over a hot radiator until dry.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER
Proper inflation is a must for maximum tire service; and now we have reports of an ingenious post-war device which, through a series of lights on the car or truck dashboard, will warn the operator when the pressure in any tire is under what it should be.
"Ducks," the amphibious 2½-ton trucks now used by the Army, have tires that originally were designed by B. F. Goodrich for desert use. The tires have broad tread and are exceptionally flexible and light in weight. These desert tires which went to sea are rendering heroic service in the South Pacific and on the European battlefronts.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Ruin of War Making Delayed Visit to Germany

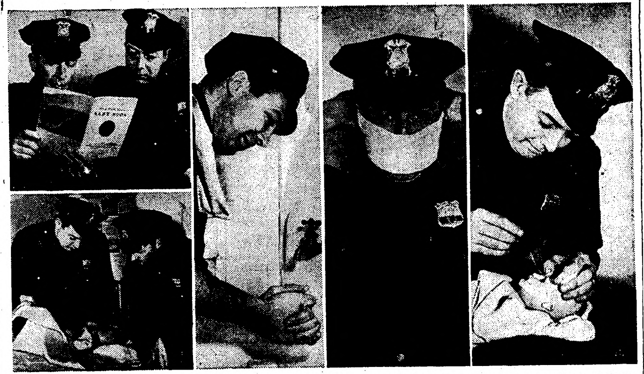
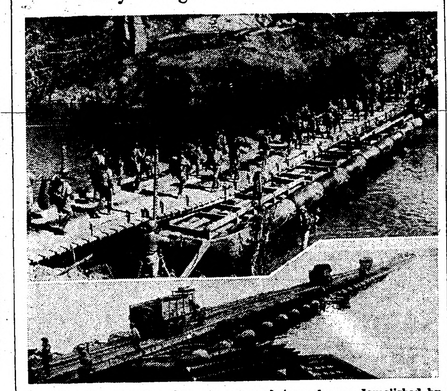
Policemen Attend School to Become Stork's Aides



The job of protecting the citizens of their communities seems to be an ever-expanding one for members of the police force of Nassau county, New York, who have been indoctrinated as obstetricians by the public health nurses. Now they know just when and how to drop the argyrol into the new-born's eyes, how to keep the infant from strangulation, how to handle the umbilical cord problem.

Army Bridges Around the World



The original bridge shown in upper photograph was demolished by bombers of the U. S. army 10th air force since the Japs captured Burma road in 1942. Pontoon bridge is erected as the Allied offensive nears the key Japanese supply terminus of the road. Lower, shows trucks crossing pontoon bridge spanning Rhine river.

How to Cut and Make Door Pocket

HERE is extra closet space—a place for shoes, whisk broom, hat brush and other odds and ends including laundry. All you need to make this door pocket is 2½ yards of 36-inch-wide chintz, 8 yards of bias binding, 6 bone or plastic rings and 6 cup hooks.

First, cut a strip 8 inches wide from one side of the entire length of fabric; then cut this crosswise in three equal parts to make the shoe pockets. Now, cut the foundation piece 24 inches wide and 54 inches long. Cut the laundry pocket 18 inches deep, 28 inches wide.

$2,000,000 EACH DAY

This is the estimated amount of taxes that the Brewers of America paid to federal, state, and municipal governments. This sum would buy a lot of war equipment . . . four B-29 Bombers each day . . . or forty Pursuit planes.

How does Minnesota benefit from these taxes? Well, Minnesota collected $1,745,309 last year in excise taxes . . . also approximately one and one-half million was paid in license fees, personal and real property taxes and personal and corporation income taxes. For instance, if these taxes were eliminated, it would take nearly a 30% increase in individual state income taxes to raise a similar sum.

Minnesota also benefits from the employment angle, as the Brewing Industry supplies jobs for approximately 35,000 people in the manufacturing, distribution and sale of beer.

After your day's work is done, you'll find a bottle of cold beer refreshing and economical. Patronize only Taverns that obey local laws.

The Brewers of America pay daily approximately $2,000,000.00 to Federal and State Governments. This amount would purchase 20 medium tanks each day.

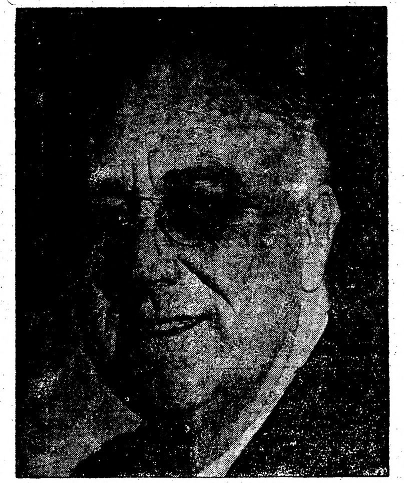
Entire Nation Mourns Death Of Franklin D. Roosevelt; Vast Tasks Face Truman



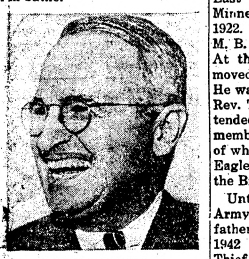
FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT
JANUARY 30, 1882—APRIL 12, 1945.

AS THE guns of America's fighting forces sounded ever closer the doom of Nazi Germany and Imperial Japan, Franklin Delano Roosevelt died in Warm Springs, Georgia, where he had been resting for 10 days.

Death resulted from a cerebral hemorrhage at 4:35 p. m. on April 12. Mr. Roosevelt was 63. He had been President for 12 years, one month and nine days. The White House was announced as the site of the funeral, with interment at the family estate at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Less than four months had elapsed since he had taken his historic oath of office for a fourth term. Only a few weeks before he had returned from the Yalta conference where in company with Marshal Stalin of Russia and Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain he had labored to built an enduring peace.

Fate denied Franklin Roosevelt the chance to enjoy the fruits of victory over the Axis. Yet history seemed destined to enshrine him as one of the immortal American Presidents. And every citizen who mourned the untimely passing of the Commander-in-Chief felt that he was a casualty of the war just as every G.I., Marine and Sailor who had fallen in battle.



HARRY S. TRUMAN
33rd PRESIDENT OF U. S.

Never before had an American President died in wartime. Abraham Lincoln fell under Assassin Booth's bullet just five days after the surrender of General Lee's army at Appomattox in 1865. Woodrow Wilson lived to see victory over Germany in World War I, but he fought a losing battle for the League of Nations and died early in 1924, a defeated leader. Many historians believe Lincoln's greatness might have been dimmed in the conflicts over reconstruction that followed the War Between the States, just as Wilson's prestige was lost in the conflict over the league that followed World War I. Thus Franklin Roosevelt, dying at the height of his career just as victory was to be achieved over Germany, seemed likely to live in history as a great man.

As the American people from Main Street to Riverside Drive mourned the death of Franklin Roosevelt, their prayers went up for his successor, Harry S. Truman. For on the shoulders of this slight, gray, 60-year-old Missourian had been laid a responsibility such as no American President had ever borne.

What the consequences of the President's death would be to the United States and the world, time alone would tell. But as Americans recovered from their first shock at the news, they quickly determined two things. The war must be prosecuted to as speedy and victorious a finish as possible. Lasting peace must be established.

And so, regardless of party or of past political differences, the people have rallied behind Mr. Truman.

The new President faces the immediate task of directing American participation in the United Nations' blueprints for a permanent world organization. He likewise faces the responsibility of establishing working relations with other members of the Big Three, so that the personal cooperation which existed between Franklin D. Roosevelt, Josef Stalin and Winston Churchill in leading the Allies toward victory may be maintained in helping win the peace. He faces the long-range job of guiding the nation to postwar economic prosperity once Nazi Germany and Japan are finally defeated.

Known as a plain, modest man who has not dramatized himself personally, President Truman nevertheless has demonstrated on many occasions that he can be a leader of force and determination. His work as chairman of the Truman committee in the U. S. senate investigating the conduct of the war is cited as an example of this. And his conduct of the Vice Presidency has shown that he can work successfully with political leaders of both parties in getting needed measures passed and in reconciling opposing points of view.

The 33rd President was born in Lamar, Mo., May 8, 1884, although the home of the family for four generations had been on a farm near Independence, Mo.

Served in World War I.

When World War I broke out, Truman became captain of Battery D in the field artillery of the 35th Division and saw action at St. Mihiel and in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

Back in Independence, Truman and a war buddy opened a haberdashery business. He married his boyhood sweetheart, Bess Wallace, and they have one daughter, Mary Margaret.

Truman later turned to politics for a career, which started with his election as County Judge of Jackson county, Mo. In 1926 he became the presiding judge of Jackson county, with the endorsement of Tom Pendergast, political boss of Kansas City. He studied law at night and supervised the construction of a great highway system.

PRECEDENTS OUT:

Throughout his career as President, Franklin D. Roosevelt was known as the "precedent breaker." That title was first conferred in 1932 when he flew out to Chicago from Albany, N. Y., to address the Democratic convention that had nominated him. It continued after his election as a result of his informal methods of transacting business. But it reached a climax in his decision to seek a third term in 1940 and a fourth term in 1944.

Household Hints

Remove the broiler pan at the same time you remove the food. If you let it stand, the heat which is retained will burn the grease on.

Men's shirt collars will fray less if turned up before being laundered.

Color may be revived in faded suede shoes and bags that have become shabby by brushing them well and holding them over a kettle of freshly boiling water.

Never crowd the rinse tub. Clothes must have room to move about freely to get soap out.

Wipe up any food spilled on the stove at once with a dry cloth or paper toweling. Never use a damp cloth—it may ruin the porcelain finish. But if you let these spots dry on, they will be difficult to remove.

Nazi Stupidity Sank Sub When U. S. Airmen Failed

A classic example of Nazi stupidity was witnessed by the two pilots of a U. S. navy plane flying 50 miles off Iceland in the summer of 1942, says Collier's. Sighting a surfaced Nazi U-boat, they dropped all their depth bombs but none had any effect on the submarine, or frightened it into submerging.

As the pilots circled back, a lone seaman climbed up on the deck and, finding one of the bombs held by a grating, rolled it over the side instead of setting it afloat on a life raft. Within a few seconds, consequently, the bomb reached the depth for which it had been set and exploded, fatally damaging the German pigboat.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Recent government tests demonstrated that synthetic truck tires show slower wear and less tread-cracking when operating at night than during daytime service. Atmospheric temperatures were given as the reason for this difference in service.

Like other rubber commodities, footwear should be treated properly to extend serviceability. Avoid tearing by putting on and removing rubber footwear carefully; wash outer surfaces after each wearing; dry out linings in room temperature; store in cool, dry, dark place and make sure to keep footwear free from folds or wrinkles.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Russ Break With Japs Changes Entire War Picture in Pacific; Ike Predicts Guerrilla Warfare

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

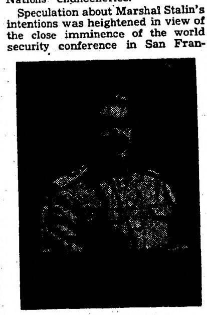
(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

TREATY:

Russ Break With Japs

When Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov curtly handed the Jap ambassador a note denouncing Russia's neutrality pact with Japan, the question of the Soviet government's future course with Nippon became a matter of high importance in United Nations' chancelleries.

Speculation about Marshal Stalin's intentions was heightened in view of the close imminence of the world security conference in San Francisco. Two facts, however, were clear for the record. The treaty ordinarily would have run until April, 1946, yet Russia decided to void it summarily. Marshal Stalin publicly described Japan as an "aggressor nation."



MARSHAL STALIN
More trouble for Japan.

The Russian government, moreover, accused Tokyo of helping the Nazis.

"Germany," the note recalled, "attacked the U.S.S.R. Japan—Germany's ally—has helped the latter in her war against the U.S.S.R."

Observers were agreed that Russia's action meant a closer working cooperation between Russia and her allies. How soon that meant an open declaration of war by the Reds on Japan, time would tell.

Even as the bad news came from Russia the Japs got another rude reminder that the payoff of aggression was approaching when it was announced from Washington that General of the Army Douglas MacArthur had been chosen to lead all American army forces in the Pacific and Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz had been selected to lead the naval forces in the final drive on the Japanese homeland.

General of the Army Henry H. Arnold will command the 20th (Superforts) Air force and will be in charge of all other aerial action in the sector. The chiefs of staff will continue to direct the overall strategy and will give specific responsibility to MacArthur or Nimitz for particular operations in the Pacific.

This extension of operational territory for the two leaders who have been carrying the war to Japan's doorstep indicated that the "island hopping" phase of the campaign was over and a new strategy involving a direct assault on the Jap homeland was imminent.

JAP CABINET:

More Woe Ahead

A steadily heavier burden of trouble was to be the fate of the new Suzuki cabinet in Japan. That was unmistakably forecast in the fall of its predecessor—the Koiso cabinet.

Two major events had contributed to the Japanese government crisis. One was the successful progress of the American military advance on Okinawa island, only 330 miles from the Jap mainland. The other was Soviet Russia's action in denouncing the neutrality treaty with Japan that still had a year to run.

Ushered in as a rallying force against the Allied march toward Tokyo, after the infamous Tojo government had failed, the cabinet of Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso had encountered disaster after disaster in its eight and a half months of existence.

How long the new cabinet of 77-year-old Adm. Baron Kantaro Suzuki would last was open to speculation. But Japs as well as Americans knew one thing for certain. The final doom of Nippon was approaching.

OKINAWA:

Timetable's Ahead

As military observers had expected, Japanese resistance on Okinawa had stiffened after U. S. army troops had cut the island in two.

With the strategic airfields of the capital city of Naha as the prize, the 24th army corps and the 7th division fought fiercely against well-organized Jap units defending the southern areas of Okinawa. Marine 3rd amphibious forces continued extension of their northern lines.

Observers were of the belief that bitter battles would have to be fought and won before the southern portions of the island could be won. In this area it was estimated that between 60,000 and 80,000 enemy troops were concentrated. Nevertheless, Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, marine commander, said the timetable was well ahead of schedule.

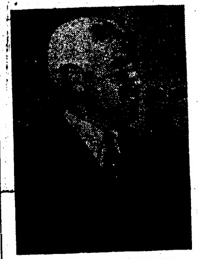
WORLD TRADE:

A War Preventive

A significant prelude to the world security conference in San Francisco was Secretary of State Stettinius' address in Chicago outlining plans for wider world markets in which the industrial output of the United States would match other nations' needs.

Addressing the council on foreign relations, gray-thatched Stettinius declared the United States would exert its full power to call a world conference of leading trading countries to stimulate international economic well-being. The secretary of state said:

"Our objective in all our relations with other nations is to prevent aggression abroad from again disturbing the peace of the United States and to develop those conditions of international life that will make it possible to maintain high levels of productive employment and farm income and steadily rising standards of living for all the American people."



SECRETARY STETTINIUS
A Formula for Peace.

GUERRILLA WAR:

Forecast in Europe

The statement to President Roosevelt from General Eisenhower forecasting extensive guerrilla warfare in Europe was being borne out as Allied armies ground their way through Germany and her vanquished satellites.

Unable to form a strong unified line to combat the Allied smashes toward Berlin, the Nazis command depended on a series of "last man" stands to delay extinction. Undeniably General Eisenhower's Allied armies on the west were cutting Germany to pieces. Yet spots of resistance remained and each posed a cleanup problem to the Allies. The trap in the Ruhr was an example of this trend.

Over battlefields once reddened by the blood of soldiers who fell in the Napoleonic wars, American and British divisions smashed in their drive east to meet the Russians and to bisect Germany. Far forward in the vanguard of the race to Berlin were armored units of General Patton's 3rd army. Pressing toward the strategic North sea ports of Bremen and Hamburg were the British forces of Montgomery.

Meanwhile, Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle was sowing destruction via warplanes on the airfields, rail yards and supply dumps in the Munich area of southern Germany where it was reported Hitler was planning his last stand.

In the east, Russian forces had continued their pressure on Berlin and to the south they cleared Hungary of enemy forces, capturing Bratislava in Slovakia and pouring across the Danube to Vienna.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ART TREASURES: Hidden in a dank tunnel used by German civilians near the front, priceless art treasures from France were found by units of the U. S. 1st army. Among the art found were works of Rembrandt, Reubens, Van Gogh and Van Dyke. In addition there were 500 original scores by Ludwig van Beethoven, the composer, taken from his birthplace in Bonn.

SURPLUS GOODS: A pre-sale display of 1,500,000 items of army surplus property drew 500 dealers to Philadelphia. Although the general public was not eligible to bid, war veterans wishing to obtain stocks to go into business were allowed to submit orders. Sales were under the direction of E. H. Mallory, regional sales officer for the treasury department's surplus disposal branch.

Civil War Draft Agent Lost Life in Notifying Draftees

A tombstone in a cemetery near Washington, Ind., bears this curious inscription: "In memory of Eli McCarty . . . killed while notifying drafted men."

Wounded in one of the early battles of the Civil war, Captain McCarty left the Union army in March, 1862, and became a government agent enrolling men for the draft. Aroused by the news of the draft a group of southern sympathizers vowed to shoot a government agent on sight. McCarty was their unfortunate victim.

Ant Apartments

Ants must have been unusually industrious to have built a 15-foot-high ant hill near Darwin, Australia. White ants build such "apartment buildings" of wood, fiber and earth, held together by a glutinous cement which they secrete. The hills are full of tunnels through which the ants travel.

President's Life Was Characterized By Vigorous Action

Unlike the "log-cabin" presidents, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was not born into poverty. When Franklin arrived at Hyde Park, N. Y., on January 30, 1882, he came into a family that had possessed wealth for many generations. The Roosevelts had been thrifty land-owners in the Hudson valley since the first of the family came over from Holland. On his mother's side also there was a substantial fortune. Among his ancestors were many men who had served the state in various capacities.

Young Franklin attended the very fashionable Groton school, where he prepared for Harvard university. After completing the liberal arts course he entered Columbia U. law school, from which he was graduated in 1907. Two years earlier, however, he married his distant cousin, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt. Eleanor was a niece of Theodore Roosevelt, at that time in the Whte House.

After two years of legal practice, Franklin entered politics, running on the Democratic ticket for the New York state senate. He unexpectedly defeated a strong Republican candidate. From the beginning of his career he identified himself with reform movements, opposing the poverful Tammany organization in the statehouse. He was re-elected in 1912; by which time he had become a leader of the anti-Tammany faction.

Woodrow Wilson appointed Roosevelt assistant secretary of the navy. When World War I broke out Roosevelt proved himself an efficient administrator, handling billions of dollars' worth of contracts for ships and supplies. He served in this post throughout the war.

Ran for Vice President.

In 1920 the Democratic national convention chose him as running mate for James Cox. While campaigning for the vice presidency Roosevelt made many acquaintances valuable in later political life. Cox being defeated, F.D.R. returned to legal practice.

The following year the great tragedy of his life struck him—infantile paralysis. The big, strong young man became a bedridden invalid. For months he lay without ambition, almost without hope. Slowly his powerful will took command, however, and by persistence he partially regained the use of his muscles. It was during his convalescence at Warm Springs, Ga., that he determined to do what he could to eradicate the scourge that had almost ruined him. The "March of Dimes" campaign was the result.

At the Democratic conventions of 1924 and 1928, he aligned himself with the group supporting Alfred E. Smith, New York's governor. When Smith was nominated in 1928, Roosevelt ran for governor of his state and was elected. At the end of his two-year term he was again elected, this time by the greatest majority ever given to a New York governor.

As governor he continued the reform and improvement policies of his predecessor Smith. His achievements attracted nationwide attention. As the depression that began late in 1929 deepened, his efforts to control the mounting business failures, unemployment and distress in his state revealed his abilities as a vigorous leader in grave times.

Swept in as President.

When the national convention met in Chicago in 1932 Roosevelt was quickly chosen. He was swept into office by a plurality of seven million votes, carrying 42 states. Both houses went Democratic.

Before he could take office a wave of bank failures threatened the whole economic structure. The famous "bank moratorium" order, one of Roosevelt's first official acts, closed all banks until they could be reorganized on a sounder basis, thus preventing disastrous runs. In the spring of 1932 came the repeal of the 18th, or prohibition amendment. Then came the National Industrial Recovery Act, or "NRA," under which extensive emergency powers were granted to the President. A series of public works were authorized to combat unemployment, together with huge appropriations for direct relief.

The numerous executive and legislative acts of this first term were approved in general as necessary in the face of widespread suffering. A phrase from one of the President's speeches, "a new deal," developed into a title for the whole Roosevelt program.

In 1936 the convention in Philadelphia nominated Roosevelt by acclamation on the first ballot. He carried 46 states in the elections. This second term majority was so overwhelming that many New Dealers began to call it a "mandate from the people." During this second term a great number of measures were passed to increase the economic security of the individual, particularly the workers, farmers and small businessmen.

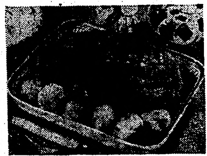
Mexican Steak Adds Gay Touch to Meal



Glorify the stand-by pot-roast in a south-of-the-border way, advises the Country Cooking editor of Capper's Farmer. Juicy Mexican steak is lean round of beef braised in spicy tomato sauce.

"Surround it with oven-browned potatoes and serve with crisp relishes and fruit pie for dessert," she adds. "A bright-colored cloth on the table puts the whole meal in a gay mood."

Mexican Steak

4 lbs. round steak	1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¾ c. flour	1 green pepper, chopped
½ tsp. pepper	1 c. celery, chopped
2 tsp. salt	1 onion, sliced
3 tbsp. bacon drippings

Have steak cut 3 inches thick. Season flour with salt and pepper and pound it into meat. Brown steak on both sides in hot drippings. Add remaining ingredients. Cover. Bake at 300 F. for 3 hours. Serves 6.

With The Men In Service

Sgt. Floyd E. Holmstrom of Newfolden, and the men of his air force service command unit have been awarded the meritorious service plaque for outstanding devotion to duty in the performance of exceptionally difficult tasks. The superior performance of the unit in the repair and maintenance of Ninth air force fighter-bomber planes in England, France and Belgium has made it possible for the unit to contribute materially to the coordination of air-ground tactical operations. Sgt. Holmstrom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. August Holmstrom.

Stanley Nelson, A. D. M. 2-c, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Nelson arrived home Monday to spend part of his leave here. He has been stationed in the Hawaian Islands and will leave for Astoria, Oregon, to resume his service in the Naval Air Corps.

Mrs. Stilaf Anderson of Manchester, Iowa, visisted at the A. B. Anderson home Monday.

Sell Your Heavy Scrap Iron

Iron and steel scrap inventories were reported to have declined almost to the 1942 levels when furnaces were shut down due to lack of scrap, according to a statement issued today by the War Production Board.

Even more alarming, it is stated, is the fact that these inventories comprise the quantities of the lighter grades of scrap, alloys, etc., but not enough of the heavy grades that must be combined with the lighter grades in order to make a proper charge to the furnaces.

A continous flow of heavy melting scrap and cast iron is badly needed and an early conclusion of the war in Europe will not materially effect this situation for months to come.

Attend The Locker Meeting

A special meeting will be held at the school huose here April 28 to decide about installing meat lockers at the creamery.

Postwar Radios Will Be Improved

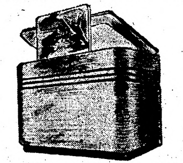
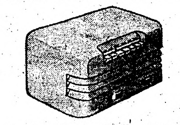
NEW postwar radios which will be available in local radio and electric shops, approximately six months after hostilities cease, will look much like 1941 models, but will provide better reception, according to an article in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

"These new radios will have more powerful tubes and other parts improved through wartime research," says the article in the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families. "They are expected to cost from a tenth to one-half more than prewar sets.

"Battery sets will be more compact. Batteries will be longer lasting and some may be recharged by plugging into electric outlets.



A screen rises from this projection-type television set as the cabinet lid is raised.



Small radios in plastic cases will fit into bedrooms, kitchens and dining-rooms.

"Television no longer is just around the corner. Nine telecasting stations already are in operation and more applications for additional ones are on file with the Federal Communications Commission. New sets will be on the market six months to a year after the war, but it may be some time before television broadcasts are available in rural areas."

A large percentage of the new sets will receive both the present amplitude modulation and the new FM (frequency modulation) which virtually eliminates hissing, buzzing, station overlapping and other static.

Flood Control Hearing Held

A large delegation from Marshall County attended the Public hearing at Crookston pretaining to Flood Control and major drainage improvement.

Colonel Lynn C. Barnes, District Army Engineer presided at the hearing and heard expression of views from all counties, municipalities and interested individuals in drainage basin of the Red River on the Minnesota side.

Colonel Barnes stated that the Clearwater and Red Lake Rivers have been given consideratton, and definite post war plans are enderway. In connection with the Red Lake river, cities of Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Crookston, East Grand Forks, and Grand Forks had delegations present to stress the need of control as an important factor in supplying these cities and industries within the area with a good water supply.

Mr. Bringham of the Crystal Sugar Beet Company pointed out that a shortage of water was the main fact in deciding whether more sugar processing plants should be built in the Valley. He stated that plans were underway for two new sugar beet plants, similar to the one at East Grand Forks, at Crookston and Moorhead as soon as possible.

Marshall County's main interest in this program is to show the losses due to excessive moisture in wet years, as well a losses due to inadequate moisture in dry years. The western two thirds of the county is affected by flood conditions along the Snake, Middle and Tamarac rivere. It is the opinion of those who have been studying these problems that a complete survey by the Army Engineers, of the whole Red River Valley is the first atep in the problem of Flood Control, drainage and water conservation, and since the three rivers in Marshall County are part of the drainage system these rivers will receive due consideration by the district engineers.

Mr. Roy Wiseth from Eastern Marshall County presented the problems the were facing in that area. Colonel Barnes stated that due cynsideration (after the facts were presented) for including the Thief River in with the Red Lake Project.

Melvin Leiran spent the week end at Crookston and Beltrami where he attended the funeral of his counin's wife, Mrs. H. B. Hefterson of Crookston.

Seventh War Loan May 14

Quotas for Marshall county precincts in the "Mighty Seventh" War Loan Drive which is scheduled to officialy open May 14, were announced to members of the Marshall County War Finance committee at a meeting at Warren recently.

Because of an increase in the county quota from $565.000 in the Sixth War Loan to $589,000 in the Seventh, most townships and villages were given slight increases in quotas, some were left the same and others were decreased in order to more equalize the selling campaign. The quotas were established at a meeting of the bankers of the county at the same meeting.

While the county quota is high, members of the county committee feel quite confident that residents of Marshall county will again oversubscribe the allotted amount in order to do their bit in helping to procecute the war to a speedy and successful conclusion.

L. C. Voybada of Minneapolis regional director of the Minnesota War Finance committee was at the meeting and in an informal talk to the county committee discussed the need for continued borrowing for financing the war. He commended the county committee and its large group of individual solicitors for their achievements in the past and urged continued effort in the big campaign opeding May 14.

Following is the quota for the Holt District, with Geo. Fricker as chairman.

Holt Village	$ 3,000

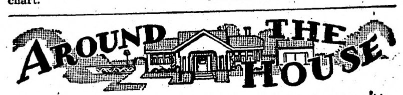
National Archives Puts End To Destruction of Records

The establishing of the National Archives by congress in 1934 ended a century-old fight for the construction of a permanent repository for federal records, during which time thousands of important national papers were lost, stolen, destroyed by fire or sold as wastepaper, says Collier's.

In 1935, Archives men, searching for existing records about the capital, found many stored in garages, barns, cellars and other strange places. For instance, the long lost plans for the Washington monument were discovered under layers of dust in the attic of an old abandoned house.



An easy way to give ferns their weekly watering is to place them in the bathtub, draw shower curtain and turn on the shower, adjusting spray until it is about room temperature.

Movable Type in 1409

Johannes Gutenberg, "the father of printing," has long been credited with the invention and first use of movable cast metal type in the early 1450s.

Yet such type had been made and employed in Korea in 1409, and 53 authentic pieces of it are on exhibition today in the American Museum of Natural History in New York City.

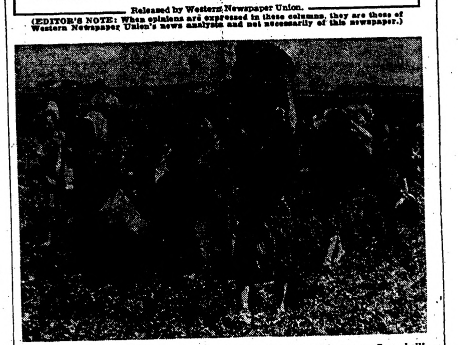
Truman Faced With Momentous Tasks Abroad and at Home as Allied Drives Lead to Victory

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



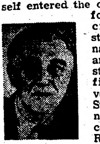
Bearing meager household possessions on heads and in arms, Jap civilians on Okinawa return to lowlands after flight inland before invasion forces.

NEW LEADER:

Historic Task

Dying even as American military leaders saw an early end to the European war, with the intricate problems of peace lying ahead, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt left to successor Harry S. Truman one of the most momentous jobs ever confronting a statesman.

Oddly enough, Mr. Roosevelt himself entered the office 13 years before under highly critical circumstances, with the nation's business and agriculture in stagnation and its finances on the verge of collapse. Still comparatively new to the American people, Mr. Roosevelt won their immediate confidence during the first 100 days of his administration with measures designed to reestablish the tottering economy of the country.



Mr. Roosevelt

Then, Mr. Roosevelt made perhaps his most famous statement of all: "The only thing we have to fear is fear."

World Problems

Greatest immediate task facing President Truman is the San Francisco peace conference, scheduled to go on despite the death of Mr. Roosevelt, who worked for its successful culmination to achieve his dream of an international cooperative organization to prevent future disastrous wars.

Though the groundwork for the San Francisco parley had been laid at the Dumbarton Oaks conferences, at Washington, D. C., new problems had arisen since to command the full resources of American statesmanship. Over and above the proposal of granting Russia three votes on the permanent security council to match Britain's six, there remained the touchy proposition of allowing representation to a Polish government not dominated by any large power and acceptable to all.

Along with the San Francisco parley for creating an international peace organization, the new President also was confronted with handling the Bretton Woods financial agreements, designed to establish postwar economic stability by supporting the monies of different countries and advancing loans for the reconstruction and rehabilitation of foreign nations to help them become profitably productive.

Rated Conservative

With President Truman considered a conservative Democrat despite his support of New Deal policies, speculation centered on the course he would adopt on domestic policy, long marked by Roosevelt liberalism. Bearing the friendship of both the CIO and AFL, President Truman was expected to maintain a sympathetic attitude toward labor.

President Truman

With Roosevelt administrations having established such social security policies as unemployment insurance and old age pensions, and with the government pledged to support farm prices for two years after the war, President Truman's greatest concern would seem to be not the establishment of emergency measures to tide the nation over the reconversion period but rather the development of a program to achieve Mr. Roosevelt's own goal of 60,000,000 jobs.

In recently explaining his political philosophy, President Truman said that, like his native state of Missouri, he was a little bit left of center, but that the cooperative effort of all elements of American life was necessary for the shaping of a prosperous economy.

Though comparatively unknown before assuming direction of the senate war investigating committee, President Truman soon earned the respect of both his colleagues and the country for his forthright and courageous leadership of the group in constructively criticizing the rearmament program with a view of increasing its over-all efficiency.

In this respect, the so-called Truman committee was quick to point out such material shortages as aluminum, rubber, zinc, lead and steel, and also revealed the nature of pressing manpower problems.

Staff Chiefs at Helm

An artillery captain himself at 33 during the last war, President Truman, like Mr. Roosevelt, is expected to leave the conduct of the war largely to the American chiefs of staff, who have already marshalled the country's great striking power for the knockout of both Germany and Japan.

Reeling under the force of U. S. and British power thrusts from the west, and Russian pressure from the east, Germany's days appeared numbered, with Allied military leaders mainly expecting guerrilla warfare after the collapse of integrated Nazi resistance.

In conformity with long-rumored Nazi plans for a last suicidal stand in the Alpine fastnesses of southern Germany, the enemy continued to put up his strongest resistance south of the river Main, where the U. S. 7th army's advance was slowed. Farther to the east, however, the Russians drove beyond Vienna to threaten the Austrian gateway to Adolf Hitler's last mountain stronghold.

PACIFIC:

Tough Nuts

Tough throughout the whole Pacific campaign, the Japs are proving even tougher as the battle approaches their homeland, with their stubborn defense of Iwo Jima more than matched by their resistance on Okinawa in the Ryukyu Islands against U. S. marine and army forces.

Experts at making use of the rugged Pacific island terrain, the Japs have set strong gun emplacements in the rolling countryside, with subterranean tunnels allowing their troops free passage from one position to another. In addition, the enemy has surprised U. S. forces with the use of deadly new weapons, with heavy concentrations of artillery on Okinawa helping slow the Yanks' advance.

If they have made good use of the terrain on Iwo Jima and Okinawa, the Japs are making equally good use of it on Luzon in the Philippines, where they are holding out in the rugged fastnesses to the north in the hope of tying up large bodies of U. S. troops through the approaching rainy season when operations will be necessarily slowed.

WHOLE BLOOD

Whole blood, one of the greatest single factors in saving the lives of wounded soldiers, is being flown to Europe under a new system of refrigeration which prolongs the life of this fluid by about one-third.

Under the present system whole blood is suitable for transfusions for a period of about 16 days, but under the new plan it will last for 21 days. Expendable iced containers have been developed to keep the whole blood at the right temperature.

Hold Your Own

Keep a tight grip on your pocketbook and a sharp eye on your wallet, for purse-snatching and pocket-picking are showing a pronounced popularity among crimes, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The increase in thefts of this character is laid to the tendency of prosperous war-workers to carry large sums of money about with them.

For Peace

Prosperity in America is the first step in the direction of a lasting peace. This prosperity ought to spread, as fast as it can, to other countries. It is in America, however, where men have the key to prosperity and the United States must lead the procession to high living standards through open competition . . . the only way to obtain a more abundant life, for ourselves or others.

At first thought, some people may not agree that prosperity has anything to do with peace. But they will convince themselves if they will think back. Troubles that built up to this present war were economic troubles. Hitler and Mussolini both climbed to power over ruin; ruined fortunes, ruined hopes, ruined lives. They got a following by promising people relief from misery.

Want Is Serious.

People will be patient, and content themselves to wait for solutions to ordinary political problems, but they will do desperate and violent things when hungry; when their families need food. Prosperity helps to maintain peace, and (as I said in the first sentence) prosperity in America is the first step. The reason is plain. Uncle Sam is the world's best customer.

When we think about the importance of the United States in world affairs, these simple figures stand out boldly: We have only 7% of the earth's population and yet we buy 40% of all the raw materials in the world from which manufactured goods are produced. When wheels are turning in America, markets get active to the four corners of the earth.

Looking to America.

When American smokestacks are warm, and American factories hum, the tin mines of Malaya get busy, the rubber plantations of Sumatra swarm with workers, and the Caribbean countries commence shipping coffee, chicle and bananas. Our prosperity is the world's peace. But why discuss it unless we can do something about it? I hasten to say we can!

Foreign lands prosper when they sell freely to America. They sell to America when jobs are plentiful and good here, when most Americans have money to buy what they want. Jobs are plentiful and good, and workers prosper, when business is expanding. Business expands when investors see possible returns from investments. They could see such opportunities now if they were not afraid of taxes.

Uncertainty Kills.

Very few business men in the United States have any idea today that they will be able to expand in peacetime pursuits. Most of them know they can't afford to expand if the present-day 95% excess profits tax remains in force. It was enacted as a war emergency measure. I do not say it ought to be repealed at this hour. But we ought to make certain now that it will not outlive the war.

Revenue measures are the hardest of all laws to repeal. Taxes rarely get smaller. But unless taxes on business get smaller after the war, investors would be insane to spend new billions for expansion. Business men want to plan peacetime sales and employment now. When Congress makes a reasonable tax law to become effective with victory, world peace will have its first guarantee of long life. It will have to be done this year.

Farmer's Friend

Two southerners sat near me in a crowded day coach recently and carried on a heated and revealing conversation. Both men were farmers, but their similarity ended there. They were not at all alike. One seemed to be about 70 years old. He spoke with a soft "Deep South" inflection. He had attended college, was well dressed and had lived in several big cities.

The other man was nearer 30, spoke with the accent of the delta country and was obviously a practical dirt farmer with very limited schooling. The conversation was about rice. The older man insisted that rice was not grown in Arkansas. "It would be so foolish," he said scornfully. "So long as Asiatic labor is cheap there will be no money in raising rice in this country."

Young Man Was Right.

The old gentleman almost persuaded the young man that he had been calling something rice that was not rice at all. I didn't intrude to say that I drive through miles of rice fields every time I make a trip from Searcy to Memphis, although I hated to see a man in possession of the truth so crushed under courteous language and ideas that have been out of date for 25 years.

Workers in the Arkansas rice fields are relatively well paid, as farm hands are compensated. They earn more than cotton choppers and pickers; draw wages more like a California orange grove worker. Just the same, Arkansas rice is priced right. Our growers could ship it to Japan in normal times and sell it there at a profit in competition to Chinese rice, Coolie raised.

Custom-Built Economy.

It sounded quite familiar when the cultured gentleman - farmer explained, "The biggest part of the cost of anything is labor." The statement used to be made often and used to be almost true, but America's volume production by machinery has disputed the idea with success for years; longer than the younger man could remember. Rice in Arkansas, a new industry, is tooled up well.

That's exactly why our rice workers are well paid. They produce a lot of rice per man. An American worker, with modern tools, can produce 50 times as much rice as a China boy with a heavy hoe. Allowing liberally for machinery expense, he can earn 30 times as much as the Chinese, and does. At the same time, the rice costs less per bushel and can profitably sell for less. That's America.

Parent of Prosperity.

Shorter hours and higher wages for people who work, lower prices and better merchandise for people who buy, are universally popular ideas. The same people want all four, because working people buy the biggest part of everything that's sold. It is strange, however, that all four of these benefits come from the same source (investment), which is not a popular idea.

Good equipment costs something. It calls for investment. With good equipment, workers increase production per man and get their pay raised, also increase production per day (or per acre) and show the investor a profit. Good equipment also increases the available supply per customer and thus lowers prices. What America needs, not to mention China, is to encourage investment.

Daylight Saving Out

Demand of rural members of the Legislature for repeal of day light saving swept through all opposition in the House of Representatives in closing days of the recent Legislative session and it was thought that the bill had been stalled for good in a House Committee, largely filled with city members. But it was not to be. The bill emerged from committee suddenly and went sailing through the House. Minnesota schedule to return to standard time on July 8th, as a consequence.

Farmers have complained that daylight saving has interrupted and interfered with their work, particularly in the harvest and haying season, and have urged thier legislators to see that Minnesota goes back to sun time.

More Money on Stored Wheat

We have just been informed by Mr. Barret of CCC Minneapolis that farmers will be receiving somewhere from two to three cents additional on their warehouse stored wheat.

The charges on the loan will be amount of loan and interest at 3 percent to June 30th and storage, conditioning charge and insurance; the latter three items will amount to 8 7-8c on loans made prior to December 3, 1944.

On the basis of these figures it will be up to the borrower to contact his elevator and determine whether or not he wishes to buy back his wheat, if bought back, the uncashed parity check you will receive, also the cancelled note and loan papers must be returned to CCC Minneapolis through the warehouse.

Footprints on the Sands of Time

The past record of a man or an institution is a reliable omen of the present or future. A long record of reliable, honest and sincere service, are factors that make up a past that can truly be pointed to with pride, there are "footprints" that lead to success.

The past record of this paper is our strongest recommendation.

We, today pass into another stretch of time, having started Volume No. 35 of the NEWS and that we have so served our readers and advertisers that we may merit your continued support in this field of business here.

SOIL FERTILITY'S ROLE IN PROMOTING HUMAN HEALTH TOLD

CHICAGO.—Rejection of a high percentage of small town and rural men by Selective Service because of physical defects was cited by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee as a prime reason for promoting better nutrition in the post-war era, through soil fertility rehabilitation.

"Records of a special study by the Department of Rural Sociology at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station showed that six of each ten town and country men examined for Selective Service during a recent twelve month period had various health defects," says the statement.

These figures tell a significant story. We are just beginning to understand the extent to which human nutrition, bodily health, mental attitude and many other aspects are affected by soil fertility or lack of it. When the fertilizer level is low, the soil lacks the ability to produce body-building crops.

LAND O'LAKES NEWS

WHO WILL HELP DAIRY FARMERS TOMORROW?

1945 ? 1946 ? 1947 ?

The answer is—as always—they'll have to help themselves! Today, with the war creating abnormal demands, marketing dairy products is no problem. But tomorrow . . . ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

The uncertainties of tomorrow provide one of the big reasons why you should market through Land O'Lakes today. It is operated by and FOR Northwest dairy farmers. Its interest and obligation is to secure better returns, and to give permanent security to its patrons through their ownership of their own brand, their own organization, their own plants. Every patron of a member dairy plant is a part owner of Land O'Lakes!

Why not investigate ALL the advantages of a marketing membership in Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc.?

Chas. E. Smith Passes

Rudolph and Clarence Smith received a telegram Monday that their father, C. E. Smith, had passed away at McGregor, Minnesota. Mr. Smith was a pioneer of the Holt community and was 87 years old. Funeral services were conducted here yesterday from the Free Mission church.

A large crowd attended the meeting of the Nazareth Ladies Aid on Tuesday. Rev. Urness led in the study of the Book of Nehemiah. At the business meeting it was voted that the Ladies Aid give $100 to the Concordia College Appeal. Over $30 was collected for lunch.

Walter Wegge has been on the sick list but is at this writing feeling better.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson made a trip to Roseau on Friday to consult Dr. Berge. From there they went to Grygla where they spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Torrance Lillevold and sons.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Smith entertained the following families for dinner John Ness, Marvin Sandberg and Arvid Toren, the occasion being Chester Smith's birthday.

Many Absent From School

Too many are absent from the school states Supt. Nelson.

On account of the number of absences before the close of the fifth period there is much makeup work to be done. Until make up tests have been taken the honor roll can not be determined. We hope to have it ready for publication next week.

We regret that there are so many absences at this time when reviewing has begun. It is necessary that every student be in attendance every school day in order to take advantage of the final explanations that are made in class. This community is establishing a very poor reputation in that some pupils are permitted by their parents to spend much time away from school.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Gunheim, A. O. Aspelin and daughter Caroline were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Nelson on Sunday evening.

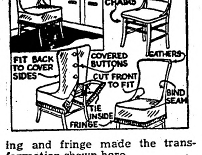
Button-On-Frocks For Old Furniture

WOULD you ever guess that the homely old chair at the right could be made to seem at home in a smart modern room? A simple frock of medium blue cotton rep with darker blue binding and fringe made the transformation shown here.



Notice the ties that hold the cover firmly from the inside. The center back closing adds both style and convenience. The buttons are made by covering wooden molds with the slip cover material, and the bound buttonholes are quickly made.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The contented cow will be more so after the war, when B. F. Goodrich research men expect low-cost rubber will make possible rubber mattress or floor covering for stables.

War-born synthetic represented 80 per cent of the nation's rubber consumption in 1944, reports John L. Collyer, President of The B. F. Goodrich Company. In 1941 man-made rubber was less than one per cent of our consumption.

The destruction of some 5,000 tires a day on the American battlefronts is one understandable reason for subordination of civilian tire needs to those of the military.

—WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS—

Die-Hard Nazi Defense Pockets Shape As Allies Split Reich; U. S. Plans Huge Postwar Fleet

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Deep in a salt mine near Merkers, Germany, G.I.s came upon this hidden cache of 100 million dollars of gold bullion packed in bags. Also discovered was German and foreign currency, and crates of art treasures.

EUROPE:
Defense Pockets

Their front shattered by Allied break-throughs, Nazi militarists envisioned the formation of numerous strong pockets of resistance for a last-ditch stand against the massed weight of U. S., British and Russian forces.

Discussed even as U. S. and British armies drove toward a link-up in the Berlin region, the object of the pockets would be to make the war so costly to the Allies as to induce a willingness to talk terms. Recognizing the possibilities of such warfare, Supreme Allied headquarters indicated that V-E Day might not be proclaimed until major nests of resistance were cleaned up to prevent a lowering of civilian and military morale because of losses sustained in continuing operations.

With U. S. and British forces spearheading across the Reich, and the Russians moving in from the east, most prominent German pockets shaped up along the North sea coasts and mountainous Bavaria.

Nazi plans for a die-hard stand shaped up as the great Russian drive surged on battered Berlin and U. S. forces moved toward a juncture with the Reds in Saxony.

With the Russians throwing over 2,000,000 men into the battle, and the Germans concentrating the bulk of their forces against the onslaught, the fight for Berlin became one of the bloodiest encounters of the whole war. As Red forces edged through a network of strong fortifications under rolling fire, the enemy threw in masses of tanks in an effort to break up the advancing formations, and swarms of planes clashed in the leaden skies above.

Lieutenant General Simpson of 9th army (left) chats with British Field Marshal Montgomery on German front.

Further to the south, other Russian forces breached the Nazis' Neisse and Spree river lines to smash westward in Saxony for a junction with the U. S. 1st and 3rd armies.

While the 1st and 3rd fought toward a junction with the Russians, and the U. S. 9th built up strength along the Elbe for an eastward thrust to Berlin, the British and Canadian forces and the U. S. 7th army bore down on the potential German defensive pockets along the North sea and in Bavaria.

The British and Canadian task was no snap, what with the enemy concentrating large bodies of troops in small areas behind stout defenses. Included in the German holdout regions was the western portion of Holland below the Zuider Zee, and the great port areas of Emden, Wilhelmshaven, and Hamburg.

Having cleared the Nazi shrine city of Nuernberg, 7th army spearheads pointed toward Munich and the Bavarian mountain reaches, where enemy die-hards are expected to put up their stiffest last stand.

With Allied armies on the move in Germany itself, U. S. and British forces pushed forward in Italy also, threatening to spill into the Po valley.

MODERN MINING

Indicated output of 625,000,000 tons of coal in 1944 was attained with about 200,000 fewer workers than in 1918, largely because of extensive mechanization of the mines man output per day in bituminous mines has been raised from an average of 3¾ tons during the last war to more than 5¼ tons in 1944. This compares with slightly more than one ton per man per day in England, and a little over two tons per man in Canada, it pointed out.

PAFICIC:
U. S. Losses

For the first time in the Pacific war, navy casualties in the Okinawa campaign ran ahead of the army's and marines', with bitter fighting threatening to make the operation as costly as at Iwo Jima. Numbered among the victims was famed War Correspondent Ernie Pyle, whose simplicity of reporting the war from Europe to Asia brought the realism of the conflict so much closer to the nation's folk.

With the Ryukyu island chain, containing Okinawa, lying but 325 miles from Tokyo, the Japs put up a stiff fight, throwing in waves of airplanes in an attempt to impede supporting U. S. naval operations. Led by the silken-shrouded Kamikaze (suicide) fliers, enemy airmen inflicted the greatest percentage of naval casualties.

In ground fighting on Okinawa itself, chief opposition centered in the southern part of the island above the capital city of Naha, where 24th corps army troops bucked against the four-mile deep "Little Siegfried" line.

While fighting raged about Okinawa, General MacArthur's forces tightened their hold on the Philippines by edging into the enemy's mountain strongholds on northern Luzon, and establishing further footholds on Mindanao, second biggest island in the archipelago.

NAVY:
Postwar Fleet

Although final action depends upon the nation's future policy, tentative navy plans call for a huge postwar fleet of 5,830 vessels and the scrapping of another 6,094, according to testimony released by the house appropriations committee.

Of the 5,830 vessels, 1,191 would be combat ships, with the remaining 4,639 auxiliary craft. Plans call for use of 482 of the combat vessels, ranging from submarines to battleships, with the rest laid up for recall on short notice. Of the auxiliaries, 1,794 would be kept active and the remainder anchored for future demands.

Among the 6,094 vessels to be scrapped or used as targets are 337 obsolescent combat ships. The remainder are auxiliaries, including landing craft. In addition, it was disclosed, the navy will have some 66,000 other craft on its hands as demobilization proceeds, with some retained and others disposed of by the maritime commission.

FARM LABOR:
Draft Provisions

Seeking to assure essential farm labor, congress moved to forbid local draft boards from comparing the value of agriculture with that of any other occupation when considering deferments of farm workers.

Final passage of the bill depended upon house approval of senate amendments, providing that appeals boards could not make such comparisons, and deferment of farm workers shall not prevent voluntary enlistments for the services.

The congressional measure was framed to forestall a directive of selective service ordering local boards to give first consideration to the manpower needs of the army and navy when considering deferments for farm workers.

Honor Roll

Corporal Richard A. Shingler of Pittsburgh, Pa., won the distinguished service medal for exhibiting a high degree of resourcefulness and efficiency in the preparation and dropping of supplies and medical equipment to isolated survivors of airplane crashes. During 1944 he completed over 10,000 miles of travel in China, using all modes of transportation, including 500 miles on foot and horseback. His outstanding achievements have been instrumental in the saving of 89 crew members.

CONGRESS:
Tariff Battle

Even as the Republican's senate steering committee called upon Pres. Harry S. Truman to wish his administration well, a red hot legislative battle loomed in congress over the new chief's reciprocal trade treaty program, with GOP leaders heading the fight to defeat the measure.

First sponsored by Mr. Roosevelt, then adopted as his own by President Truman, the program calls for a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade treaties, with permission to cut tariff rates 50 per cent under January, 1945, levels. Since the original trade treaties allowed a 50 per cent reduction on duties imposed in the Smoot-Hawley bill of 1930, and such cuts were made on some goods, another 50 per cent slash would amount to 75 per cent, in all.

As former secretary of state and so-called "father" of the reciprocal trade program, Cordell Hull, called for passage of the act from the Bethesda, Md., naval hospital, Assistant Secretary of State William Clayton led the administration fight for adoption of the bill. With the U. S. possibly exporting as much as 10 billion dollars worth of goods a year after the war, he said, it will be necessary to cut our own tariff barriers so that our foreign purchasers will be able to repay us in kind. Otherwise, he said, we will lose this trade or billions of dollars extended in credits.

Disputing the administration's contention that passage of the measure was necessary to assist in the restoration of world prosperity and prevention of unsettled economic conditions leading to war, GOP congressmen, led by Rep. Harold Knutson (Minn.), declared that the program accomplished neither objective prior to the present conflict.

Army Strength at Peak

With a population of 13,479,142, New York led all other states in the number of men and women in the army with 900,563 as U. S. military strength totalled 8,050,011 as of December 31, the war department revealed.

To the original army strength of 513,410 in 1940, 9,444,283 have been added by induction, enlistment or appointment since then, with the normal release of 1,907,682 giving the net figure of 8,050,011, it was pointed out.

With the draft equalizing state inductions on the basis of population, Pennsylvania with 9,900,180 persons and Illinois with 7,897,241 ranked second and third in the number of men and women in the army, with 663,666 and 507,233 respectively.

PLANE OUTPUT:
Big Cut

In line with the army air force's cut in aircraft production for the rest of 1945, the huge $100,000,000 Ford-operated factory at Willow Run outside Detroit, Mich., will wind up manufacture of B-24 bombers by next August.

Decision to terminate production of the B-24s was predicated upon the collapse of the German luftwaffe and the need for heavier, faster bombers like the B-29s for the Pacific war, it was said. The over-all cut in output of other planes also will permit concentration on manufacture of aircraft more vitally needed against the Japs, including the new jet-propelled ships.

Capable of turning out 462 planes a month at the peak of its operations, the Willow Run factory is owned by the government's Defense Plant corporation. Henry Ford has eyed purchase of the property for production of tractors and other kinds of farm tools after the war.

WATER TREATY:
Neighborly Act

In what President Truman hailed as a constructive, business-like proposal undertaken in a neighborly spirit, the U. S. senate ratified the controversial treaty dividing waters of the Colorado and Rio Grande rivers between this country and Mexico.

Under provisions of the treaty, the U. S. guarantees Mexico 1,500,000 acre feet of water annually from the Colorado river, except in times of extraordinary drouth when the supply may be cut, and also agrees to divide waters in the Rio Grande below Fort Quitman, Texas, about equally. In addition, the two nations will make a study of problems arising from the flow of the Tijuana river from Mexico into southern California, including flood control and conservation.

Though California and Nevada congressmen attacked the treaty as harmful to domestic users of the Colorado river waters, other western senators acclaimed it as necessary for orderly development of both the Colorado and Rio Grande basins.

BRIEFS . . .

Of the nearly 150,000 persons who died of cancer in the United States last year, approximately 3,600 were between the ages of 20 and 29. It is true that cancer reaps its highest death toll in the age groups over 40, but it may afflict a person in any age group with equally tragic results—even infants have been known to die from cancer. If treated in the early stages, however, the disease is curable, authorities point out.

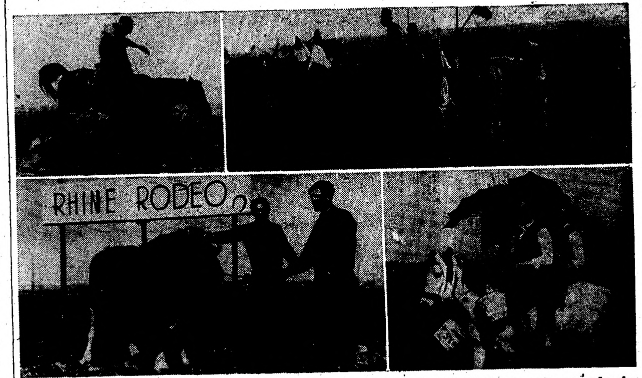
Soldiers Stage Rodeo on German Fighting Front



Taking time out during the march through Germany, personnel of the U. S. army stage a rodeo for the entertainment of fellow G.I.s. Busters and riders from New York City competed with range hands from Texas. Almost every part of the country was represented. Entertainment of this type, officials say, does much to build the morale of the fighting men. This is one of the reasons that the spirits of American soldiers has always been the envy of all countries.

Room of Inlaid Wood Creates Optical Illusion

A small room that has to be touched as well as seen to be believed is on exhibition in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, says Collier's. Acquired from a 15th-century Italian palace, its four walls contain 12 wooden cupboards whose open doors reveal on the shelves about 100 objects, including an hourglass, a celestial globe, books and musical instruments. The wall space around the cupboards is paneled, and benches line the sides of the room.

However, it is all an optical illusion, a flat surface on which the uncanny perspective and shadows are produced by inlays of some 500,000 pieces of wood in a vast variety of shapes and colors. So convincing is the three-dimensional effect that several visitors have attempted to sit on the benches.

GREAT NORTHERN
CAPACITY 100000

Just one of thousands of war-making items paid for by War Bonds; this 46,400-pound bronze propeller now is pushing an American Naval vessel closer to Japan.

MADE IN U.S.A.

Deep in the water with her cargo of food for American fighting men in the South Pacific, an Army transport awaits orders to dock. Months of service have so impressed Sergeant Harvey C. Stiefel with the war-making might of his country, that he sits on deck writing of it to his wife, a Great Northern Railway employe.

"Daily we see these words, yet not once a year do we stop to analyze what they mean—'Made in the United States of America,'" began Sergeant Stiefel. "The simplest of English sentences, yet it stands for the pride of a great nation."

Ships—"the harbor is stippled with ships. It is as if a giant hand had stamped across the harbor in a large neon sign MADE IN U.S.A."

Planes—"The air-minded GI differs on the type of plane, but need never wonder what country it came from. Whether it is marked with the banded star or any other symbol, it still sings MADE IN U.S.A."

Bulldozers . . . trucks . . . tanks . . . food . . . massive guns . . . small arms . . . shells . . . bullets . . .

"Why do I write? Why am I proud? The wheels of war have rumbled across America, the people have awakened, and America has produced. Her sons, her products and her accomplishments have covered the face of the earth!

"You workers at home stamp MADE IN U.S.A. on your products and we over here read it and know that it means a superior product.

"In the states a three-word phrase is emblazoned for the eyes to read—BUY WAR BONDS! Its sequel is a three-word phrase stamped on the world map. It covers the land, the sea and is indelibly written in the sky. Made in the United States of America—MADE IN U.S.A."

MADE IN U.S.A. is stamped on another superior American product—the War Bond. Behind it, too, is the pride and honor of the great nation whose accomplishments in war stirred an Army sergeant to eloquence.

Before the Seventh War Loan is launched on May 14, it is not impossible that Nazi Germany will have been completely defeated. On that prayed-for day of Victory in Europe the full power of American might will swing to the Pacific.

Landing the knockout punch on Japan will not be at bargain prices! It will cost more precious blood, more millions of fighting dollars.

Between May 14 and June 30 your Government will ask you to take your Seventh Step to Victory by lending, not giving, more of your money to the greatest cause in your country's history—the right to stamp MADE IN U.S.A. on the document of World Peace.

War Bonds purchased by payroll allotment by 25,000 Great Northern employes are credited to their home communities through the Federal Reserve Banks.

H. O. Hanson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor — Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, May 11, 1945. — Volume 35, Number 2

Recalls Early Days at 98

The following recollections are taken from the Marshall, Minnesota, Messenger, and are recalled by Mrs. L. E. Bates, 98 year old pioneer of that community. Mrs. Bates is the mother of Mrs. Wm. Paskewitz of Holt.

Mrs. Bates was born Harried Hurd at Plainfield, Wis., on Jan. 18, 1847. Of her four older brothers, one reached the age of 97, another lived to be 96, the third was 94, and a fourth was killed during the Civil War at 19. One younger brother, David Hurd of Plainfield, is 92. An only sister lived to 88.

On July 4, 1873, the first train to arrive in Marshall carried me and my small children to our new home on the Minnesota Prairie. My husband Lewis Bates had taken a homestead seven miles west of Marshall, built a house and sent for his family.

From Plainfield, Wis., my folks, Mr. and Mrs. David Hurd, had taken me by team to Wisconsin Rapids to the train. It was a sad parting, they felt I was going to a far away wilderness. It was a long tiresome journey, the train stopping along at towns so passengers could go to the hotels for meals, diners on trains being unheard of. We finally reached Winona, where I stayed for two days at a nice hotel and the people there were so kind to a young mother traveling alone. Then another delay of a day or two at New Ulm until the new freight was ready to start on its first trip west to Watertown, S. Dak.

Mr. Bates met us with yoke of oxen which I did not like. However, we soon bought a fine high-spirited team of gray colts—the price was $400 and the oxen.

I have seen the little town called "the Bend" grow during the 72 years to the fine city of Marshall.

Mrs. Bates celebrated her 98th birthday recently.

Martha Holst is very ill and is a patient at a hospital at Thief River Falls.

Relatives and friends visited at the A. Hjelle home Thursday, Mrs. Hjelle's birthday.

Life of Chas. E. Smith

Funeral services were conducted from the Free Mission church here on Thursday last week for Charles Erick Smith, pioneer of this community having lived on a farm north of Holt for 55 years.

He was born March 16, 1858 in Vasterjotland, Sweden. On July 16, 1892 he was married to Emily Peterson. To this union 10 children were born. Left to mourn his loss are his wife and the following sons and daughters: Mrs. Toren, (Teckla), Middle River; George, Stenswood, Wash.; Mrs. Alfred Swanson, (Mable) McGregor; Rev. Reuben, Aitkin; Willie and Arthur, Fairbanks; Rudolph and Clarence, Holt. Martin, Wis. Dells, Wis.; Pvt. Johnnie, Fairbanks, Alaska; Victor, (adopted) International Falls.

He is also mourned by 20 grand children and two great-grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends.

Mr. Smith reached the age of 87 years, one month 14 days. In 1941, Mr. and Mrs. Smith moved to McGregor, Minn. where they lived until his death.

Carlson Funeral home had charge of arrangements. Interment was made in the Holt cemetery. Pall bearers were Carl Johnson, Victor Johnson, Ingvald Fosholm, Carsten Sagstuen, Elling Waagedahl, John Ness.

Among those who were present from a distance were the following families: Anton Peterson, Fred Johnson, Bill Peterson Herman Heinze, Rev. Carlson, H. Kellberg, and Mrs. Shanahan Willie and Oscar Smith all of Thief River Falls; Nels Johnson of St. Hilaire; Clifford Johnson of Viking. Rev. Reuben Smith, Rev. Swanson, M. Smith and Arvid Toren.

Card Of Thanks

We hereby wish to express heartfelt thanks to all for the sympathy, kindness and help during the funeral for our dear husband and father. Special thanks to Rev. Myhrer. Rev. and Mrs. Carlson and the Gusa family for their words of comfort and songs. Also thanks to Lutheran church for the use of the facilities for serving lunch, to all who gave flowers and memorials and to those who helped in other ways. God Bless you all.

Mrs. C. E. Smith and family.

Bond Drive Starts Monday

Let's Finish the Job!

With this slogan in mind, following the unconditional surrender of Germany on Monday. Marshall County Volunteers will open the Mighty Seventh War Loan Drive on Monday morning when the big job of selling the $589,000 worth of War Bonds to county residents will be under way.

"This is no time to slacken the pace—we still have a formidable enemy to defeat before total Victory and Peace will come to the world," O. M. Mattson, county War Finance committee chairman, stated Monday, upon announcement of Victory in Europe.

Marshall county must oversubscribe this Mighty Seventh War Loan just as it has in the six previous drives in order to thoroughly appreciate the Victory that has been won and in order to supply our fighting men in the big Victory over Japan which is now bound to come. There is a long and hard fight ahead and it will be costly. Marshall county must continue to do its part and War Finance committeemen feel certain that every citizen will buy bonds to the very limit.

While some Victory Volunteers have already commenced work in the county, the formal opening of the drive will take place on Monday when nearly 400 representatives of the U. S. Treasury—your neighbors—will commence making their personal calls to speed reaching the big quotas assigned.

Minnesota Victory Volunteers set out this week to sell $224,000,000 in War Bonds to a million people, as the Mighty Seventh War Loan moved into action.

Official opening of the drive is next Monday, when tremendous national publicity through newspapers and the radio will kick off the drive.

Minnesota's quotas for the big drive are:

Total quota, $224,000,000.

Sales to individuals, including all bonds bought by individuals, $140,000,000.

E Bonds, $80,000,000. This is included in the $140,000,000 for individuals.

"This is the toughest drive of all," Charles F. Liscomb, executive vice-chairman of the state committee, said, "because of the big quota for individuals, and because victory in Europe makes it look like the end is near. But I know the men and women who are taking on this drive, and the school children who are working at it in all parts of the state, will let nothing interfere with complete success. Minnesota always has made a good record and I am sure will do so again."

Card of Thanks

At this time I want to express my sincere thanks to relatives and friends for the gifts, books, letters and cards. Pastor Urness for the prayers, songs and visit; Miss Olson and all my room mates who have so many times remembered me with gifts and letters. The Dorcas girls, Nazareth Lutheran Sunday school and Sunshine committee of Circle 4.

It was all very much appreciated, especially during my many months of illness. I am happy to say at this time I am feeling much better and may it be the Lord's will that I soon can be up and around again.

Thank you all.
Marlene Joan Holst.

Attend the School Meeting

At a special meeting of the Board of Education which was held on Monday evening the members were unanimously in favor of transporting the High School pupils of this school district to Thief River Falls during the coming school year.

In the opinion of all of the members the district will be benefited financially if all of the pupils, grade as well as high school, are transported. All the taxpayers, especially parents are urged to attend the annual meeting which will be held Tuesday evening, May 15th, so that these maters may receive full consideration. The financial condition of the school district, the difficulty in securing teachers, and the substantial increase in the teachers' salaries and in the cost of equipment are conditions which give rise to consideration of transportation.

Special service of thanks and prayer was conducted at the Nazareth Lutheran church on Tuesday evening, VE day. The church was filled to capacity. The Men's Club met after services. Supt. Fjelstad of Thief River Falls spoke on rural education.

A large number of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Sorum on Sunday afternoon for a farewell party for their son Willis. He was presented with a cash purse.

Phones on Street Cars Connect Crew, Dispatchers

Two-way radio telephones are now used by 13 street-railway companies for communication between the dispatcher's office and supervisory motorcars and emergency trucks, says Collier's.

A new device, used in conjunction with such systems, automatically records the exact time each streetcar passes a number of successive points spaced along its route. With it, a dispatcher can see at once when and where a particular car is behind schedule or stopped by an accident and can then radio the nearest supervisory car to make an investigation.

Higher Meat Ceiling Would Hurt Farmers In Long Run: Wickard

Raising Limits Would Lead To Increased Wages and Prices All Along Line.

By WALTER A. SHEAD
WNU Staff Correspondent.

In view of the conflicting stories on meat shortages, on lowering or increasing ceiling meat prices, on claims of losses by packers on meat slaughter . . . here are statements by the two top men who should know most about the meat and food situation in this country.

Claude Wickard, secretary of agriculture, states, "The shortage of meat is due to a greatly increased demand, since actual amounts of meat available or in prospect for 1945 are at a high level. Over-all meat production—pork, beef, veal, lamb and mutton — is estimated at 22.4 billion pounds dressed weight for the calendar year 1945. This is 38 per cent above average production 1935-39, and was only exceeded in two years, 1943 and 1944.

"A general increase in livestock and meat ceilings is not likely to immediately increase the number of animals marketed. In fact, it might have the opposite effect. The amount of feed, grain, grass and roughage and the numbers of livestock now on hand will govern the total meat production during the next several months. In so far as pork production is concerned, farmers are much more interested in support prices than they are in ceiling prices.

"Slaughterers have taken advantage of farmers on the support price program. For instance, when the support price governed hogs weighing from 200 to 275 pounds, slaughterers were very careful to materially slash prices offered for hogs weighing slightly under or over the weight range.

Small Plants Active.

Meat slaughter outside of federally inspected plants (and this is contrary to testimony of the independent packers) has been at a relatively high level so far in 1945. This either means that small operators are, after all, able to continue in the business, or that the black market has substantially increased. And there is no indication at this time that the profits derived from the processing and handling of meat are retarding production and marketing of livestock. Any break in ceilings which would result in an increase of meat prices at retail should be avoided. Farmers and ranchers deserve fair prices, but ceiling increases which could only lead to demands for the upward revision of wages as well as demands for other price increases will work against the long run interest of farmers and ranchers, as well as against the success of our immediate war effort."

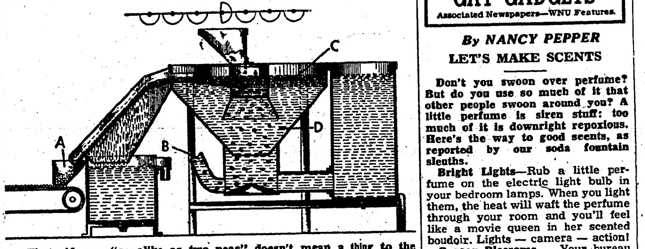
War Food Administrator Marvin Jones said, "we have a vast supply of cattle in this country, more than 80 million head. They are being slaughtered at this time in greater numbers than they were in the same period last year. But meat is one of the most essential requirements of a fighting man. In view of the greatly increased military demands, you and I will average about 7 or 8 pounds less during this year than the average in the five years just before the war.

"There will be less beef and pork for civilians than we have had in the past, but a little larger proportion of veal, lamb and chicken. The demand for food has been enormous, both at home and abroad. For the past three or four years we have eaten more food than ever before in our history. Nearly a tenth of our population is in the armed services or is employed by them. If those 12½ million people were permanently camped in one spot and would remain there in their barracks, their food demands would be far less. But they are scattered all over the world and big pipelines of ships are filled with food to reach them. The nature of war makes it impossible to plan the exact amount of food that will be needed at any given place next month, or next week. The exact amounts can't be known. To risk having too little is a chance that we will not take.

Food Keeps Allies Fighting.

"The United States has deliberately chosen to spend material whenever possible, instead of men. It is consistent with this policy that we are supplying food to French soldiers, Italian soldiers and Filipino fighting guerrillas, along with our British and Russian allies. Thus, insofar as any civilian in America today shares the nation's food supply, to that extent he helps save the lives of his neighbor's sons. Some items of food such as fats, oils and sugar will not be sufficient to meet all wants, but with available supplies of other foods there will be sufficient for good nutrition. There is no occasion for hysteria. We should keep our feet on the ground and at all times hold steady to our course of winning the war."

Machine Finds Difference Between Two Peas



That old saw "as alike as two peas" doesn't mean a thing to the Food Machinery corp. quality grader which takes two grades of peas from any given quantity and separates them by specific gravity, the fancy going through one outlet (A), and the too mature through another, (B). In illustration above (C) shows tender peas floating on top of brine; (D) the too mature peas sinking.

Peas enter the machine through a feed hopper on top which discharges below the surface of the brine. The circulating brine enters the separating tank through the bottom, and at a tangent, so as to cause the entire tankful of brine to whirl. As peas are admitted to the brine, the fancy, lighter ones quickly float to the surface and are carried around to the discharge point by the circular motion of the brine. The firm or hard peas sink, are caught by the whirling brine and discharged through an outlet in the bottom of the tank.

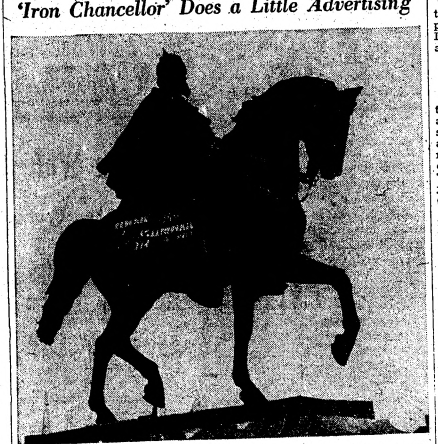
'Iron Chancellor' Does a Little Advertising



This imposing equestrian statue of Prince Otto von Bismarck, the "Iron Chancellor," stands in conquered Saarbrucken. The sign hanging on Bismarck's arm reads, "Truckin' Thru Saarbrucken with the 274th Inf. Reg." It was put on by U. S. engineers. Bismarck is generally regarded as the founder of the modern German empire.

Rural Roads Can Be Paved With Federal Aid if State Will Meet Half of the Cost

It is an axiom that it costs less to drive over good roads than over bad ones. But the actual spread between the cost of operating over good roads and over bad is far greater than the average person suspects.

An eminent authority on the subject is the rural letter carrier. He knows all about roads, good and bad, for he and 32,120 of his fellows daily drive 1,500,000 miles over all kinds of roads. Most of this tremendous mileage is what we know as secondary or farm-to-market roads.

Dirt Roads Hard on Cars.

Rural carriers use three main types of roads — dirt, gravel and paved. Records kept by carriers in Indiana and Iowa show these operating costs per mile:

Earth roads	7.8 cents
Gravel roads	4.5 cents
Pavement	3.8 cents

About three years ago, the National Rural Letter Carriers' association made a study of its membership in 44 states and came up with an average cost of 8.269 cents per mile. Some carriers reported costs of 10, 12 and even 16 cents a mile. The 8 cent average is, however, just about twice the cost of driving over good roads at that time.

It is estimated that due to lack of maintenance and general wear and tear, the average is today probably 25 to 30 per cent over the previous study. In the light of these figures, bad roads prove themselves a depressing economic waste.

Less Than 1% Good Pavement.

We have in this country a vast network of county, township and village roads totaling 2,400,000 miles. These roads serve 6,000,000 farms with an annual production of food valued at $12,000,000,000. These are the roads that carry our children to school, bring the mail to us and deliver farm products to market daily. But let's break this highway system down further.

We find only 45,000 miles of high grade pavement, a small fraction of 1 per cent. Some 99,000 miles have a low type bituminous surfacing, 788,000 miles are of a non-treated surface subject to dust and mud, 613,000 miles are merely graded and drained, and 861,000 miles are classed as primitive — in other words, hardly more than trails.

Over these roads flow a large part of America's farm production, yet 42 per cent of the farms are still on dirt roads. Better rural roads will speed up shipment from farm to city and materially reduce food costs.

U. S. Funds Available.

Recently enacted federal legislation has authorized funds for extensions and improvement of secondary roads in the immediate post-war era. This federal-aid fund must be matched dollar-for-dollar by the states, and if the state laws do not permit such participation, they should be amended this year to make it possible.

Users of rural delivery service and those who should have it can do a great work by letting their state legislators know how they feel about better farming community roads. At the same time, they can let their local highway officials know how much these postwar plans mean to them and their families. The users of farm-to-market roads have a real stake in what should be done.

LET'S MAKE SCENTS

Don't you swoon over perfume? But do you use so much of it that other people swoon around you? A little perfume is siren stuff: too much of it is downright repoxious. Here's the way to good scents, as reported by our soda fountain sleuths.

Bright Lights—Rub a little perfume on the electric light bulb in your bedroom lamps. When you light them, the heat will waft the perfume through your room and you'll feel like a movie queen in her scented boudoir. Lights — camera — action!

Bureau Blossoms — Your bureau drawers will smell like flower gardens if you leave pieces of sweet scented soap in each one. Or, how about placing a blotter saturated in perfume in every bureau drawer?

Salted Ribbons — Sounds weird but smells wonderful! Keep your hair ribbons in an empty bath salts box and they'll capture its fragrance. It won't just be "Stardust" that makes him swoony when he dances with you.

Enchanted Envelopes—Seal your envelopes with perfume and you'll be sending scents to all your friends.

Bottle Business—Dress all your perfume bottles in little shirred skirts, made from the leftovers from your dressing table skirt.

Steady Stuff

This boy and girl business keeps us busy, even in these days of manpower shortage, but we're up to the minute with the latest news and views of who goes with whom and how can you tell. Here are some of the new expressions you ought to know.

D.B.—Dream Boy or Dearly Beloved (It's what a gal calls her OAO).

Clickers—Boy and Girl who are going steady.

On a Chain—What you call a couple who are going steady—because they're linked together, see?

Bulb Snatcher—Girl who blitzes another girl's steady (or boy who does vice versa).

Running on the Same Ticket—Going steady.

She Walks Alone—You say it with music when she and her steady have pf-f-tt.

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS—

Don't try too hard to be the Life of every Party. What I mean is, don't insist upon being the center of attention. People won't listen to you just because you're making more noise than anyone else. Don't try to blitz ALL of the boys ALL of the time. Girls who try to be the Life of the Party sometimes turn out to be the Death of it.

ALBANY. —Motorists rubbed their eyes in unbelief, then broke all records in closing automobile windows as a convoy of skunks, reported to have numbered at least 300, crossed the four-lane Albany-Schenectady road. It was believed that brush fires had driven the skunks from their old lairs.

Logs Debarked by High Pressure Jets of Water

Several sawmills now remove bark from logs at the rate of 20 feet in 30 seconds with a new machine that fires two jets of water down at them as they rotate and pass by on a conveyor, says Collier's.

As the jets exert the tremendous pressure of 1,400 pounds per square inch, they are moved back and forth rapidly on a carriage, so that they will not bore holes in the logs.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

In 1942, our first year at war, 4½% of the rubber consumed in the U. S. was synthetic; in 1943, 35%, and in 1944 80%. At the present time, more than 85% is synthetic.

The synthetic rubber industry is using soap at the rate of 100,000,000 pounds a year—enough to cover the needs of the population of Chicago for one year.

A new kind of synthetic rubber has been developed from lactic acid (buttermilk).

The B. F. Goodrich Company has made experimental tires of rubber produced from kok-saghyz, the Russian dandelion.

Household Hints

Eggs which are very cold separate more easily. Break them as soon as they come out of the ice box if the yolks and whites are to be used separately.

Dusting with talcum or cornstarch will help keep rubber gloves from sticking together on the inside. The powder is dusted both on the inside and on the outside. This should be done to any rubber material that lies folded.

Squeeze a little lemon juice through the meat grinder before grinding dates, figs, prunes or raisins and they will leave the chopper more readily.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK THROUGHOUT THE STATE TOLD IN BRIEF FORM

N. D. Soldier Given Award For Services

DICKINSON — The war department has announced the award of the Distinguished Unit badge to Lt. Col. J. A. Boulger, son of Richard Boulger of here, an Associated Press dispatch from Washington recently announced. The award was given for his services as a staff officer with the Third armored division of the First Army in Europe. Colonel Boulger has been prominent in Dickinson news of late as he was declared missing in action on March 27th in a telegram received here April 11th, but in a cable received a week later informed his father that he had been injured slightly and was otherwise all right. In a later letter he told of being captured by the Germans, obtaining his release later by unspecified means, and of being wounded in the hip by a bullet and is now in an evacuation hospital.

Soldier Compares Rhine With Red

GRAND FORKS — "After the build-up the Rhine received I expected to see a really big stream," Maj. James Kilgore wrote his parents here. However, said Major Kilgore, the highly vaunted Rhine "wasn't much bigger than the Red river, at least at the point we crossed." Discussing the devastation of war in the Rhine valley, the officer said that "I was interested in the things I saw in and around this famous stream. All the bridges have been knocked out; hundreds of cargo barges have been sunk in the channel; all the towns lining it have been blown to h——, and I mean exactly that."

N.D. Indian Does Tribal Dance

FORT YATES—Somewhere in the South Pacific, natives recently saw the first American Indians go into their dance, with war paint and feathers, and tom toms beating out the music.

The vanishing American's tribal rites have become a rare sight even in their native Dakotas and Oklahoma, but here it was more than strange to see a Sioux and a Kiowa stomp and chant the Eagle dance in a acocoanut palm grove under a full South seas moon.

Two full-blooded Indians, marine Pfc. Louis White, 20, of Fort Yates, N. D., and Pfc. Clarence Haag, 20, of Mountain Viek, Okla. They performed the dance for fellow marines.

Minot Man Sees Home-Town Ship

MINOT—First Lieut. William Fuller recently wrote his father, E. C. Fuller of here, from "The Emperor's Homeland," that he "was up on the bridge noticing the names of the ships with his outfit, and discovered that just a few yards away was the home town Victory ship." At the time of this writing, Lt. Fuller, a marine corps flyer, was on his way to Okinawa in a convoy. In his letter he states:

"It is a good looking ship, plenty fast, and it hauls a big cargo. You can tell the [illegible] people that she is doing a good job, and is definitely in front line action."

The S. S. Minot Victory was launched last December at Portland, Ore., at ceremonies at which Minot was officially represented.

FIRE DESTROYS FARM RESIDENCE

COOPERSTOWN—Fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Pella six miles south of here recently. The fire was first discovered about midnight, apparently starting within the walls of an upstairs room. The family fought the flames to no avail, but succeeded in removing the bulk of the furniture and personal belongings to safety. Other farm buildings were not damaged. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Grand Forks Man Heads High Schools

GRAND FORKS — Supt. E. A. Quam of Oakes, was elected president of the North Dakota high school conference for the ensuing year at closing sessions of a two-day school of instruction at the University of North Dakota recently. Others elected were Supt. Albert Peterson, Cavalier, vice president; principal E. A. Rietz, Devils Lake, and Supt. George Falkenstein, Rolla, director, and John A. Page, University of North Dakota, exofficia.

Science Develops Aids for Farmers

Crop and Livestock Improvements Seen

CONTINUED high production levels on American farms in 1945 should be materially aided by recent discoveries and developments by U. S. department of agriculture research experts.

Some of the announced results of the Agricultural Research administration's program are:

1. Release of 43 new improved varieties of plants; such as corn hybrids, suitable to the South. Hybrid corn has been little used there so far, but the new variety shows promise of bigger acre yield increases than in the North. Hybrid onions give evidence of increasing yields per acre, as much as 20 to 50 per cent.
2. Working out of methods for conditioning and treating ammonium nitrate, so that it can be readily used as a high-nitrogen fertilizer.
3. Confirmation by tests with DD (dichloropropylene - dichloropropane) of earlier reports that it is highly effective against the rootknot nematode.
4. Development of a mechanism for dispersal of insecticidal sprays by airplane.
5. Production of new allyl compounds, from ordinary sugars and starches, that form clear, weather-resistant coatings for wood, paper, or metal.
6. Development of a dual-stretch method which improves the physical properties of cord made from cotton fiber, the result of research on tire cord.
7. Extension of the use of phenothiazine as a drug for livestock. Research has shown that it can be safely used for calves, and that wormy sheep taking regular small doses in their salt, show improvement from the medication.

Better Production

Postwar Locker Plant Expansion Promised

Model Locker Plants Increase.

As a result of prewar as well as successful wartime experience of farmers who have used frozen food lockers for quick freezing and storing of their surplus food supplies, a broad increase in construction of locker plants in farming communities is expected after the war, according to the National Frozen Food Locker association.

The frozen food locker industry, now operating more than two million individual storage units, serves one-fourth of America's farm families, and is making plans for further expansion.

Rental of lockers, in many cases, is far below the cost for low temperature refrigeration installed by individual farmers. Tests have proven that the quality of meats, fruits and vegetables can be maintained by properly regulated locker plants.

Not only do locker plants serve as a storage place for the needs of the farmer, but it is possible for him to develop a select retail trade, selling in winter direct from his locker supply.

True or False

Test your knowledge of your Government's War Bond Financing program. The answers to these questions, given at the end, should be known by every American. How good are you?

1. 85 million Americans have purchased Series E War Bonds.
2. 84% of all the money ever invested in E Bonds is still invested in them.
3. If a Bond is lost, stolen or destroyed, it is just the same as if the owner had lost the money he invested.
4. E Bonds may be cashed at any qualified bank for their full cost any time after 60 days from date of issue.
5. The U. S. Government's promise to redeem War Bonds any time after 60 days from date of issue is just as strong as its promise to stand back of a dollar bill.
6. You have to hold a Bond the full ten years to get any interest.
7. The lowest-priced War Bond costs $25.
8. War Bonds are better than cash.
9. Two persons cannot own a War Bond jointly.
10. The only reason we should buy War Bonds is to help pay for food, ammunition, etc., for the armed forces.

ANSWERS

1. True.
2. True.
3. False. War Bonds are registered in the names of their owners, and lost Bonds can be replaced.
4. True.
5. True. Compare wording on a Bond and a bill.
6. False. Your Bond increases in value after one year. See the values on the back of the Bond. But you get a greater increase in value the longer you hold a Bond, up to $1 at the end of 10 years for every $3 you paid.
7. False. A $25 Bond costs $18.75.
8. True. They can be replaced if lost, they increase in value and they can be converted into cash in case of need.
9. False. War Bonds can be owned by two people as co-owners or as owner and beneficiary.
10. False. Your savings invested in War Bonds will also help to stabilize prices now and to provide for your own security in the future.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

Serving Labor

San Francisco was the first big city I ever saw. Young and interested in everything, I stopped one day to look at a big piece of plate glass being installed in a storefront. It was the lunch hour and the workmen were not busy. As they ate they drank from bottles. When the bottles were empty, they broke them. The incident gave me a distinct shock, and I never forgot it.

Back in Oklahoma, 60 miles from a railroad where I had learned to walk as well as to plow, every manufactured thing was deemed to have value. My mother literally hoarded bottles for many useful purposes. A milk bottle would have been prized in her collection. My curiosity won a battle with bashfulness and I asked the workmen why they broke the bottles, and they told me.

Idea to Make Work.

"You see, buddy," the foreman explained, "we work in glass. So do the working men who make the bottles. The more bottles we break the more work they will have." Later I learned that this was a tradition of the industry, supposedly based on fellowship and loyalty to Labor. At first I was very much confused—loyalty to Labor seemed entirely right to me, destructiveness entirely wrong.

Just recently, Edward T. Cheyfitz, national chairman of an important labor union, a member of the National Reconversion Committee of the C.I.O., touched on the subject in as clear and sound an economic treatise as I ever read. It appeared in the December issue of Fortune. He called bottle breaking a waste of labor and raw material, typical of an old fashioned and wrong attitude toward jobs and wages.

For High Production.

This big labor leader said, "I know of numerous cases in prewar days where workers deliberately held down production because they had been made to feel that this was the road to wage and employment security. We must educate union membership," he continued, "to . . . practice high productivity. Certainly labor can not increase its own share of goods by producing less."

To sum up the whole article, Mr. Cheyfitz contends that labor and management must find a common ground if our nation, as now constituted, is to survive. He said the survival of labor unions depends on the same thing. To find this common ground, the C.I.O. man suggests that labor and management travel the same road of maximum production. Let me add, he is right.

A 40-Year Record.

History backs him up. High production has always helped labor. In 1899 the average factory employee toiled 60 hours a week and earned only $420 a year because what he produced would sell for no more than $1,030. In 1939 the average factory worker put in only 38 hours a week, turned out $3,140 worth of merchandise and earned $1,150 a year. Good tools make the difference.

With better equipment, the worker produces three times as much and therefore earns three times as much. The formula is still good. Greater and more efficient production will make many jobs at good pay in the postwar years. It will require better equipment but this can be provided wherever employers and employees see eye-to-eye. Mr. Cheyfitz points to the only hope in sight for labor or capital either.

President Osmena Predicts Japs Will Be Hard To Beat

OSMENA

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Sergio Osmena of the Philippines, now in process of complete reconquering from the Japanese and from which General Douglas MacArthur's land forces under Admiral Chester Nimitz will swing into final action against the enemy, today issued a statement in behalf of the Mighty Seventh War Loan.

President Osmena's statement was released by Brigadier General Carlos P. Romulo, resident commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, at the Philippine offices here. President Osmena said:

"Needless to say, we Filipinos are very pleased with the signal successes achieved by the United States and her allies during recent months. After a long and hard struggle, the Germans have been pushed to the brink of overwhelming defeat and the end of the war in Europe is now clearly in sight.

"In the Pacific, our gains have been no less impressive. Under the inspiring leadership of such men as General MacArthur and Admiral Nimitz, the Japanese have been dislodged from one position after another in their ill-gotten empire. In this connection, my people and I are extremely grateful that the Philippines are now being liberated from the tyrannical rule of the enemy.

"Happy as I am that my country will soon be able to live in peace again, much remains to be done before Japan is fully beaten. Aside from the additional campaigns which will be needed to obtain military victory in the Pacific, there is also the human factor to be considered in that other peoples of the Far East eagerly await to be freed from the enemy. We Filipinos know only too well from experience what it means to be under Japanese domination.

"One of the outstanding feats of the war has undoubtedly been the effective fashion in which the United States has overcome the formidable obstacles of distance in supplying the Pacific. Large quantities of supplies will be needed, however, to deliver the final crushing blows against a ruthless and fanatical enemy. All of us can make certain that these supplies are available for our armed forces by giving enthusiastic support to the Seventh War Loan Drive."

Mr. and Mrs. John Ness visited relatives in Roseau on Sunday They also visited with Rev. and Mrs. Hanson and family.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson spent from Thursday last week until Tuesday visiting relatives and attending to business in the Twin Cities.

HOLT
WILL DO IT AGAIN!

The Seventh War Loan Drive starts on the 14th of May. This community can and will put over its quota. At this stage of the game, we do not have to be told how necessary it is to buy war bonds—we know! The three main reasons for buying war bonds are:

1. To supply our boys with all the necessary equipment to win this war.
2. To help prevent inflation.
3. Because there is no sounder investment than a war bond. After the war is over, it will be the war bonds bought now which will help purchase the new home, the automobile, and the many things that will be needed.

SIGN LANGUAGE OF HUNGRY CROPS TELLS PLANT FOOD NEEDS

CHICAGO — The simple formula "ask the plant itself" was recommended to midwest farmers as the best means of discovering the causes of plant food hunger that bring about costly crop failures every year.

"Plants starving for nourishment have a sign language that readily reveals their distress to any farmer who watches the foliage and size of the plants during the growing season and then examines the appearance of the matured crop at harvest time," says a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

WHAT KIND OF PLANT FOOD DO YOU NEED?

Crops Tell Their Own Story of Plant Food Hunger.

"For instance, corn that is famished for plant food tells its hunger story in a variety of ways. When nitrogen is needed, the plant is stunted and undernourished, the leaves are greenish-yellow or orange-yellow and the tips are withered. When sufficient phosphorus is lacking, the leaves have a tendency to become purplish and the young plant is spindly and unthrifty. When potash, the balance wheel of plant foods, is absent from the soil, growth slows down, leaves scorch and the corn is more easily susceptible to diseases and parasites. At harvest, the ears are chaffy and of poor quality.

"Legumes, wheat and other grains, potatoes and other field crops reveal their hunger distress by various signs, all of which tell their need for nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. From experience with their 1944 crops, farmers may determine how the lack of essential fertilizer elements spelled the difference between bumper yields and failure.

"One safe remedy for diet deficiencies of all kinds is to have the soil tested before planting time to determine just which elements are lacking. But the surest preventive is to see that the land is regularly supplied with plenty of mixed fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash."

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hanson and Mrs. Hannah Tollefsrud arrived here last week from San Diego where they have been employed for the past three years. They are a present visiting at the Hj. Johnson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Larson and family visited relatives at St. Hilaire Sunday.

Petit Jury Was Discharged

The petit jury for the May term of the 14th Judicial District Court for Marshall County was discharged on Tuesday last week without being called to duty with no cases on the calendar requiring jure trial, A. C. Swandby, clerk of court announced.

J. C. Wilson, 78 year old Grygla resident and former village postmaster, entered a plea of not guilty when he was arraigned before Judge James Montague of Crookston at the opening of the term on May 7. Attorneys stipulated that the criminal proceedings be continued over until the November term, thereby eliminating the need for jury work.

Wilson is charged with using a dangerous weapon with intent to kill when he fired a shot from a revolver at Sheriff O. C. Toftner when the sheriff was enforcing a writ of restitution on him on April 9.

Mr. Wilson made application in the probate court before Judge Nels M. Engen, for committal to the state hospital at Fergus Falls. His application was granted and he will be sent to Fergus Fall for observation and treatment.

Lester Green, duck raiser, couldn't keep his flock from swimming across the lake and getting lost. Sez Lester, "I get to thinkin', people run around in circles. Now if I could get my ducks to swim in circles I would never lose any. Every time they started to swim they would come back where they started. Well, I got a poultry punch an' punched a hole in the web on their right foot. That let enough water through to make them swim in a circle. An' I ain't lost one since, and have money now to buy more and bigger War Bonds." U. S. Treasury Department

Permits Issued Slaughterers

The Marshall county local war price and rationing board is now issuing permits to farmers to slaughter meat for sale or transfer, according to F. C. Larson, chairman of the local board.

Farmers who sold or transferred 6000 pounds or less of dressed meat last year, which they slaughtered themselves or had slaughiered for them, must apply at the local board for a class III slaughter'spermit if they wish to sell meat after May 14. The amount of meat they may sell this year will be the same as they slaughtered for sale or transfer during the same period in 1944.

If a farmer sold or gave meat without surrending ration stamps to the board last year, he will be asked to sign an agreement that he will now collect red stamps and turn them in to the local board with a regular monthly report, Mr. Larson said.

Farmers who slaughterd more than 6000 pounds of meat last year and custom or commercial slaughterers will register with the district OPA office in Fargo as Class II slaughterers.

"Farm slaughtered meat must be limited to the 1944 figures," Mr. Larson said, "if we are to make sure that required supplies are furnished fighting men and civilians who live in non-meat producing areas". Mr. Larson explained that government orders must be filled by federally inspected plants and only federally inspected meat can cross state lines into areas where there is a critical meat shortage.

Jesse Sorum of Grand Forks is spending his vacation visiting relatives here.

June 1 Closing Date For Filing AAA Farm Plans

The closing date for filing 1945 Farm Plan Sheets with the County AAA Office is June 1, local Triple-A Chairman Chas. N. Kranz, reminded farmers this week. He emphasized the importance of filing the farm plans on or before the final date since payment for carrying out AAA conservation practices in 1945 will not be made unless the farm plan has been accepted in the county office. Farm plans must also be signed and a flax goal established to qualify a farm for the special $5.00 per acre flax payments.

Farm plans are also a means of recording 1945 food production intentions of farmers in Marshall County, Mr. Kranz said. Since farmers also report their 1944 production, AAA can estimate the percent increase or decrease of the food supply. With similar information gathered from every county in the nation the War Food Administration has a complete picture of the farm production situation and, if necessary, can act quickly to encourage or discourage production of any farm products in line with war and civilian requirements, Historical crop data are extremely important in maintenance of individual farm records for purposes of future production programs and crop insurance programs that may develop.

To Improve Capitol Approach

Improvement of the grounds in front of Minnesota's State Capital, a dream of many almost from the time the Capitol was designed by Cass Gilbert, and erection of a Veterans' Service building as a part of the Capitol group of buildings now is assured. The Minnesota Legislature in the closing week of its session completed passage of the bill for Capitol Approach and Veterans' Service building, and Governor Edward J. Thye has given the measure his approval.

The bill authorizes an expenditure of $2,000,000 for improvement and beautification of the Capitol Grounds, including the elimination of the present unsightly buildings in front of the Capitol and the development of a proper approach, and $2,000,000 for the erection of the building. In addition to quarters and meeting places for veterans' organization and department serving veterans, the building will house other state departments now being sheltered in rented quarters. In addition to the state improvements, the bill passed authorizes an expenditure of $2,000,000 by the city of St. Paul, for the alteration and improvement of streets leading to the Capitol.

Authors of the bill in the Senate were Senator Charles N. Orr, J. V. Weber and William Dahlquist. Sponsors of the bill in the House were Representatives Robert F. Lee, Frederick P. Memmer, Charles L. Halstad, Joseph J. Daun and Claude H. Allen.

The Nazareth Lutheran church was filled to capacity Sunday for services and again in the evening for Luther League. The loud speaking system was used so the overflow crowd could hear the services and program.

Tony and Mary Bukowski of Middle River, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Larson, Mrs. Alfred Larson, Melvin and Lois, Mrs. Marlan Augustine and Fred Lufkin visited at the Loyd Larson home Monday night to help Mrs. Larson celebrate her birthday.

WAR PRODUCTION:
Tapering Off

With Germany's collapse focusing attention on the government's economic policies after V-E Day, War Production board officials revealed that arms contracts already were being cut back to lessen the shock of readjustment to a one-front war.

Despite the broadening of civilian goods output after V-E Day, officials said, war production still will dominate industry with no less than 48 billion dollars worth of munitions and supplies turned out in the first year after victory in Europe.

Because of the military needs for the Pacific war, some material and manpower controls will have to be retained, officials declared. Further, the government may have to establish employment priorities for such essential civilian industries as lumber, textiles and rubber because of the limited supply of these products and their importance not only to the war but also to the manufacture of peacetime goods.

DEEP DIVE:
Record Set

Wearing a 50-pound diving suit and a new type of helium-oxygen mask, John Browne of Milwaukee, Wis., entered a specially built tank in the basement of his diving equipment company and remained submerged while pumps applied pressure equal to a depth of 550 feet of water.

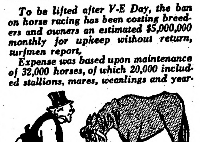
With the present working depth about 440 feet, purpose of the experiment was to attempt to increase the distance for extended submarine rescue and salvage operations. Claiming the test a success, Browne averred that dives of even 650 feet may be possible.

While at the simulated depth of 550 feet, Browne was under pressure of 240 pounds a square inch or a total of 570,000 pounds.

Expensive Feedbag

To be lifted after V-E Day, the ban on horse racing has been costing breeders and owners an estimated $5,000,000 monthly for upkeep without return, turfmen report.

Expense was based upon maintenance of 32,000 horses, of which 20,000 included stallions, mares, weanlings and yearlings on farms; 6,000 in training at a cost of $7 daily, and another 6,000 runners at $3 daily.



With some turfmen estimating loss of $4,000,000 in revenue from purses since January 3, when the ban went into effect, many horsemen have been hard pressed, obtaining assistance from track managements on a loan basis.

SAN FRANCISCO:
Postwar Bases

Formation of international trusteeships for conquered territories, for areas taken over in the last war and for subject people occupied the attention of the delegates to the United Nations postwar security conference in San Francisco.

Because the U. S. again will be chiefly responsible for the defense of the Pacific in the postwar era, the subject was of especial concern to the American representatives, who pressed for acceptance of a plan under which this country could permanently lease bases on conquered islands without being compelled to turn them over to any other trustee power.

The power was patterned after this country's arrangements with Great Britain calling for the 99-year lease of bases in Bermuda, Newfoundland and the West Indies, and the agreement with Panama under which the U. S. occupies the canal zone for $250,000 per year.

MEAT CRISIS:
House Report

Adequate pricing backed by accompanying government subsidies was urged by a special house committee investigating food shortages to help relieve the pressing meat situation.

In placing stress upon the necessity for readjusting the price structure, the committee asserted that OPA got off on the wrong foot by first establishing retail prices, then working down the line with the interjection of subsidies in an effort to remove resulting inequities.

Ruling out an increase in retail prices, the committee rather recommended the payment of $4 more a hundredweight for fat cattle, and also asked an increase in hog floors to $13.50. Only by assuring producers a profitable price margin can black markets be curbed, the committee declared.

Output Drops

More than 400,000,000 pounds less meat which may move in interstate commerce was produced in April compared with the same month last year, according to a report refused by the American Meat institute.

April meat production for all kinds showed substantial reduction compared with the preceding month—beef and veal, 19 and 18 per cent, respectively, lamb and pork, 13 per cent respectively, the institute said.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

RUSSIA AND ALLIES

SAN FRANCISCO. — To the average outsider, the most difficult thing to understand about this conference is the attitude of the Russians. Poor press relations, plus a few inept moves have melted down a large mountain of goodwill built up by the valor of the Red army. In a few short days they have destroyed much of the favorable sentiment in Latin America, and through no fault of ours, won us more friends below the Rio Grande than we ever had before.

One of the things Molotov did in San Francisco was to invite two prominent Latin-American delegates to dinner at the Russian consulate, along with a few carefully selected Europeans. Latin guests were Mexico's tall, handsome Foreign Minister Padilla, and Chile's aristocratic Foreign Minister Joaquin Fernandez Y Fernandez, who is rapidly assuming a new leadership in Latin America.

Molotov drank a toast to Chile and her new establishment of diplomatic relations with Russia.

"There are so many Chileans who want to become Ambassador to Moscow," joked Foreign Minister Fernandez in return, "that it is one of my greatest problems." Mexico's Padilla, apparently on excellent terms with Molotov, said: "All Latin America would be pleased if our sister republic, Argentina, was admitted to the conference."

Molotov, in mellow mood, seemed to register no objection.

Mood Changes.

But a day later the mood was different. Padilla arose in secret session to propose Secretary Stettinius as permanent chairman of the conference. Molotov promptly objected. He pointed out that four countries had invited the other nations to attend this conference and that the representatives of all four host countries should rotate as chairman.

Foreign Minister Padilla then delivered a recitation of previous precedents where the nation which served as host also acted as chairman. When he had finished, Molotov, who had already pointed out that four nations were hosts, got up and remarked:

"I am glad to be instructed in diplomatic procedure by the delegate of Mexico, but apparently he prepared his little speech before he heard my view."

Padilla, who had not read his speech, was taken aback. He mumbled something about always being prepared when he attended a conference, and sat down. After a long, hot debate, Molotov won his point. But the manner in which he jumped on the Mexican lost him friends. A lot of Latins, jealous of Padilla's brilliant oratory, previously had been opposed to him. But Molotov veered them in the opposite direction.

Next day, in secret session, Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk of Czechoslovakia, a nation cooperating with Russia, pointed to the vacant chair of Poland and moved that the Lublin government be admitted. Foreign Minister Subasich of Yugoslavia, also close to Russia, seconded the motion. Whereupon, Anthony Eden, white-faced and prim, emphatically opposed. There followed more hot debate.

Finally, to break the deadlock, Foreign Minister Spaak of Belgium proposed a compromise resolution expressing sympathy with Poland and hoping that she could be admitted soon. Genial, rotund Ambassador Caceres of Honduras, a great friend of the U.S.A., rose to second Belgium.

Whereupon Molotov cracked back: "Notwithstanding the support of the Republic of Honduras, the Soviet Union stands by its position."

Delegates Startled.

A note of biting sarcasm rang through Molotov's voice which startled the delegates. It sounded as if the powerful Soviet Union, representing the greatest land-mass in the world, was trying to put the tiniest republic in Latin America in its place. Again, Russia lost more friends. And later when the vote was taken on seating Lublin Poland, she lost that also.

These are some of the things about the Russians that take a lot of understanding. On the other hand, when Molotov, after winning his point on rotating the chairmanship, finally sat in Stettinius' place, he did an excellent job. He got off a little gag about being glad the conference would now have an opportunity to hear Russian, and proceeded to handle the session in most expert manner.

Jellied Gas Makes Flame Throwers More Deadly

The flame throwers used by American soldiers were recently made more deadly and safer to operate by the adoption of a jellied gasoline, which is prepared on the battlefield by stirring a powder into ordinary motor fuel, says Collier's.

As this jelly produces a cohesive stream of fire instead of a billowing flame, it not only sticks to and ignites anything that will burn, but it can be shot through small openings, such as the narrow slits of tanks and pillboxes, at a distance of 60 yards.

Collapse of Reich Spells End To German Dominance in Europe; Truman Cuts Budget 7½ Billion

Released by Western Newspaper Union

Spectacular photo shows Jap pilot trying to maneuver plane for suicidal crash-dive on American warship off Okinawa.

EUROPE:
At Allied Mercy

"The direction of our fate no longer lies in German hands."

Thus spoke ex-Nazi Minister of Armaments and Production Albert Speer as the final collapse to German armies from the Baltic to the Alps signalled the break-up of the once proud third reich, which had stretched its dominance from the Atlantic to the Volga under the leadership of Adolf Hitler, himself reportedly killed in the ruins of Berlin.

Karl Doenitz and Heinrich Himmler

Even as Speer spoke, new Fuehrer Karl Doenitz and Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler reportedly met in conference with Allied officials for the final arrangements for surrender. But as they met, the Germans, striving for the best terms possible, threatened prolongation of the war by a last-ditch stand in mountainous Norway, where 150,000 enemy troops stood ensconced in the rugged country well supplied.

Claiming to have been designated new fuehrer by Hitler himself before his reported death, Doenitz made an early revamp of the new government in an effort to make it more tasteful to the Allies, with non-Nazi Count Von Krosigk supplanting Joachim Von Ribbentrop as foreign minister. Skilled as finance minister, Von Krosigk played a prominent part in the buildup of German industry during the Hitler regime.

Doenitz's participation in the surrender negotiations followed Himmler's earlier failure to arrange a capitulation to Great Britain and the U. S., the two powers insisting on the inclusion of Russia. Although Doenitz declared that the reich was carrying on the war against the Reds alone, Britain and America again made it plain that they could consider no surrender unless the Nazis also laid down their arms to the Russians.

Germany's end approached with the Big Three powers substantially occupying the reich along lines previously mapped out, with the British holding the northwest portion, the U. S. the central and south, and Russia the northeast. The same condition existed in Austria, where the Reds held Vienna and contiguous territory as planned while U. S. armies moved in to take over the western portion.

As Speer sounded the death-knell of Nazi Germany, he admitted the reich was at the Allies' mercy. Said he: "It lies with our enemies whether they wish to grant the German people the possibilities that lie open to the nation. . . . As far as the enemy allows it or where he orders it, reconstruction work should be speeded up by every means."

'Painful Experience'

Of all the prominent German generals who surrendered to the Allies, none was more prominent than 69-year-old Field Marshal Karl Rudolph Gerd Von Rundstedt, ace strategist who directed the enemy break-through in the Ardennes last winter. Brought to Lieutenant General Patch's U. S. 7th army headquarters, the tall but thinning Junker militarist softly complained: "This is a painful experience for an old soldier. Forty-three years—a very painful experience."

After accepting coffee and cognac, Von Rundstedt then asked for a cigarette, and in answer to his attending physician's protest against smoking because of his heart, he said: " . . . There are few things left now — and the doctors try to keep me from enjoying them."

Commander-in-chief of German forces in the west at the time of the Allied invasion of France, Von Rundstedt said that the American air force's pulverization of railroads and roadways made it impossible for him to bring up reinforcements to counter the landings.

Among the last men to see Hitler, Von Rundstedt said that although the fuehrer appeared in good health when he bid him farewell in March he shook as if with palsy.

FARM MARKETS:

Present high level of demand for farm products is likely to be maintained throughout most of 1945 with consumer incomes more than sufficient to purchase all of the farm products likely to be available to civilians this year.

The index of nonagricultural income payments for February, 1945, was 240, the highest ever recorded and nearly 5 per cent above the previous year.

U. S. BUDGET:
Big Cut

Because of the favorable progress of the war, President Truman was able to take axe in hand and pare the budget for the year beginning July 1 by almost $7,500,000,000 to a total of $83,000,000,000, $70,000,000,000 of which will represent military expenditures.

Biggest reduction of all was a $7,365,000,000 slash in shipbuilding funds, with the maritime commission left $2,242,500 for completing the present construction program and $600,000,000 for future building, reconversion of vessels and restoration of productive facilities.

Because of the expectations of an early victory in Europe, $43,710,400 was cut from the budget of the Federal Security administration for education and training of defense workers; $13,200,000 from the Office of Scientific Research and Development; $12,100,000 from the Office of War Information for psychological warfare and activities in neutral countries; $8,894,000 from the War Production board for direction over some material controls to be removed after V-E day; $4,800,000 in the Office of Censorship for operations in areas contiguous to Europe, and $3,300,000 for the Office of Defense Transportation for supervision of traffic expected to improve by December 31.

PACIFIC:
U-Boat Drive

Operating in air-conditioned submarines, equipped with sun lamps and ice cream machines, daring U. S. raiders are inflicting a heavy toll on Japanese naval and cargo shipping alike, having already sunk 400,000 tons of combat vessels and 4,000,000 tons of commercial craft.

De luxe furnishing of American submersibles does not imply any softening of their doughty crews, Vice Adm. Charles Lockwood Jr., commander of Pacific U-boat operations, said. Rather, air-conditioning removes the stuffiness which made the old subs akin to a Turkish bath; sun lamps provide the healthy effects of sunlight, and ice cream helps divert the men from heavier food.

Concentrating on Jap supply routes to each new place marked for American attack and invasion, U. S. U-boats average three or four Jap ships on every trip, with sinkings of 8 and 10 vessels not unusual.

Pies Keep in Lockers

Magicians have been pulling rabbits out of hats for a good many years, but it is only recently that scientists have found it possible to pull pies out of freezer locker units.

Judging from results of a test at Rutgers university, the quick-frozen pies were voted not only as good as the freshly baked pies, but, in several cases, better in flavor and quality of their pastry.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

WPB has plans under way for expansion of facilities to produce 1,500,000 more truck and bus tires every three months for military and essential civilian use. Total production by next December is expected to reach a rate of 6,700,000 a quarter.

There are 1,450,000 rubber-tired tractors on American farms, many of which are now obsolete. It has been estimated that there will be more than 3,000,000 rubber-tired tractors on farms within ten years after the war.

The first known wheeled vehicles were used in Babylonia about 3000 B.C.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Marred Monuments

The most pathetic piece of statuary I ever saw was a 92-foot image of Rameses II, flat in a jungle, shy an arm and a leg and all but lost. It weighs countless tons. Uprighting it baffled Egyptian engineers for centuries. I am no art critic but I was impressed most of all by the skill and devoted craftsmanship still showing on the weathered stone. Its helplessness was depressing.

Monuments resemble reputations. They can be damaged beyond repair by commonplace things, soon forgotten. Storms too trivial to have a name can, in a few short hours, undermine huge foundations and leave stalwart landmarks buried in dirt. There are only two factors involved, whether you view it literally or figuratively: How sturdy is the structure? How fierce is the storm?

Noble Intentions

Looking with a sort of pity at the supine figure, a relic of Moses' day, my thoughts raced back to a well-learned chapter of American history. As a youth I almost wept over Andrew Johnson, a truly great man. Before he was many years dead, the things he advocated were proved, in the light of actual events, to be sound and right. But Tennessee school children were forgetting his name.

By birth a Southerner and by allegiance a Democrat, Johnson was an independent thinker who wanted the United States to stay all in one piece. He wanted to carry out most of the policies that Abraham Lincoln had established, but he couldn't. Maybe Lincoln could have succeeded with the 1856 postwar problem; maybe nobody could. History shows only this: A great man's reputation scaled down; all but lost.

People the Same

In my high school years I had imagined that President Johnson's misfortune was primitive, too crude for my enlightened time—but not so. In a few years it became our unhappy lot to watch Woodrow Wilson, one of the grandest characters America ever produced, racked on the same bed of torture; postwar prejudices, a divided party, a Congress he could not manage, and some personal traits wide open to ridicule.

President Johnson had amazing foresight and a will that would not be walked on. We know that now. He opposed the people's representatives and his place in history was carved for an unsympathetic crank. President Wilson had vision unclouded by prejudice, vision that overreached his century. But Wilson's contemporaries called him a dreamer and painted out a name that should have brightened the pages of history.

Might Have Been

President Wilson's 1920 postwar plans for revamping Europe (called so visionary), if they might have been backed by other men of his day and political station, could have made World War II unnecessary. More than a trillion of dollars and millions of lives might have been spared. But avaricious rulers couldn't see the vision any better in Wilson's day than in Johnson's day, or today.

Through lenses fashioned from the past, we can watch history repeating itself with alarming fidelity. Storms lower again over postwar problems. National figures with international ambitions are liable to forget their responsibility to the representatives of the people. We face another unpredictable struggle, and we may as well be ready to watch some high images fall, never to rise from the silt of oblivion.

Get In The War Bond Drive

With farmers still busily engaged in field work, Seventh War Loan sales in Marshall county are far below the $589,000 county quota with the first county-wide tabulation announced today showing pledges and sales totaling only $169,686.00.

In the tabulation announced today by O. M. Mattson, county chairman, incomplete reports were received from all of the 12 districts with the exception of the Argyle district where solicitors have not returned enough pledges to make a tabulation.

Only one district in the entire county has oversubscribed its district quota, that being the Viking district, headed by W. W. Barr and H. C. Hanson. In this district composed of the Village of Viking and Viking township, both precints have gone over the top with the solicitation still only partially completed.

The victory volunteers will go out in all sections of the county as quickly as they can after completing farm work, or can spare the time and future reports will undoubtedly show much improvement over the initial tabulation today.

In a tabulation from the state headquarters covering actual sales thru May 19, Marshall county ranked 21st place among state counties with sales reaching 21.4 per cent of the quota while in Series E bond rating the county rested in 26th place with sales reaching 22.4 per cent of quota.

In the first week of the greatest War Loan drive in all history Minnesota's individual investers bought $24,900,000 of war bonds, amounting to 17% of the state quota for individuals of $140,000,000. Minnesota's allotment for all War Bond sales is $224,000,000 compared with $215,000,000 in the Sixth War Loan drive last November.

Sunday dinner guests at the H. Engen home were: Mr. and Mrs. H. Lunke and family of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Christ Engen, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Maijala and children, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lunke and children, Mrs. Ole Lunke and Art, Mrs. Iver Larson and Irvin and Verna Peterson.

The Weather

The weather has been gradualy getting warmer the past week and it appears now that we may soon be due for a late spring and many mosquitos.

Memorial Day Next Wednesday

We cannot but halt a moment as we cross the threshold of the beautiful month of May, in silent honor of those who gave their all that we might prosper. "Their" day comes in May. A single day out of a year in length yet more hearts, and minds, and love will surrender on Decoration Day than on any other day of the year.

The torn hearts of the mothers who lost their sons and daughters on the battlefronts of the world, will rest easier as the Almighty casts his reflection over the world on Decoration Day. The graves of those boys and girls will again feel the tears of the loved ones left behind.

No honor is too great for those who laid down their lives in the wars of our nation since its birth. No flowers are beautiful enough to grace the graves of our "Soldiers".

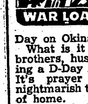
It is our prayer, and the prayer of countless others in all parts of the world, that Decoration Day, this year will serve to tender the resting places of our great, and ease many heavy hearts.

John Hoffman Died Sunday

John Hoffman, pioneer farmer of Excel Township passed away at his farm home here on Sunday morning after a lingering illness. He was 84 years old. Funeral services were conducted from the Catholic Church at Thief River Falls on Wednesday morning.

To the People of this Community

You have a D-Day this week. You won't die, lose limbs, sight or mental faculties in battle. Your assignment is to buy extra War Bonds.



There have been many D-Days in this war. D-Day on the Normandy beaches, D-Day on Tarawa, D-Day on Guadalcanal, D-Day on Iwo Jima, D-Day on Okinawa.

What is it like for your sons brothers, husbands, friends facing a D-Day in the battle zones? It's prayer and nervousness, nightmarish tension and thoughts of home.

What's it like for you facing another home front D-Day? You are the only person who can answer this question. No matter what the final story is in this community, you will not have met your responsibility unless you have bought more bonds than ever before in a war loan.

The opening of the mighty 7th War Loan is an opportunity to rededicate yourself to the task of nailing down the victory.

Life of Mrs. Nettie Petersen

Funeral services were conducted from the Nazareth Lutheran Church here on Monday afternoon, May 21st for Mrs. Nettie Peterson, pioneer of Holt. Rev. E. O. Urness officiated.

Mrs. Nettie Peterson was born in Izevold, Norway, on April 23, 1868. There she was baptised and confirmed in the Lutheran faith by Rev. Frease. At the age of 17, she imigrated to America and came to Goodhue County, Minnesota. She was employed there for several years. On February 8, 1889, she was united in marriage to Gust Peterson. With her husband, they moved to Montana and lived there for nine years. Returning to Minnesota, they made their home on a farm east of Holt, where they lived until their death.

Mrs. Peterson passed away suddenly Wednesday evening May 16, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ella Carlson. At the time of her death she was 77 years, 23 days old. Her husband preceded her in death, March 26, 1936.

She leaves to mourn her passing five sons and three daughters; Hjalmer, Fred, Anton, Herman, Lillie, Mrs. Alfred Larson of Holt; Carrie, Mrs. William Werner of Keego Harbor, Michigan; Mayme, Mrs. George Gaynor and Leonard Peterson of Pontiac, Michigan.

Surviving her also are 19 grand children and five great grand children; two sisters, Mrs. Ella Carlson of Holt and Mrs. Hannah Engebretson of Red Wing.

All the children were present at the funeral except Leonard who was unable to attend because of the serious illness of his wife.

Organist was Mrs. Marvin Sandberg. Mrs. O. H. Nohre and Marvin Sandberg sang "Have Thine Own Way, Lord" and "Under His Wings" and Rev. Urness sang "In Heaven Above" in the Norwegian language. Mrs. Peterson was a pioneer member of the Nazareth Lutheran congregation and a faithful member of the Ladies Aid. Her cheerful disposition was an inspiration to those who must carry on the work. She will be missed by the ladies at these meetings.

Pall bearers were her four sons Hjalmer, Fred, Anton and Herman, her son-in-law, Alfred Larson and her grandson, Melvin Larson.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mrs. William Werner and Mrs. George Gaynor of Pontiac, Michigan; Mrs. Lewis Langness of Minneapolis; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Surmo, Mrs. Nellie Lardy of St. Hilaire, Mrs. Rudolph Nyhus, Mrs. John Magnuson, Mr. and Mrs. Albin Knauff, Mr. and Mrs. J. June 1 Closing Date For Filing AAA Farm Plans

The closing date for filing 1945 Farm Plan Sheets with the County AAA Office is June 1, local Triple-A Chairman Chas. N. Kranz, reminded farmers this week. He emphasized the importance of filing the farm plans on or before the final date since payment for carrying out AAA conservation practices in 1945 will not be made unless the farm plan has been accepted in the county office. Farm plans must also be signed and a flax goal established to qualify a farm for the special $5.00 per acre flax payments.

Farm plans are also a means of recording 1945 food production intentions of farmers in Marshall County. Mr. Kranz said. Since farmers also report their 1944 production, AAA can estimate the percent increase or decrease of the food supply. With similar information gathered from every county in the nation the War Food Administration has a complete picture of the farm production situation and, if necessary, can act quickly to encourage or discourage production of any farm products in line with war and civilian requirements, Historical crop data are extremely important in maintenance of individual farm records for purposes of future production programs and crop insurance programs that may develop.

The following ladies called on Mrs. T. B. Folden Saturday afternoon to help her celebrate her birthday: Mrs. John Ness, Mrs. J. Rodahl and girls, Mrs. C. Ness, Mrs. O. Christenson, Mrs. Victor Johnson, Amanda Fosholm, Mrs. Edwin Hanson and Donna.

Obituary of Mrs. Lena Ring

Funeral services were conducted from the Nazareth church on Saturday, May 5, for Mrs. Lena Ring, Rev. E. O. Urness officiated and Carlson Funeral Service had charge of arrangements. Interment was made in the Holt cemetery.

Mrs. Lena Ring was born at Ringsaker, Norway, December 6, 1866 her parents being Amand and Pennel Amundson. In 1891 she was united in marriage to Christian Ring and together they came to America in 1901 and lived near Holt until 1907 when they moved to a homestead in East Valley township. Mr. Ring died in 1933. The following year she went to Mahnomen to live with her daughter, Mrs. Oscar Hanson, who died in 1939. She returned to live with her son Lars and family, the last few years occupying her own little house on the same premises as her son. She met death accidently by being run over by cars while walking on the highway within the village limits of Holt Sunday evening April 29th 1945. Truman Warns Japs to Quit as U.S. Shifts Weight to Pacific; More Civilian Goods to Come

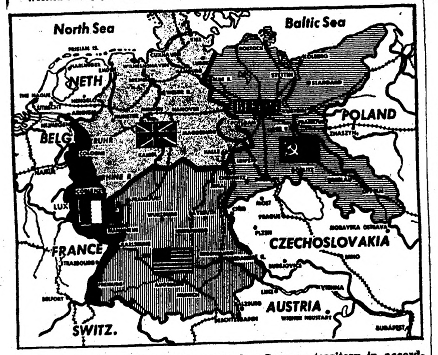
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Flags identify Allied forces occupying German territory in accordance with postwar plans. In addition to Russia taking over the east, the British the northwest, and the Americans the south, the French reportedly are to occupy the Rhineland.

ONE FRONT:

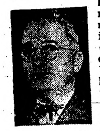
Speedy Shift

Despite persistent reports of Jap peace feelers, America is going full speed ahead for an all-out war in the Pacific following Germany's unconditional surrender, bringing the European conflict to an end after almost six years of the bitterest fighting in history.

No sooner had Col. Gen. Gustav Jodl officially thrown in the sponge for Germany on orders of Fuehrer Karl Doenitz than the American high command geared itself for a shift to the Pacific, with plans calling for retention of an army of 6,968,000 and navy of 3,389,000; the transfer of many air wings to the east to supplement Super-Fort raids on Japan, and the shipment of almost 3,000,000 troops from Europe within a year.

At the same time, however, provision was made for keeping 400,000 American troops in Germany to occupy the southwestern part of the country while the French take over the Rhineland, the British the northwest and the Russians the east.

Way Out



Pres. Truman

Reading the handwriting on the wall even while Germany was still hanging on the ropes, Jap businessmen, seeing their industries being reduced to rubble even before the U. S. could throw her full weight into the fray, reportedly made indirect approaches for peace.

If such is Japan's intent despite the recent announcement of her government officials about a fight to the finish, Pres. Harry S. Truman was seen as offering the Japanese an opportunity to give up and still save face by his detailed definition of "unconditional surrender" in a V-E day statement. Then, the President said:

"It (unconditional surrender) means the end of the war.

"It means the termination of the influence of the military leaders who have brought Japan to the present brink of disaster.

"It means provision for the return of soldiers and sailors to their families, their farms, their jobs.

"It means not prolonging the present agony and suffering of the Japanese in the vain hope of victory."

In shifting U. S. strength to the Pacific, the services plan to ship some construction, supply and maintenance forces directly from the European theater, while moving the bulk over through this country.

Map Movements

Including some 1,000,000 troops with extended combat records, who are to be released along with the wounded and overaged, the army will bring 845,000 men home in the first quarter after V-E day; 1,185,000 in the second, and 807,000 in the third. Those who will be retained for the Pacific war will be given a 30-day furlough, then reassigned for duty.

Need for staggering the return of troops from Europe stems from the gigantic task of transferring equipment for the Pacific war. According to estimates, from 60 to 75 per cent of materiel in Europe will be fit for shipment to the Pacific theater.

More Goods

Fred Vinson

Though war production will continue to dominate U. S. industry until the Japs quit, civilian output should increase in proportion to the volume of material and manpower freed from army cutbacks. About 1,500,000 workers probably will be released by contract cancellations within the next six months, War Mobilization Director Fred Vinson estimated, with another 3,000,000 let out after that, but all should find ready employment in reconversion, expansion and basic industries.

Washing machines, vacuum cleaners, radios and furniture should be available in limited quantities within a year, Vinson said, and some automobiles should also come off the assembly lines, though not enough will be manufactured to meet demands until 1948. With textiles and leather continuing to remain scarce until the Pacific war ends, the government will push up production of low-cost clothing and non-rationed footwear.

With the nation's food stocks below requirements, rationing will be maintained, with meat, sugar and butter in the tighest supply. With civilian gas allotments up 100,000 to 200,000 barrels daily, "A" and commercial card holders may be allowed smalll ration increases. Though more tires may become available, an acute shortage will persist.

How Discharge Plan Works

Over 100,000 men a month are to be discharged under the army's separation system based on vet's credit of 85 points, with 1 point for every month of service since September, 1940; 1 point for every month of overseas outside the U. S.; 5 points for every combat award such as the distinguished service cross, the purple heart or battle participation stars; and 12 points for every dependent child under 18 up to a limit of three.

Allied Terms

Having vanquished Germany, the Allies showed no disposition to soften up in the imposition of terms, with extended military occupation aimed at a close supervision of industry, finance and government to prevent a rebirth of militarism.

According to occupation plans, the British have taken over the most highly developed industrial territory of Germany along with the important North sea ports; the Russians the heavy wheat and grain growing districts and "Little Ruhr" of Silesia; and the U. S. the agricultural area of the southwest.

Long sought by the French for its military as well as industrial importance, the Rhineland reportedly was assigned to them. Prize plum of this territory is the Saar coal land, which provided the French with one-third of their prewar solid fuel.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

United States stocks of corn, oats and barley on farms, at terminal markets, and government-owned on April 1 totaled 47,700,000 tons, about 19 per cent more than a year earlier and almost as large as the average for the five preceding years, when stocks were comparatively large. The carryover of corn next October 1 may amount to 450,000,000 to 500,000,000 bushels.

A sufficient number of new workers joined the labor force during the last year to permit an increase of 1,100,000 in the armed forces and an increase of 300,000 in the civilian supply of workers. As a result of this increase in the supply, the number of civilian workers employed rose to 50,800,000 in March from 50,500,000 last year.

Old Pitfalls Stand in Way of Future Peace

Survival of German Myth, Desertion of Democratic Elements Would Weaken Postwar Security Structure.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

SAN FRANCISCO. — California sunshine is pouring down on the bay, a great white fog has begun to drape the distant, gray-green hills in the folds of its floating robe.

It has been a day of conferences and interviews where the great tragedies of little countries—Albania, Korea, Poland—and the little differences between great countries have been tossed at us, in vibrant earnest voices, in stiff and proper accents. It would be easy to lose sight of woods for the trees. But as I sit here leafing over faded notes of another such conference, I know that the tremendous goal for which these delegates have striven is so much higher, so much wider than all the little controversies that it still is just what the chambermaid in my hotel said it was.

She was gray haired. She had a son on Saipan, she told me, and when I asked her what she thought of this gathering she laid down an armful of linen and looked up. "I guess this is just about the most important thing that ever happened," she said, "trying to stop wars."

How important this meeting will prove to be depends on how well the world avoids the pitfalls which wrecked its last attempt to treat war as we treat disease; not as something that we irreverently consider as an act of God, like a tornado, but something to which mankind is exposed through ignorance and indifference and which can be prevented.

Why did the League of Nations fail? What are the pitfalls which the United Nations must avoid?

Germans Thought Armies Unbeaten

I have been talking over that Paris conference with a friend whom I met there—a quarter of a century ago. He lived with the League of Nations through its early uncertain days, on until its death of malnutrition. Together we agreed on certain fundamental mistakes made in the past which must be avoided if the result of the San Francisco conference is a success.

The object of the United Nations is the same as the object of the League of Nations: to stop aggression before it starts. Last time, efforts were directed specifically toward Germany as the one potential aggressor. Germany has been so utterly defeated that she cannot strike back for a long time but our conduct toward Germany after the last war can be related to all future attempts at aggression.

The first mistake made last time, namely, allowing the myth to grow up that the German army was not defeated, that other causes enforced capitulation, cannot be made again since the German army is now destroyed. But there is danger that another myth may grow which will encourage nazi-fascism elsewhere.

Even if the so-called German government headed by Admiral Doenitz formally capitulated to the Allies instead of having the various generals surrender separately, the Nazis might well claim that they themselves never did surrender.

A very good legal case might be made out supporting the thesis that Doenitz was not the authorized head of the German government and that government still existed in exile. Whether Hitler and Himmler are dead makes no difference. No proof can be adduced that Doenitz is the authorized successor to Hitler. There has been no recognized revolution which could be recognized first, de facto, then de jure.

We do not know that Hitler authorized Doenitz as his successor.

We do know that he had publicly indicated certain successors.

I saw and heard him do it in the Reichstag meeting in the Kroll opera house in Berlin on September 1, 1939, when he announced that he was going to the front to join the army already invading Poland.

I saw him turn from the lectern and indicate, first Herman Goering, sitting high on the praesidium as his successor, if he failed to return and second, the tall and lanky Hess sitting in the first row on the rostrum.

There has never been any other official designation of succession by the German government. When Hitler made that pronouncement Doenitz played no role in the Nazi party—he was just another naval officer.

Therefore it would be easy for whoever claims official fuehrership to have moved into Norway while it was still in German hands, take a long-distance submarine and find asylum and support in some country which would conceal his identity and where sufficient sympathy for nazi-fascism existed, to carry on underground activities and foster the myth of the immortality of nazi-dom just as the myth of the German army's invincibility was kept alive.

That is one thing that apparently is not realized. It is important. It must be watched.

Now there are a number of other pitfalls which I might mention but I won't spend too long over these faded notes with fresh breezes from the Pacific reminding me that we are living in the land of tomorrow and not yesterday.

But alas, some of the dark shadows of yesterday have stretched down the years to today.

Selfish Interests Stunt Democracy

One of the great mistakes which the peace-loving nations of the world, as they now call themselves, made the last time was that they failed to help the democratic elements in Germany against the very reactionary or national elements which made World War II possible.

At present there is no question about elements in the German government for it is under Allied military rule. That problem is some distance in the future. But here at San Francisco and wherever the executive council or the assembly of the organization planned here may meet, the same question will arise.

We have a concrete example in the question of Argentina, not too important in itself, but interesting insofar as it reveals whose selfish political and economic interests affect world affairs.

Certain countries wanted to renew normal business relations with Argentina.

Great Britain has a great interest in Argentina because of her trade and Canada because the financing of many institutions there was handled through Canadian banks.

The representatives in the Mexico City conference yielded to this pressure and when they came to San Francisco could not reverse their position. Russia looked on, chortled, and said: Democracies aren't so democratic after all if they invite a fascist government to join up with them.

This is not too important but it is an example of what must be avoided if the United Nations really champion the cause of democracy throughout the world.

But the strong hope of avoiding the pitfalls of the last time lies in the interest, the participation of the people. The people of America.

As I sit here in San Francisco and see the earnest effort of these men of all creed and color, I feel they have the will to peace.

But their voices all cry in the wilderness unless the people support them.

I look over these gray-green hills and think—into thine hands, the hands of the people of America.

In order to provide agricultural information to servicemen and veterans of this war who are interested in agriculture, the USDA has arranged to place kits containing samples of available information in separation centers, hospitals, libraries and vocational guidance and retraining centers of the army, navy, air forces, and the Veterans administration.

In cooperation with Washington representatives of the various branches of the armed forces and the Veterans administration, these kits will be available for review in approximately 1,000 places in the continental U. S. and overseas. Accompanying each kit will be a supply of order blanks on which the veteran or serviceman can order from the department by a simple check mark, any item or group of items he may want.

Among the materials being offered are several general publications designed to help the agriculturally inclined serviceman or veteran decide whether or not he really does want to become a farmer.

BARBS . . . by Baukhage

One of the hardest things to get in the sun-kissed state was a glass of orange juice. They told us it was all being dehydrated and sent abroad.

Returning to San Francisco after 20 years the city looks as if it had changed more than in the previous 20 — and that included the period of reconstruction after the fire.

Accredited correspondents outnumbered delegates six to one but most of the delegates never saw a news man. And most of them couldn't have talked anyhow since the majority of them couldn't speak English. English and French were the official languages but probably Spanish was the most generally understood, judging from response to speeches in that tongue.

It Seems That Someone Was Left at the Post

Three fellows arrived at a railway station to find they were half an hour too early for the train. So they went out for a drink. When they returned they found the train had left. Cheerfully they went out for another drink. They returned much later to find a train in the station, and two of the men just managed to throw themselves on before it started. Whereat the remaining chap started to laugh.

He laughed so much that a porter inquired as to what he was laughing at.

Still laughing heartily, he explained: "Those two friends of mine who got on the train had really come to see me off."

Paris for Treaties

During the last three centuries, 11 of the 38 important peace treaties negotiated throughout the world have been signed in or near Paris. Among them were the treaties that terminated the American War of Independence in 1783 and the Spanish-American war in 1898.

Scene: A military hospital. Visitor had been talking to a badly wounded Irish soldier. Afterwards he asked an orderly: "When are they sending that man home?"

"He ain't going home," said the orderly. "He's going back to the front."

"But he can't. He'll never be fit. Anybody can see he's far too badly hurt."

"Maybe. But he thinks he knows who done it."

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

It is difficult to detect the ordinary "slow leak" in time to prevent destructive "roadside flats." The Office of Defense Transportation recommends an effective cure for stealthy leaks: (1) Make sure valve caps have been screwed on finger tight. (2) Before adding air be sure to test pressure in each tire. (3) Check variations in tire pressure—a marked difference in pressure indicates a slow leak, which should be repaired immediately.

To help relieve the critical need for military tires, men who work in a large rubber plant in Los Angeles (B. F. Goodrich) have sworn not to miss a day's work, and, like submarine crews, not to shave for 120 days.

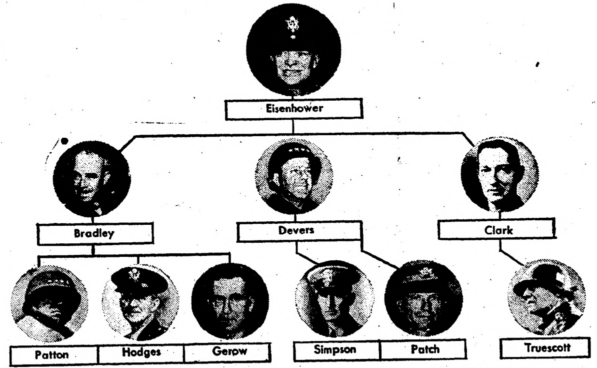
Nation's Hats Off to Hard Task Well Done



The organization of the American forces in Europe which brought about the complete collapse and unconditional surrender of the once-unbeatable German forces which set out to rule the world. To Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, his army group commanders, Bradley, Devers and Clark, we render thanks. To General Patton, General Hodges and General Gerow, under Bradley; General Simpson and General Patch under Devers and to General Truescott, under Clark in Italy, the credit of directing the world's finest army is due. A job well done, by the finest staff ever assembled in the history of any war.

Germany's Nazi Down—Japan Soon to Follow

Pacific G.I.s Tame and Use Pets

Dogs, goats or monkeys, regardless of nationality, the American expeditionary forces in the Pacific have tamed, adopted as pets and put to use to hunt out the Japs, locate poison gas, gun emplacements, or furnish milk to sick buddies. Thousands of rare and unusual pets will be brought into the United States when Tokyo falls.

War-Born Lessons Dropped From Air

The accelerated educational schedule developed in the wartime emergency, which put the student through a normal four-year college course in from 28 to 36 months, will be discontinued as soon as possible by most colleges, but the government will see that substitute courses are furnished to G.I.s by airmail wherever desired. Returned soldiers may still secure training desired.

Standard Gauge Tracks

Although American railroads operated on 23 different gauges, or track widths, as late as 1871, they had all adopted the world's standard gauge by 1886, thus making the United States the first country in which a carload of freight could reach any point without having to be unloaded and reloaded en route.

A small dish mop sprinkled with furniture polish does a good job of cleaning stairway railings.

A housemaid's basket in which to keep all necessary cloths, small brushes and cleaning agents needed to do the morning's work saves steps.

Before driving nails in the wall for picture hooks, first see where the nails for baseboards were driven. These are always placed in the studding which gives support the plaster does not.

Rail Quiz

How does the railway employee safety record in the United States during this war compare with that in the last war?

Employee fatalities in 1943 were 1,072 compared with 3,419 in 1918, while traffic doubled in 1943 over 1918. The National Safety Council in 1944 awarded the nation's railways a certificate commending them for "outstanding contribution to the war effort," saying they "have met all their obligations to the public and have established a notable record for safety in the face of conditions of unprecedented difficulty."

Fixed Laws

Economic laws are laws of nature, rigid. They are divine laws in the same sense that the law of gravity is a law of God. Such laws were in force long before the first man-made statute was ever written, and no natural law was ever repealed by act of parliament. Natural laws can be broken but they all carry within themselves suitable penalties for violation; hard to escape.

Under natural law, every producer earns a profit when he serves the public well; takes a loss when he serves the public poorly. When manipulators, government planners or any other kind, use artificial price controls, they violate natural law. It makes no difference whether the aim is greed or to protect "lame ducks" from loss. Price controls encourage incompetence.

Wheat Price Parity

Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, recently told an audience of wheat growers in St. Paul that U. S. production last year was 1100 million bushels compared to 800 million in a typical prewar year. This is deemed to forecast a post-war over-production of 160 million bushels or more a year. There is a law compelling government to hold up wheat prices for two years after the war.

Taxpayers may as well brace themselves. It is time to start wondering what it's going to cost per bushel to prop up the wheat price and hold it at parity; or what bonus per acre must be paid to non-growers of wheat for not growing wheat. Another wonder: Can the price support be removed after two years or must the taxpayers continue guaranteeing a wheat price indefinitely?

Observe Natural Law

There is an honorable way: Leave each industry's problem for men of that industry to solve. Using wheat as an example, permit the Department of Agriculture to prepare such data as Mr. Wickard gave the farmers and make the figures available to the whole industry. Let the farmers use their own judgment in the light of the facts. They will do a better job than government men, and it will not cost the taxpayers anything.

One advantage is obvious: Men of an industry can consider an industrial problem unblinded by a dust storm of political considerations. Government's proper function is to serve the citizens. Government can get statistics more conveniently than an organization of business men, and government experts undoubtedly can offer valuable interpretations, but interference is not help.

Men Can Think

Business men can understand government figures, interpret them and apply what they have learned. Figures from the Department of Commerce and the Census Bureau have benefited many industries in the past, interpreted by statisticians in the employ of trade associations. If wheat is over-produced one year, bread will be cheap. The next year, wheat men can plan more cautiously.

What did the cotton subsidy do but open the gate for rayon to storm the cotton planter's market? A fictitious wheat price can only bring that industry some similar calamity. It is bad enough to have loyal citizens taxed without mercy to build a false price structure; worse when you know that the result will be to lift a big essential industry off its economic foundation and permanently cripple it.

THE 7TH WAR LOAN IS ON!

Yes, the Seventh War Loan is on right now!

There are new planes to be built . . . new tanks . . . new ships. All to bring the war to an earlier close.

Our fighting men will do their job. But we must do ours!

And right now, the most important job we have is to meet our personal quotas in the Seventh War Loan drive!

Those quotas are big. Uncle Sam needs $7,000,000,000 from individuals. For this loan is really 2 in 1—there had been 2 drives in 1944, by this time. So now—we've got to do a two-loan job in one.

But Americans have never failed to meet a War Bond quota yet—and we won't fail now! So find out what your quota is—and meet it!

Get In The War Bond Drive

Marshall county's Seventh War Loan drive took a sudden turn for the better during the past week with district chairmen reporting pledges and sales totaling $412,720.25 or $176,279.75 less than the $585,000 county quota, O. M. Mattson, county chairman, announced.

"While we still have a long ways to go in reaching the big quota for the Mighty Seventh, continued hard work by the 400 or more Victory Volunteers in the county will again assure Marshall county going over the top," said members of the county committee.

Farmers throughout the county are still very busy with spring work, and in many districts very little solicitation has been done, a study of the tabulation reveals. However, district chairman are determined to reach their quotas during the next two weeks and will make every effort to accomplish this results.

Oslo, Viking and Newfolden have gone over the top. In the Holt district, Geo. Fricker, chairman, East Valley tonwship has pledges of $5,231.25 against a $4,000 quota, while the Village of Holt, townships of Agdar, Holt and New Solum are lagging far behind on their quotas. Excel township has reached over two-thirds of a $14,000 quota.

Sales in the county, however, are not keeping up with the pledges made, judging by reports from state headquarters. On Saturday, Marshall county ranked in 23rd place in total sales with 31.2 per cent of the quota retched while in the Sereis E bond tabulation, Marshall county dropped down to 29th place with sales only 29.3 per cent of the $535,000 Series E quota.

Mrs. E. O. Erickson and Isabel of Oklee, Mrs. Thilda Tufton and Melvin of Moorhead. Mr. and Mrs. L. Monson, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Garthus and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Len Inman and sons were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Erickson Sunday of last week, the occasion being Gilbert and John Erickson's and Joe Garthus's birthday.

Saima Neimela visited at her home near Middle River on Sunday. Her brother Wayne, who has been wounded in action twice and is now in a hospital in Kansas, was also home on a furlough.

To the People of this Community

The 7th War Loan objective is four billion dollars in Series E Bonds. At this time last year Americans had oversubscribed two war loan quotas, each three billion dollars in Series E War Bonds. It is obvious your personal share must be greatest of any of the war loans. And yet it may be no higher than or even less than the combined amount you invested in bonds in the 4th and 5th War Loans.

THE MIGHTY 7 WAR LOAN

Why should you continue to put every dollar above the cost of the necessities of living into extra bonds? 1. Uppermost you owe an obligation to your fighting men and women to back them to the limit as long as any enemy military strength remains. 2. Think about Iwo Jima for a moment—sacrifice on the battlefields is still a way of life for your relatives and friends in uniform. 3. The self-interest motive is at a new high. Civilian goods are now scarcer than ever before. Every dollar you spend for non-essentials works for higher prices.

THE EDITOR

Obituary of John Hoffman

Rev. A. I. Merth conducted funeral rites Wednesday morning, May 23 at 9 o'clock in St. Bernard's Catholic church at Thief River Falls for John Hoffman, long time resident of Excel twp., who passed away at his home here Sunday, May 20 at the age of 85. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

Mr. Hoffman was born in Germany Feb. 2, 1860, and at the age of 26 he came to the United States, making his home at Crookston for two years. In 1888 he moved to Excel twp. in Marshall county, where he has since resided.

Left to mourn are his wife, the former Many Steiner, to whom he was married at Thief River Falls, June 29, 1911; two daughters, Mary and Clara Hoffman both of Fort Lewis, Washington, a son, John C. Hoffman of Excel and a stepdaughter, Helen of Agdar twp.; and one brother, Constantine Hoffman of Excel. His parents, two sisters, and two brothers preceded hin in death.

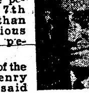
Morgenthau Cites Types of Issues Issued to Public

A grateful Nation has girded itself for the Mighty Seventh War Loan for 14 billions of dollars, half of which has been assigned as the individual sales quota. According to reports from state chairmen reaching Ted R. Gamble, national director of the War Finance Division of the Treasury in Washington, the Nation is ready for the huge task.

Mr. Gamble was enthusiastic about results. He said "We're prepared to do the best job in the 7th War Loan." Mr. Gamble said that "not only is there more money available than ever before in each state, but individual income will be higher in the period of the 7th War Loan than in any previous War Loan period."



MORGENTHAU

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau said seven billions of dollars has been assigned as the quota for individual investors and that the major emphasis throughout the drive will be placed on the quota for individuals. The individual quota is the highest established in any of the previous drives, the secretary said.

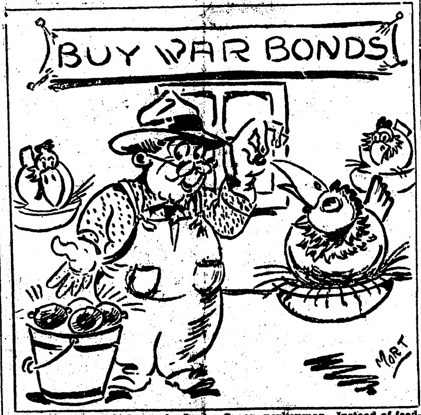
The E Bond quota alone is 4 billion. The 7th War Loan seeks nearly as much in the one drive as was asked in the first two drives of last year which were held up to this time. The two drives of this year, therefore, will seek nearly as much as was sought in the three drives of 1944.

The Secretary stated that there is every evidence that Federal expenditures are going to remain at a high level for some time to come, and that the Seventh War Loan program was designed to obtain maximum funds necessary to prosecute the War from non-bank investors.

The securities, which will be sold under the direction of the State War Finance Committees, are as follows: Series E, F and G Savings Bonds, Series C Savings Notes, 2½% Bonds, 2¼% Bonds, 1½% Bonds, ⅞% Certificates of Indebtedness. The 1½% Bonds will not be offered in the Drive to corporations.

The Drive for individuals will extend from May 14 to June 30. However, an intensification of activities in the sale of Series E bonds began April 9, when millions of persons on payroll savings plans throughout the country were asked to enlarge their participation as a part of the Seventh War Loan. All Series E, F and G Savings Bonds and Series C Savings Notes processed through the Federal Reserve Banks between April 9 and July 7 will be credited to the Drive.

During the final phase of the Drive which will cover the period from June 18 through June 30, subscriptions will be received from all other non-bank investors for the 2¼% and 2½% marketable bonds and the certificates of indebtedness.



No more cracked eggs for Lester Green, poultryman. Instead of feeding his hens oyster shells to provide lime, he feeds them plastic pills. The hens lay eggs with cellophane shells. Sez Lester, "With everythin' comin' wrapped in cellophane I got to thinkin' it would save the poultryman a lot of money if eggs came that way, too. So plastic pills was the answer. No broken eggs means money for more and bigger War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Dept.

Letter From Army Chaplain

March 23, 1945.

My dear Mrs. Ness:

One is always in poverty for words to express the deeper feeling in one's heart. Certainly no words nor language can express the sorrow and sympathy which I hold because of the death of your son, Rubin. However, as your son's Chaplain I should like, as far as words can express, to tell you what your son has meant to us as a friend and comrade.

Rubin was one of the most able, most diligent and most conscientious soldiers in the entire regiment. He was serious at all times in the performance of his duties and was deeply aware of the great fundamental principles that are at stake in this war. As such, he held the honor and respect of every officer and man with whom he served. His entire military service has been of the highest credit to his country. Rubin was one of the dearest and best friends I have ever had in the regiment.

As a man of character, I have never known a finer Christian gentleman than your son At all times he conducted himself with the dignity of a man who bears within his soul the image of Almighty God. He was faithful in his attendance at all Chapel services, and always encouraged the men about him to attend worship.

It is hard for us to understand why such a splendid young man should give his life in the flower of his manhood, but life is not measured by the length of years, but by the things which we do and accomplish in the years which God gives us. Your son's life was rich and full and I pray your heart may receive some consolation in the fact that it was devoted to the building of God's Kingdom.

No human words can bring the comfort and consolation and the strength that one's soul needs in an hour like this, but in the word of God we find our sustaining power. Through God we look beyond time and catch a glimpse of eternity.

Rubin is not dead, but has simply gone on to that other life which is the crown of all our days upon earth.

"Blessed in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

Faithfully your friend,
Stewart William Heartfelter.
Chaplain.

Mrs. Werner and Mrs Gaynor of Pontiac, and Mr. and Mrs. Tony Peterson visited at the Carl Surmo home at St. Hilaire Wednesday.

Sheep Clinic and Demonstration

Sheep raisers from all parts of Marshall County are invited by County Agent Frank Forbes to meet June 7th at the Emil Dyrud farm near Ellerth (west from Newfolden at 10 a. m. and at the Louis Farstad farm east of Newfolden at 1:30 p. m.) to check on the results of a winter management program recommeded by University Farm.

At the request of the County Agent, Mr. Dyrud and Mr. Farstad have handled their flocks thru the winter and spring on a demonstration basis to check on certain recommended practices.

Those who attend the meeting will have a chance to trade experience with these farmers and also to lay their questions before W. E. Morris who will be present from University Farm.

After discussing feeding and lambing, Mr. Morris will outline practical plans for worm and tick control problems of wool handling and marketing, and the importance of a good pasture and getting lambs on the market in as short time as possible.

A clipping demonstration will be put on by a man who is a specialist in this type of work.

Mr. and Mrs. Rick Larson of St. Hilaire visited Mrs. C. Sandberg Sunday.

Heavy B-29 Raids on Nagoya Pattern for Victory in Pacific; Set Up Army Rule Over Germany

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Burrowing into "Little Siegfried Line" on Okinawa, marines advance cautiously toward building set afire to dislodge Jap snipers.

PACIFIC:

Victory Pattern

Though the Tarawa, Iwo Jima and Okinawa fighting has proved the Jap no set-up, America's tremendous material resources and Japan's comparative skimpy means promises to bring about the enemy's collapse much in the manner of Germany's.

Flying 500 at a time, B-29 Superforts were setting the pattern for Japan's defeat even as U. S. army and marine forces rooted the enemy from his heavily fortified "Little Siegfried line" on Okinawa, with the big bombers showering thousands of tons of gasoline-jelly incendiaries on the big industrial center of Nagoya.

Extent of the destruction of Nagoya was all the greater because of the establishment of shops in small buildings and homes for the production of different parts for main assembly. With a one-time population of 1,328,083, the city was the site of the famed Mitsibushi aircraft factory and railway, machinery and metal works.

Leveling of Nagoya suggested the same treatment of other great Japanese cities within the same area in the effort to paralyze the enemy's industrial capability and thus bring his formidable land army to its knees.

With her vital industries packed in the Tokyo, Kobe-Osaka and Nagoya districts in a total area less than that of Nebraska, and with 14,000,000 of her 73,000,000 population crowded in those vicinities, Japan's whole war-making potential stands as a particularly vulnerable target for the great fleets of U. S. bombers which will operate with increasing force now that the European war has ended.

Furthermore, U. S. mastery of the sea threatens to virtually isolate the enemy from the Asiatic mainland and Pacific islands upon which he has depended for substantial quantities of food, raw material and supplies.

Against this bright picture, however, stands the record of fanatical Japanese resistance against impossible odds wherever he has fought in the Pacific. Best recent examples are Iwo Jima and Okinawa, where Nipponese garrisons have withstood the most grueling preponderance of U. S. material and troop superiority to hold out to the last dying gasp from strongly fortified subterranean positions hewed from rugged terrain.

With Jap engineers showing surprising skill in preparing such defenses, U. S. infantrymen, supported by tanks and flame throwers, have been compelled to move in close to root out the entrenched enemy after heavy air, sea and ground bombardment failed to wholly wipe out various strongpoints.

Just 325 miles from Tokyo, Okinawa has been bitterly defended by the enemy seeking to prevent another island air base from falling into the hands of U. S. forces. Victory in the Marianas furnished a site for B-29 stations for the increasing raids on the enemy mainland, and Iwo Jima also yielded strategic air strips. Thus, the Japs have stood bitterly on Okinawa, inflicting over 28,000 casualties on American land, sea and air forces at a cost of over 48,000 dead to themselves.

Secondary though potentially important aspect of the whole Pacific picture is the part China might play in the enemy's strategy, with the comparatively undeveloped state of the country and the vulnerability of any positions to attack from Russia on the north and the U. S. and Britain on the south, tempering the possibility the enemy might decide to make a major stand on the Asiatic mainland.

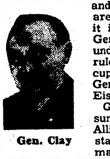
FAIR EMPLOYMENT

Laws designed to prevent discrimination in employment because of race, color, creed, or national origin have been passed in New York, New Jersey and Indiana recently.

New Jersey and Utah also enacted more general anti-discriminatory legislation, New Jersey banning racial and religious discrimination in schools, municipal hospitals, hotels and places of entertainment.

EUROPE:

Army Rules



Gen. Clay

Declaring "the Allied government of Germany is going to be military, and the Germans are going to know it is military," Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay undertook deputy rule of the U. S. occupation zone under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

General Clay assumed his task as Allied authorities stated that all German industry, trade and services first would be used to support U. S. and British occupying forces before civilians, and Germans would be allowed to hold office only on the local level.

Having announced former congressman and budget director Lewis W. Douglas as his assistant and diplomat Robert Murphy as head of the political division of the military government, General Clay said that all that is left of Germany's war industry would be destroyed, all traces of Naziism rooted out and war criminals sought and punished.

At the same time, Allied authorities declared that Grand Adm. Karl Doenitz's government was a temporary stopgap presently being used to carry on the disarmament of the German military and naval forces. Despite Doenitz's government's statements that a central German regime was necessary to prevent a breakdown in the country's economic life and the threat of communism, the Allies are proceeding along their own lines.

Meanwhile, the Allies pushed plans for the trial of war criminals even as U. S. congressmen, returning from an inspection of notorious Nazi concentration camps, flatly blamed the Hitler regime for their existence.

CIVILIAN ECONOMY:

More Goods

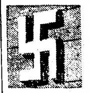
Provision of more cars and more tires for essential civilian use along with loosening of controls on the manufacture of many peacetime items heralded the gradual reconversion of industry following readjustment to a one-front war.

Though the huge needs of the Pacific war will still rate No. 1, release of manpower and material as a result of lessened demands after V-E Day will permit a limited resumption of civilian production, as already reflected in permission to automobile manufacturers to turn out 200,000 passenger cars this year, and the increase in tire rations for essential motorists by 500,000 for May.

Though another 400,000 cars are scheduled to be produced in the first quarter of 1946 with the rate rising to 2,000,000 annually by 1947, trucks will be given preference in manufacture, with emphasis on lightweight models, officials declared.

Relaxation of controls on production of coat hangers, bathtubs, ice cream freezers, pie plates, mop wringers and hundreds of others of such items paved the way for their substantial output when steel, copper and aluminum become available in increased amounts in midsummer.

PATTON'S PRIZE



Fixed to the rostrum of Luitpold arena in Nuremberg where Adolf Hitler stirred Germany in his heyday, a huge bronze swastika fell prize to General Patton's third army in its capture of the Nazi shrine city and will be shipped to the U. S. for display.

EIRE:

Praise for Britain

Although resenting Prime Minister Churchill's criticism of Eire for remaining neutral in the European conflict when her participation would have furnished the Allies with important sea bases, Prime Minister de Valera complimented the British chieftain for not violating the small country's neutrality by force to obtain such advantages.

Declaring that Churchill's restraint "advanced the cause of international morality," De Valera said: "It is indeed fortunate that Britain's necessity did not reach the point when Mr. Churchill would have acted. All credit to him that he successfully resisted the temptation."

But if De Valera had praise for Churchill, he had censure, too. Answering Churchill's declaration that only North Ireland's furnishing of bases prevented British action against Eire itself, De Valera regretted that the Briton had turned to "abusing a people who have done him no wrong, trying to find in a crisis like the present excuse for continuing the injustice of the separation (of the north and south) of our country."

SAVINGS:

Over 122 Billion

Standing at over 122 billion dollars, accumulated savings at the end of 1944 showed almost a 150 per cent increase over the yearly totals before 1938 and indicated financial strength to tide many people over any reconversion stress.

Headed up by an increase of 13 billion dollars in 1944, war bond holdings reached well over 40 billion to represent one-third of the accumulated savings, contrasting with but one-twentieth in 1940.

In rising 23 billion dollars in 1944, substantial accumulations were effected in policy holders' funds behind life insurance, and in accounts in mutual savings and commercial banks, postal savings and savings and loan associations.

Insurance Payments

Approximating 47 per cent of total payments of life insurance companies in 1944, death benefits amounted to $1,360,972,674 for a new high, the National Underwriter reported.

With total payments reaching $2,916,720,689, high were also recorded for matured endowments at $447,828,401 and annuities at $198,308,377.

Low since 1929, accidental death benefit claims for the U. S. and Canada in 1944 declined to $20,356,949.

Rips Hospital Ship

Standing three decks below point where a Jap suicide pilot crash-dived on navy hospital ship "Comfort," Army Nurse Lt. Mary Jensen of San Diego, Calif., views twisted wreckage. Lt. Jensen had stepped from surgery supply room less than minute before it was demolished by explosion.

FARM MACHINERY:

Behind Schedule

With production of farm machinery approximately 22 per cent behind schedule, farm operators can continue to look forward to tight supplies this year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago reported.

Because of increased demand for military material last winter and manpower shortages, farm machinery output for 1944-45 dropped 25 per cent behind schedule in the first quarter of July-August-September; 22 per cent behind in the second, and about 20 per cent in the third.

Labor shortages principally have affected production of such necessary parts of equipment as malleable and gray castings, engines, transmissions and forgings, thus reducing over-all output. While some important manufacturers are up to schedule, others are far behind.

Citing the great importance of farm machinery to record-breaking war food production, the reserve bank pointed out that use of mechanized equipment on two and three shifts daily permitted heavy plantings during the last two springs after wet weather delayed normal operations.

RISING INCOME

Prices received by farmers in the United States for agricultural products rose in April to the highest average for the war period, with the price index based on the 1909-1914 standard of 100, at 203 as compared with the prewar figure of 89 in August, 1939.

The price index in April this year was close to the level reached at the end of the last war while the percentage increase since the present war started was much greater than during the last war.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The American vocabulary has been enriched by a new word which has burdened the notebooks of war department stenographers in Washington for a long time. When I was in San Francisco I saw its meaning graphically illustrated.

The word is "redeployment." No, I didn't make a typographical error. Reemployment we have heard about before. ReDeployment is different. And in that word, as in Hauptmann's "tear," can sparkle "all the joy and all the sorrow of the world."

This new word isn't in any dictionary. And in all the echoing acres of the Pentagon I could find no official definition of it but in its current application it simply means shifting a lot of American boys out of the European theater of war where the curtain has gone down. That process is causing many a headache in the Pentagon. It will cause many a heartache at home and abroad. It will cause some happiness, too.

For the boys and the families of the soldiers and sailors who are cast for the second act in the tragedy of World War II (and that is most of them) redeployment means heartaches. For the others it means happiness. But whether they go back to Main street and take up the plowshare or the pen, the hammer or the school book, or whether they go on to fresh battlefields, it is a headache as well as a heartache for the high command.

Heartache, Headache For Officers

Before writing this article I had a long conversation with one of the highest of the high command and I can tell you redeployment is both headache and heartache for him. He and all his officer comrades who have sons and grandsons of their own fighting at the front want them back as much as any rear rank private's mother, dad, sweetheart or wife, wants him.

But few outside those more or less intimately concerned realize the mechanical implications of managing this major migration of history in the moving of more than three million men.

Have you any idea how long the mere physical process of simply loading soldiers, one after another, on ships and sending them back to America would take?

I do not have official figures although they should be released shortly, but I have an estimate on good authority, of the time which would be required to transfer three million men now in Europe across the Atlantic to east coast ports. Assuming that the transport facilities available were devoted exclusively to this mission, perhaps three hundred thousand men a month could be carried home. That would mean that 10 months would be required to transfer them all. And, of course, that is a fantastic supposition, since ships as well as men, are needed in the Pacific and so are ships to carry the endless supplies which the army of the Pacific will require to carry on all-out warfare.

Redeployment, materially and morally, is a tremendous task and, as a result of personal conversations with the top men upon whom its twin burdens rest, I can assure you that the question of morale is, if anything, the greater of the two in their consideration.

There is no question that the suffering and the repercussions of the lengthy separation of young men from their normal life will become greater, now that V-E Day has come and gone. The army high command knows this and that is why so much time has been spent on taking every possible step to minimize the suffering which this slash that cuts across the heartstrings of America's social life, will cause.

I happen to know that busy with the terrific burden of bringing Europe's war to a successful termination and beginning the final portion of chapter two, General Marshall himself for many long months has spent hour after hour of his crowded days and interrupted nights working on this problem.

Everybody Must Play the Game

There are some phases of this shift of our main war effort from one side of the world to the other which many do not realize but for which they must be prepared. In the first place, it will be no easy task for those who have fought the good fight in Europe to be transferred to the Pacific without a chance of furlough in between. Some will have that privilege but not all. And even for the lucky ones the second parting will be hard unless the families play the game.

There is another group who will see America's shore but will not be allowed even to touch American soil. They are the ones who will pass through the Panama canal on a nonstop trip to points in the East. That will be a tough experience—to see Old Glory waving from flagstaffs in the Canal Zone and to watch its colors fade in the distance. It simply cannot be helped.

But perhaps, temporarily at least, the hardest test of patience and self-discipline will fall upon those who know that they are to be discharged, but who, because war takes the priority and the fighters must go first, can only sit and wait in Europe.

Aside from the personal anguish which this delay will mean, it is bound to raise a clamor from motives natural enough but nonetheless selfish, of those whose economic situation is suffering from the necessary delay in reinforcing our civilian manpower with the soldiers whose services are no longer needed but who cannot be moved back home immediately.

Before General Gregory, in charge of the great housekeeping department of the army, the quartermaster corps, left for France in anticipation of V-E Day, I had a long talk with this gray-haired, fatherly man who is loved by his comrades with a warmth of affection that outglows the well-earned stars on his shoulder-straps.

When I talked to him about redeployment, although he is responsible for the physical rather than the moral welfare of the soldier, it was of the latter of which he spoke first.

How are the folks at home going to take it? That was the question on his tongue, just as it had been in the minds of the high officers and officials with whom I had talked before.

I learned a lot from General Gregory and his aides about the tremendous industrial effort which it takes to produce what the army wears and eats and with which it is shaved and laved and sheltered. As long as there is a man in uniform he must be fed and clothed and furnished supplies from helmets and raincoats to socks and shorts to say nothing of a thousand odds and ends including writing paper, soap (they have a kind that will serve to wash clothes as well as bodies, and shave with too, and lather in salt water), tobacco, bug-powder, cigarettes, bandages, shoelaces, razor blades, matches . . . ad infinitum.

Thousands of men clad in woolens required by European weather will have to be supplied with cotton for the tropics. Thousands moving from the tropics toward the more northerly latitudes of the Japanese islands and China must have woolens to replace their cottons.

Meanwhile, they will have to continue to wear and to wear out what they now have on.

Another factor is the length of the Pacific "pipe-lines"—the great distances from base to front. The "turn-around" time of the voyage of ships is longer than the voyage to Europe and there must be enough supplies at hand for the troops to cover the period between each delivery.

All this will require continued manufacture by private industry for military use for a long time which means that much longer to wait for final conversion to civilian production.

This is why this new word "redeployment" is not a happy one and why it holds within it so many headaches and so many heartaches which will try the coolest heads and strain the stoutest hearts.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

The Flemish word for auto tire is "Snelpaardelooszonderspoorwegpetrolistuig."

The 1945 government expansion program for increased production of military truck and bus tires is geared to turn out 21,300 additional tires a day, or 6,000,000 a year. This expansion plus previous expansions should result in the production in 1945 of more than twice as many truck and bus tires as were produced in 1941, and in 1946 about 2½ times the 1941 figure.

A vehicle driven at 50 m.p.h. on average roads wears away 41 per cent more rubber than if it were driven at a steady 30 m.p.h.

Spy in First World War Used Bees on Masthead

In the First World war, a spy in London used a method of sending his messages to Germany that deceived the British censors for two years, says Collier's. He got a job in the pressroom of an old and respectable magazine whose masthead, a drawing of a swarm of bees around a hive, was so familiar that apparently no one had looked at it for a long time. So the spy used it to convey his code messages by rearranging the bees in a new drawing every week.

Finally, he gave himself away by adding several extra bees in India ink on the one copy he mailed to Switzerland, and they were so prominent that a censor spotted them at once.

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Gratitude

The average American's most vivid impression of the Orient was acquired in less than an hour and came to him free with a bowl of chicken chow-mein. This is no discredit to the average American. He can't help it if Asia is mysterious. It is only an accident that we know a great deal more about Europe. Our ancestors came from that way, so we heard about it.

It is high time now, however, for every soul in the United States, who loves his happy home and peaceful surroundings, to learn more of the character of our straw-colored allies beyond the Pacific. We owe our national safety to them. If it were not for their native integrity we would be held in a nut-cracker between Germany and Japan at this hour, if we were yet able to fight at all.

We Admire Britain

Americans are a tender-hearted folk. We sympathize with other peoples and half-way try to understand them, but we don't usually admire them very much. We felt sorry for the Poles when the Nazi took them in 18 days. Our hearts went out to the Norwegians because they didn't last three weeks. We wept with our British relatives over Dunkirk, but we did more. We admired the British.

Late in 1937 the city of Nanking, China, fell to the Japanese. Far away over the sea strategists thought that was about the end. If China had folded up the next day few people would have blamed her. We Americans would have turned the spigot in our sympathy tank again and drawn out a generous sprinkling of tears for dear old China, and then tried to forget it. But forgetting it would have been impossible.

Must Admire China

If China had fallen in 1937, four years before the Pearl Harbor raid, any child can guess why we Americans would still be remembering it. But China did not fall. It would not be amiss for devout people to give thanks at the table three times a day that China did not fall. If China had fallen Japan could have knifed Russia on the unguarded side right through Manchuria; surely would have done so.

Back in those early months of the present war when the Germans were all but knocking at the doors of Moscow, our big old globe, as now arranged, was coming unglued. If Japan could have drawn close enough to attack Russia from behind, the Germans would have marched into Moscow. Then, with no Russia to annoy him, Hitler would have parched London to a cinder.

Thanks to China

China stayed in and fought, so London remains. China stood the gaff, so we still have San Francisco. China could take privation and punishment; her share and ours too. As a consequence no bomb has struck an American city. Moreover, China's young men have made their fight as nearly bare-fisted as any army taking part in this war on either side, large or small.

In recent weeks there have been frequent criticisms of China; of Chinese fortitude, of China's disunity, of Chiang Kai-Shek's generalship. Let me close with this admonition: Criticism of China in America today, true or false, has one purpose and one only. It is to break up unity among our allies. Our enemies can hope to survive by no other means. Don't listen to it.

Marshall, King Pledge Victory to 'Bond Front'

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Army has overcome what in the past would have seemed to have been insurmountable obstacles and the Navy has promised full unconditional surrender, Chief of Staff General George C. Marshall and Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King said today, in commenting on the Mighty Seventh War Loan.

MARSHALL

General Marshall said:

"We in the Army have overcome what in the past would have seemed to have been insurmountable obstacles. So have you. That is where the enemy miscalculated—for to Americans, nothing has ever been impossible. Yours is a hard task—a heavy responsibility. But we of the Army have confidence that you will again achieve the impossible."

Admiral King said:

KING

"We have had two wars to wage. One of those wars is just beginning. That means that your own labors, far from over, are also just beginning. The Navy, like the Army, has one objective. The unconditional surrender of the enemy. We will attain that objective because of people of good faith. People who have demonstrated their patriotism and their willingness to undertake the most gigantic financial task ever undertaken by a free people."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Treads Middle of Road In Naming New Cabinet Heads; Japs Tighten Hold on Homeland

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Cabinet Changes —President Harry S. Truman continued to tread a middle path in politics with his recent cabinet appointments, taking a New Dealer, an extreme liberal and southern Democrat into his official family.

In naming New Deal Rep. Clinton Anderson (N. M.) and liberal ex-Senator Lewis Schwellenbach (Wash.) as secretaries of agriculture and labor, respectively, Mr. Truman literally went into congressional ranks to make his selections, again moving to re-establish friendly relations between the White House and Capitol Hill. As a member of the department of justice, Tom C. Clark, the new attorney general, has enjoyed the confidence of both liberals and conservatives alike, further strengthening Mr. Truman's hand.

Though the President accepted Mrs. Perkins' resignation as secretary of labor because of her desire to return to private life, he was said to have taken Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard's in an effort to bolster the department, and Attorney General Biddle's as a natural result of the cool relations between them. Among other things, Biddle had sought the reappointment of the district attorney who sent Mr. Truman's old political sponsor, "Boss" Pendergast, to prison.

The President followed the announcement of his new cabinet appointments with a request to congress for passage of legislation permitting the reorganization of the executive branch of the government. Under such legislation, he would be able to consolidate or eliminate various agencies as conditions would dictate for economy and efficiency.

Sketches of new cabinet members follow:

Anderson

Advocate of abundant production to stifle black markets and inflation, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, 49, recently attracted attention as chairman of house food investigating committee. Adopted son of New Mexico, Anderson built up successful insurance business and became large land owner, holding 1,000-acre cattle and dairy farm outside Albuquerque. He has served as treasurer, relief administrator and unemployment compensation director of the state.

Schwellenbach

Elected to senate on highly liberal platform in 1934, Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach, 50, retired in 1940 to become federal judge. Vet of World War I, Schwellenbach soon entered politics after conflict's end, was defeated in bid for governorship of Washington in 1932 after calling for government ownership of utilities and use of idle lands and factories for unemployed. Noted for his liberalism, Schwellenbach's appointment was warmly received by both the AFL and CIO.

Clark

Dark, quiet 6-foot Attorney General Thomas (Tom) C. Clark, 45, is representative of the Deep South and the protege of House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senator Tom Connally. Prominent in Texas legal circles, Clark entered department of justice in 1937, becoming assistant and then head of the anti-trust division. As chief of war frauds unit, Clark reportedly has recovered more than $100,000,000 for the government and brought about the indictment of 1,000 persons.

JAPAN:

Tighten Reins

Backed almost to the wall, Japan increased efforts to shore up the home front for the critical days that lie ahead. Even as the Nipponese officials acted, B-29 bombers followed up their devastating attacks on Nagoya with equally concentrated assaults on Tokyo, striking at the thousands of tiny shops producing small parts for big industries.

Steps taken to combat the U. S. avalanche included:

1. Mobilization and special training of 20,000,000 students and an agrarian militia to defend the homeland.
2. Suppression of all pacifist sentiment and punishment of persons failing to turn in Allied propaganda pamphlets.
3. Efforts to perfect the operations of the Kamikaze (suicide) air corps.
4. Granting of virtual military authority to Japanese employers to utilize the time of their labor as they see fit without regard to working hours, rest periods or other regulations.
5. Collection of nearly 5,000,000,000 bushels of surplus rice from agricultural districts now before bombings disrupt the transport system for distribution to shortage areas. Villages possessing no rice surpluses must substitute wheat, corn, German millet or dessau grass.

SECURITY CONFAB:

Clear Sailing

With the Big Five—America, Britain, Russia, France and China—having come to agreement on the vital issues of regional action and trusteeships, the heralded international security conference of the United Nations at San Francisco headed for a happy conclusion.

In agreeing to permit regional groups like the Pan-American countries to attempt to settle their own differences or repel the attack of an aggressor before calling upon the world security organization for assistance, the United Nations recognized the U. S.'s attachment to the Monroe doctrine, which the South American republics also took as their own in the Act of Chapultepec.

In the matter of trusteeships, the United Nations also bowed in deference to the U. S., consenting to unrestricted American occupation of conquered Japanese islands for military and naval bases until congress decides to revert control to the world security organization.

GERMANY:

Conquest Complete

With the arrest of Grand Adm. Karl Doenitz by Allied authorities in Flensburg, Germany lost all status as an organized state, with her territory carved into three occupational districts and all central government abolished.

Doenitz' arrest followed Allied declarations that he was being allowed to operate as an ersatz fuehrer to complete the formal surrender of German air, sea and ground forces. His mission virtually accomplished, Doenitz was taken into custody along with other members of the German general staff, said to be facing from 10 to 15 years of imprisonment.

With Germany lacking any central government, the U. S., British and Russians assumed general control in their respective occupation zones. At the present, the best the Germans could look forward to was local communal self-rule, with possibilities it might be raised to a county level.

Meanwhile, General Eisenhower ordered the release of German war prisoners whose services were needed in agriculture and Allied supporting activities in the defeated country.

* * *

Scheduled for trial as the No. 1 war criminal, Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler cheated the Allies of vengeance by swallowing potassium cyanide even as a medical officer was searching him for poison in the parlor of a residence in Lueneberg.

Once head of the dread Nazi police that kept both Germany and occupied countries under thumb, Himmler swaggered to his end, personally slipping on his glasses to identify himself when first detained, then shaking loose the poison vial attached to a gum to gulp the contents while being examined.

Even before his seizure, Himmler's wife had believed him a suicide. "He's better off dead," she said then. "They're all better off dead."

FREIGHT RATES:

Equal Break

The South's long struggle for parity in freight rates was partially won with the Interstate Commerce commission's order equalizing rail charges for manufactured and high grade goods in all sections from the Atlantic seaboard to the Rocky mountains.

As a result of the ICC's order calling for an increase in so-called class freight rates in the East and a reduction in the South and West, industrial products in the latter two regions will be able to enter markets on a more equal footing with eastern manufacturers.

At the same time, however, both the South and West were allowed to enjoy lower rates on such bulk commodities as coal, livestock, lumber, grain, cotton and sand. As previously worked out, the freight rates favored eastern industries and southern and western prime producers, establishing an economic pattern which the South recently has been fighting in order to attain more balanced economy for full utilization of her material and labor resources.

BAN DISCRIMINATION

Laws designed to prevent discrimination in employment because of race, color, creed, or national origin have been passed in New York, New Jersey, and Indiana.

New Jersey and Utah also enacted more general anti-discriminatory legislation. In addition to the law prohibiting discrimination in employment, New Jersey passed six laws banning racial and religious discrimination in public places.

Jap Burial Customs

Marines who searched Okinawa's sacred burial vaults for Jap-hidden guns and ammunition learned of the burial customs of the inhabitants of this island.

The Leathernecks saw how food, writing paper, pen and ink, writing board, clothing and candles were placed on the lid of each plain, wooden coffin for "use" of the dead.

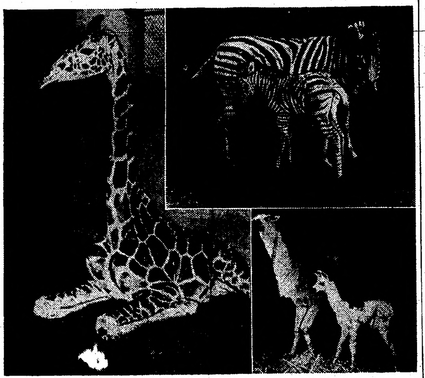
Up Front With Fighting Leathernecks on Okinawa

Leathernecks, coordinating with army troops, are shown in action in the final stages of the fierce battles that raged in every section of Okinawa island. Island spotted with graves and fallen heroes attests to the high price paid.

Carrier and Its Heroic Crew That Never Quit

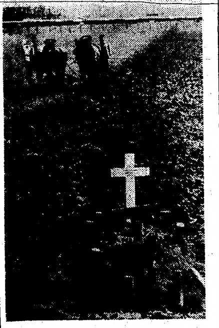
A ghastly but unforgettable memorial to the heroism of those who man the navy's ships and the skill of those who build them, was again shown when the carrier USS Franklin arrived in Brooklyn Navy yard under her own power. Hit by Jap dive bombers, afire and her own bombs exploding and one-third of her crew killed, from Jap waters to Brooklyn she returned unaided. Lower left, officers of carrier. Lower right, Chaplain Joseph O'Callahan, one of heroes during battle, and trip home. Right shows how she limped into port.

Youth Has Their Day at Zoos



Born in the early spring at Pittsburgh zoo, this giraffe (left) already has grown out of babyhood. His mother was shopping when this photo was taken. Lower right, Lady Llama at San Francisco with her son V-E, born on that great day. Upper right, there was much ado at the Bronx zoo when for the first time in over three years a baby zebra was born.

Farming War Fields



While plowing his field the French farmer leaves a tiny island in the center of the plot containing the grave of a British soldier killed in the early days of invasion of Normandy who, like thousands of others, will remain in temporary plots.

No Time for Celebrating

Fighting men of the army's 77th infantry division on Okinawa listen to the news a few yards behind the front lines. Their battle-hardened faces indicate the impassiveness with which they received the news realizing the war is not over for them and that a tough fight lies ahead as is now being proven to them.

Radio for Firemen

A combined radio receiver-transmitter for firemen is demonstrated by Atlantic City radio technician Larry Smith. The "talking helmet" is a four-tube crystal-controlled transmitter.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER
Gulf Coast oil-producing companies use a rubber-tired vehicle called a "marsh buggy." It is equipped with tires 120 inches in diameter and with 33½-inch cross-sections. The OPA set price ceilings at $1,075.15 for casings and $328.34 for tubes.
Hawaii is currently producing very small amounts of natural rubber. It is the only tree rubber being grown under the American flag except for experimental plantings in Florida.

With Food Supply Expected to Be Tighter Than Ever, Women's Land Army Faces Its Greatest Challenge

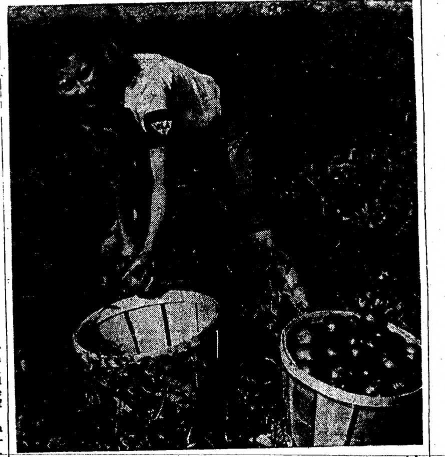
City Girls and Women Are Urgently Needed for Every Sort of Farm Job

Women have done an outstanding job in this war, and nowhere have their efforts been more important than in helping with the farm harvest.

Until complete victory is won, there must be no letup on the home front. In this critical year of the war, the high rate of food production must be continued. At the same time, the farm labor shortage will be even more serious in many areas.

The answer is for town and city people—especially women and youth—to step into the breach, as they have done for the past three years. Farm people themselves are working harder and longer hours than ever before. But they need extra helpers, especially during the harvest season. That group of women doing emergency wartime farm work comprise the Women's Land army. Their patriotic efforts have saved farm crops in thousands of cases.

The Women's Land army is a movement rather than an organization. It is mainly a seasonal army. In each state, it is under the direction of the state extension service, with headquarters at the state agricultural college. Most states have a Women's Land army supervisor who works closely with the county agricultural agents and their farm labor assistants. In most localities, the county agent administers the emergency farm labor program . . . recruiting and placing workers on farms. Last year, these local placement offices . . . 12,000 over the country . . . placed about 350,000 women in farm work, and about as many other women were recruited directly by farmers or found their own jobs. These women received prevailing farm wages for the amount and type of work done. Besides these a great many farm women worked on their own and neighboring farms.



Probably the greatest need for seasonal help is in harvesting perishable vegetables and fruits. It is particularly important that all of the tomato crop be brought to market, as this vegetable is a cheap and abundant source of vitamin C.

Her husband is fighting on some Pacific island, and she is doing her bit on the home front by working on a Connecticut dairy farm. Her duties include milking, cleaning the barn, and caring for the calves.

Who Are WLA Workers?

All women who help in the wartime production of food, feed, or fiber are a part of the Women's Land army. Women from farms, cities and towns . . . farm women who work longer hours than ever before . . . women from offices, factories and stores . . . women whose husbands are overseas . . . housewives, college girls and teachers. . . . They are women of all ages who spend all summer, all year, or only a few hours, a week end or a vacation period—helping bring through the farm crops our country must have.

North, south, east and west, women do all kinds of farm work. Singly and in groups, they pick beans, tomatoes and other vegetables. They detassel corn, shock grain, pick potatoes, pick and pack berries, apples, peaches, grapes, other fruits and nuts. They work in cotton, grain, tobacco and flax; drive tractors, farm trucks and combines; milk the cows and care for poultry flocks. In brief, as and where needed, women help plant, cultivate, and harvest the food and fiber crops and care for the livestock—all so necessary in the war effort.

Farm wives and daughters—hundreds of thousands of them—do a magnificent job, helping with haying, milking, feeding livestock. They handle just about every farm task, many of which they have never done before, putting in long hours at the double job of housework and farm work.

Typical is one midwestern farm woman who, during corn planting time, drove a tractor from 4 to 8 a. m. each day, and then did the farm chores before starting her regular housework, which she does without benefit of electricity and running water.

Town Women Prove Capable.

Even though town women were at first accepted reluctantly by many farmers, they have now proved themselves in farm work. Their help is especially valuable at harvest time, for crops like apples, peaches and other fruit; for beans, tomatoes, potatoes, peanuts and cotton. Teachers and college girls often spend two or three summer months in farm work. Business women work part of their vacation time, evenings and week ends harvesting tomatoes, beans and carrots, detasseling corn and picking apples, peaches and grapes.

Homemakers also answer the local call for peak-season harvesting. For example, in an Oregon county last year, 500 homemakers helped save the bean crop. Each day they boarded the "Housewives Special"—buses leaving for the field at 8:30 a. m. and returning at 3 p. m. This gave them time to do the family breakfast before leaving and to market for supper in the late afternoon. In Washington, as in other states, women joined groups of "twilight pickers" . . . working evenings in the big berry crop. And in a California county, women working 7 to 11 p. m. as peach cutters to help save 20,000 tons of peaches by drying were known as the "Victory Shift."

Women's underlying motive for doing farm work is, for the most part, patriotism—a deep desire to help . . . to have a part in feeding our soldiers and our allies—and an intense conviction that no food should go to waste. As a 60-year-old woman said, after picking 3 tons of beans, "I'm glad to do it . . . you see, I have a son in the air corps."

Of women who do farm work, by far the greatest number live at home and work by the day, or part-time, on farms nearby.

Spend Vacations on Farms.

Some women, especially college girls, teachers and business women, spend part of their vacation time in labor supply camps, working on surrounding farms. For one week, two weeks, or the entire summer, they cultivate and pick vegetables or harvest fruit. Many Smith college students, as a part of their college's summer plan of "work or study" formed groups which lived as one household in the farming area where they worked.

Camps for women workers are operated in many states. Last year, New York state's WLA camps included about 3,000 New York City women and girls on their vacation time. Life in camp is not all work. Women find it interesting and broadening, with the companionship of women from many different places. As one worker said, after an evening of recreation in camp, "We're all friends, and that's what we're fighting for, isn't it?"

Even more interesting than picking cherries was the "contact with different people," wrote another camp worker on returning home. Her fellow campers included an Italian teacher, a woman who had fled from Germany, college students, a librarian, a magazine writer, a governess, and a mother of 12 children.

In some cases, women live right on the farm for the summer. They do such work as taking care of the garden, planting, hoeing and harvesting onions, carrots or other vegetables, or helping do a hired man's job. Typical of such workers are a serviceman's wife who has full care of the poultry flock on a large general farm, and a woman who has charge of the milk room on a dairy farm.

Some women serve as "hired hands." They milk, take care of the poultry flock, feed livestock, and work in the field. Of the approximately 9,000 women placed for year-round work in 1944, many of them were wives of men employed on the same farm.

How to Get a Farm Job.

A woman who can work for the entire summer or for several weeks, should consult her county extension agent or local farm employment office immediately. These offices usually are located in the county courthouse or federal (post office) building. If she cannot find this local office, she may write to the Women's Land army supervisor at her state agricultural college, or to Women's Land army, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

A woman who can work for only short periods of time should stand by for the call in her community. It will come through her local newspapers and over the radio. She will then be told when and where to apply.

A student from William and Mary college spends part of her summer vacation picking, grading and packing peaches in a Virginia orchard.

Business women and housewives of Sinai, S. D., shock oats during the harvest season.

Wave Lengths Develop Value in Sale of Stations

As virtually all standard broadcasting frequencies in this country are now in use, and the only way to obtain one is to purchase a licensed station, these wave lengths have developed values far in excess of the stations themselves, says Collier's.

For example, 27 stations sold in 1944 had an average value of only $81,000 apiece in tangible assets and good will, yet they brought an average price of $252,000.

The additional sum of $171,000 was given for the possession of the wave length in which, incidentally, there is no property right.

Costly Miniature Train Serves Maharaja's Table

The Maharaja of Gwalior, India, owns one of the costliest yet most useful miniature railroad trains in existence, says Collier's. Made of silver and operated by electricity, it travels slowly around the great dining table in the royal palace during meals with its dozen trucks loaded with fruits, nuts, condiments and wines.

It automatically stops and starts every few feet so its dishes and decanters may be removed or replaced.

China's Future

Farmers in the United States made up 72% of the whole nation's population back in 1820. That was just half-way between the invention of the iron plow and the mechanical reaper for small grain crops. Only 23% of our people live on farms now. China still has the "good old days" if you like that kind. Some 80% of her people are farmers even yet.

If an American farmer's hired man earned 50¢ a day in 1820 he had to be a good one. The farmer was not to blame. In order to pay better wages he had to get better prices for what his hired man produced, or manage some way for the worker to produce more. Even then both developments had begun. The plow and the reaper improved farm income and farm wages also.

Supply and Demand

Using improved machinery one workman could do the work three had done with crude tools, so two out of three farm hands eventually quit the farm. Some of them went to work at transportation, taking farm products to cities where there were quick markets. Others got jobs in factories making desirable things to sell to the farmers who, by this time, had quite a little money to spend.

The two farm workers out of three who left the farm did not quit using farm products. Wherever they worked they bought and consumed farm produce, also made more profitable work for people in transportation. This is a simple outline of the growth of American prosperity, and it is a rough sketch of what must take place in China, starting after the war, if China is to prosper.

A Unification Plan

High-brow students of political economy talk about "social, political and economic unification of China." Those are 35-cent words, trying to say that China is all broken up and needs to be made one. Nothing that is broken can be welded again until the pieces are brought close together. China's dismembered parts need to be brought close together; close in time; close in spirit.

China already has everything needed to live well: livestock and grain, timber and fiber, coal and oil, iron and copper. China has supply and demand also—450 million people anxious to earn more and live better. One trouble is, there are 360 million farmers when 12 million with good tools would be enough. There is much other work to do: ore to mine, timber to cut, roads to build.

Hidden Treasures

Roads will bring the empire's far-flung segments near in time. Business dealings will create mutual confidence and make China's remote tribes close in spirit. There is money in the Orient—most of it hidden, but it's there. More, much more will come from other lands as soon as investors learn of the empire's rich resources and great markets. Only fear of robbery and fraud can keep it away.

These fears can be removed by a strong central government, able to maintain order and security for investment at home, and able to command the respect of other world powers. Chiang Kai-Shek has promised these things for postwar years and rebel rulers already are learning to trust him and work with him. The United States should help him, for China is America's natural ally in the East, for mutual profit in time of peace and mutual protection in time of war.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Reed and daughters of Thief River Falls, Mrs. Leo Horien and children and Mrs. Nels Ness and Eldon visited Mrs. Bertha Hagglund Sunday afternoon.

No Success Yet

No one has ever succeeded in making perfume on a commercial scale from a number of flowers, such as the lilac, orchid, narcissus or lily of the valley. These essences have always been produced synthetically in chemical laboratories.

Fungus Disease

A fungus disease which causes blight of the flowers on camellias, has been under observation by two plant pathologists in the University of California college of agriculture. No control has been found for the disease, which causes blossoms to turn brown and fall from the shrubs.

Rail Quiz

When were sleeping cars introduced in America?

The first sleeping car in the world was operated on the Cumberland Valley Railroad (now a part of the Pennsylvania), between Harrisburg and Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, in the winter of 1836-37. It was a remodeled day-coach, and the berths or bunks were very crudely built. The car was divided into four compartments, each of which was equipped with three bunks, one above the other, all built along one side of the car. At one end of the car was a wash basin. A wood or coal stove furnished the heat, and candles furnished the illumination.

THE 7TH WAR LOAN IS ON!

Yes, the Seventh War Loan is on right now!

There are new planes to be built . . . new tanks . . . new ships. All to bring the war to an earlier close.

Our fighting men will do their job. But we must do ours!

And right now, the most important job we have is to meet our personal quotas in the Seventh War Loan drive!

Those quotas are big. Uncle Sam needs $7,000,000,000 from individuals. For this loan is really 2 in 1—there had been 2 drives in 1944, by this time. So now—we've got to do a two-loan job in one.

But Americans have never failed to meet a War Bond quota yet—and we won't fail now! So find out what your quota is—and meet it!

Holt Goes Over The Top Again

Don't put off buying your Seventh War Loan Bond any longer!

With less than three weeks to go before the close of the Mighty Seventh on July 1, Marshall county still has a long ways to go before reaching its quota of $589,000, County War Finance officials announced today.

Actual sales credited to the county through June 9 reached only 64.7 per cent of the total quota, placing Marshall county in 28th place in the state, while Series E Bond sales were only 50.5 per cent of the $535,000 Series E Bond quota to place the county down to 38th place among the counties of Minnesota.

If Marshall county is to attain its normal and rightful position in carying its share of the load to carry on the war to speed victory over Japan, every resident must come forward and purchase more bonds than ever before, the committee feels. Our fighting armies have disposed of the German army, but still have a tough enemy to defeat across the Pacific. Many lives will be lost before final victory is won. Every dollar of spare money must be invested to speed the victory. Marshall county banks are bulging with money and every banker is urging his customers to invest their surplus funds in the government securities. Let's wind up the Mighty Seventh in a blaze of glory for Marshall county.

While Marshall county is far down the list in actual purchases, pledges throughout the county have now reached $558,849.00 according to a tabulation completed on Tuesday. This still leaves $31,151 to go, indicating that considerable work remains to be done before the quotas are reached.

The Warren, Alvarado and the Gatzke districts over-subscribed their quotas during the past week, joining the enviable records of the Viking and Oslo districts which went over the top early in the drive. A large number of townships and most of the villages in the county have oversubscribed quotas, and many others are nearing the goals. There are, however, still too many townships that are falling down on the job and are a long ways from reaching the quotas so necessary to reach if Marshall county is to continue to uphold its share in financing the war.

The village of Holt has gone over the top with $5,185 against a quota of $3,000.

Crowd at Creameries Picnic

A very large crowd attended the Marshall County Creameries picnic at the Middle River State Park on Sunday. Reports were there were approximately 4,500 people there. This was one of the largest picnics in many years and a good program had been arranged for the day.

Circles 5 and 6 of the Nazareth Ladies Aid had a refreshment stand on the grounds and did a very big business, clearing $255.00. A lot of credit for their success goes to Walter Larson, manager of the Farmers' Co'op Creamery of Holt, who made all the arrangements for the points for meat and sugar, and other items needed for the stand, and also hauled the stuff out there and put up the stand with the assistance of other men from Holt.

At the rate the grass is growing haying will be the next big chore for the farmers.

1899 Hauge Conference

Today, as representatives of most of the nations of the world, in conference at San Francisco, discuss plans for a security organization for the maintenance of peace among nations, it is interesting to recall the fact that from May to July, 1899, forty-six powers were in session at the Hague for the purpose of evolving a method for the pacific settlement of international disputes. The United States was one of the leaders in the peace movement.

One of the members of the American delegation to this First Hague Peace conference was Stanford Newel of St. Paul, who was American minister to the Netherlands. Newel's personal copies of the daily journals for the plenary and committee sessions, official portfolio, conference photographs, and other documents connected with the Hague conference of 1899 are owned by the Minnesota Historical society and are currently on exhibition in the society's museum.

The principal result of the First Hague conference was the adoption of a plan for the pacific settlement or international disputes through arbitration. Almost at once the United States availed itself of the new tribunal to settle two serious disputes.

The first case in 1902 involved a claim against Russia for seizure of American fishing vessels off the Kamchatka coast. The second dispute, far more critical, came in 1903 when several European powers pressed their claims for debts against Venezuela, and the United States intervened on behalf of the South American state under the Monroe Doctrine. Documents for both cases are in the Newel collection.

Lake of the Woods Bible Camp

June 25th to July Ist are the dates set for the annual session of the Luther League Bible Camp of the Crookston and Thief River Falls Circuit young people at the Lake of the Woods Bible camp on Rainy River. Rev. T. C. Hanson, Roseau, will manage the business affairs of the camp and Rev. L. M. Larson, Stephen, will be the dean of the camp. An unusually fine faculty has been arranged for the week, with the Rev. D. Theodore Huggenvik, head of the Department of Religion at St. Olaf College, as instructor in Church History, Rev. Sigval Fauske, Minneapolis, now Luther League evangelist, as instructor in Bible, and personal consultant to the campers. Rev. G. S. Thompson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church in Thief River Falls, will present a series of pratical studies on Lutheran Hymnody and church worship. Inspirational services will be held each evening, with Dr. Huggenvik as preacher.

As in former years, the Bible Camp will be under competent supervision of pastors of the two circuits and lay leaders.

While Bible study is the emphasis of such camps throughout the Lutheran Church, a healthy program of games and sports supplements the morning program. Each year the faculty and pastors have engaged in perspiring competion with the campers in the annual Faculty-Student Kittenball game.

The camp opens with the evening service on Monday, June, 25th and concludes with the morning service Sunday, July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lofgren and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cook from Pembina, N. Dak., were Sunday dinner guests at the Harold Nohre home.

There will be no 4-H meeting in June because many of the members will be attending the Lake of thh Woods Bible Camp.

Karen Carlson, who has been ill with pneumonia, is steadily improving. She is still in the hospital.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Fire Bombs Raze Jap Cities; Unemployment Expected to Rise Soon as War Production Tapers

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Battle-weary, sixth division marines recline behind protecting wall near Naha after bitter fight for city on Okinawa.

PACIFIC:
Cities Burn

One by one, Japan's great industrial centers are being razed by huge fleets of Flying Superfortresses, with the firing of Osaka and Yokohama cutting further into the enemy's potential to produce weapons needed for the expanding Pacific front.

Considered the Orient's greatest industrial center, Osaka smouldered after heavy Super-Fort strikes at its iron, steel, copper, cotton, hemp and wire plants.

Japan's second biggest port, Yokohama was left in flames by hundreds of B-29s, with strong winds helping to spread the destruction block by block. Approximately 60,000 houses were said to have been wiped out after the first assault, leaving 250,000 homeless, and communication and transportation lines disrupted.

In explaining strategy in laying down the greatest number of bombs in the shortest time over Japanese targets, 21st Bomber Commander Curtis Le May declared: "If you lay them down like that the city burns down. If you don't, they put it out."

With B-29s raising havoc with Japanese industrial centers, the enemy continued to chiefly center his aerial opposition against American naval vessels in the Ryukyus, with Kamikaze (suicide) pilots continuing to score hits on light units. Indicative of the ferocity of the Japanese attacks, the navy reported the greatest casualty toll in all the Pacific fighting off of Okinawa.

On land, U. S. forces herded the enemy onto the southern corner of Okinawa following the collapse of his Shuri line after some of the bitterest ground fighting in the war, with troops compelled to dig the Japs from deep cave positions in rugged terrain.

UNEMPLOYMENT:
To Rise

With another large "stepdown" in military orders anticipated, War Production Board Chairman J. A. Krug predicted 4,800,000 persons will no longer be needed for war production six months from now and unemployment can be expected to reach 1,300,000 by then.

During the next three months alone, Krug said, an estimated 2,900,000 war workers will be released, with unemployment jumping 1,100,000 from the present level of 800,000 to 1,900,000. Because of withdrawals from the labor force and the reemployment of 4,100,000 persons by the rapidly expanding civilian economy, however, the total of unemployed will drop about 600,000 a half year from now.

Though unemployment promises to mount in comparison with present conditions, such low-paying industries as lumber and textiles may experience difficulty obtaining workers, Krug said. Wage increases within the bounds of stabilization policy would probably help remedy such a situation, Krug indicated.

Shipyard Problem

In the face of rising layoffs in war production industries, West coast shipyards are experiencing a shortage of help at a time when the demand for repairs is increasing as a result of the damage to U. S. vessels in the quickened Pacific naval warfare.

Twenty thousand workers below their labor ceilings, three West coast shipyards lost an average of 600 employees last month. In an effort to solve the problem, selective service announced blanket deferments for such skilled help as electricians, sheet metal workers and machinists, and the War Manpower commission gave the yards No. 1 priority in hiring. Transportation and housing also were guaranteed East coast workers desiring to shift to the west.

As an example of the critical labor shortage in the West coast yards, the famed aircraft carrier Franklin had to be hauled all the way to the Brooklyn navy yard for repairs.

NEAR EAST:
Oil Oasis

Behind all the trouble in the Near East lies the specter of oil—the great natural resource indispensable to a modern machine economy.

While fighting flared in Syria, the French charged that what appeared to be a mixup between them and the natives really was an incident cooked up by British agents to jeopardize the French pipeline carrying oil across the embattled country from the Mosul fields in Iraq.

At the same time, French commentators sharply pointed out that any Arab uprising in Syria could very well lead to similar disturbances throughout the whole Arabic bloc of states, where both Britain and the U. S. have substantial oil concessions.

Oddly located nearby the Suez canal, providing Britain with a convenient gateway to her oriental empire, the Arabic states are said to possess oil deposits the equal of those in the U. S., with the English holding 40 per cent of all concessions in the area and America 60 per cent.

U. S. interest in the near eastern oil situation was pointed up by the government's proposal to erect a $150,000,000 pipeline across Arabia and join in a partnership with the Arabian-American Oil company and Gulf Exploration company for its operation. Shelved in the face of bitter opposition, the plan called for the private companies creation of a billion barrel petroleum pool for the army and navy, and repayment for the pipeline over a 25-year period.

Oil also prominently figures in relations between the U. S. and Britain and Russia, what with the Arabic states situated virtually at the Reds' back door and Moscow having already put in a bid for development of the Persian fields, monopolized by the English.

EUROPE:
Displaced Persons

One of the most difficult of postwar problems in Europe, the return of displaced nationals to their homeland has become even harder with the reluctance of many to leave the Anglo-American occupied zone of Germany, it was revealed.

Though some 600,000 Poles are showing the greatest antipathy to being sent east, Latvians and Lithuanians also are not eager to return. Even substantial numbers of the 1,500,000 Russians in the Anglo-American zone do not wish to be repatriated, but though the other nationals cannot be forced to go against their wishes, an agreement reached at Yalta makes the return of the Russians compulsory.

Besides the nationals mentioned above, there still are 1,200,000 French in the U. S.-British area along with 350,000 Italians, 200,000 Belgians, 200,000 Dutch, 100,000 Yugoslavs, 60,000 Czechs, 10,000 Greeks, 10,000 Danes, 10,000 Norwegians and 10,000 from Luxembourg.

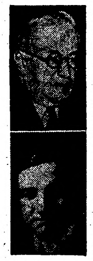
SUGAR:
Press Conservation

Declaring that the present sugar shortage had been aggravated by illegal use of supplies originally obtained for home canning, the OPA took steps to tighten allocations for such purposes and prevent further drainage of shrinking stocks.

In addition to having special investigators check into the diversion of home canning sugar into bootleg liquor or illicit bottling, OPA announced that pledges must now be signed assuring that use of home canning rations will not be used for other purposes and reports made later as to food put up; district offices will suspend allocations until fruits and vegetables become available for preservation, and review all applications so as to spread supplies over coming months.

Partly because of over-issuance of sugar for food preservation last year, OPA said, average table rations have been cut 37 per cent and housewives' allocations for home canning have been trimmed 40 per cent. In addition, the short sugar stocks have resulted in a squeeze on bakers and industrial users, with further reductions in their allotments threatening to seriously hamper continued operations.

CONGRESS:
Fistic Debate



Reps. Taber and Cannon

Well in the tradition of the good old days when the U. S. took its politics hot and heavy, Reps. John Taber (N. Y.) and Clarence Cannon (Mo.) engaged in the second fistic engagement of the present session following heated debate over the proposed tax free $2,500 a year expense account for congressmen in addition to their $10,000 salaries.

Previously, Reps. John Rankin (Miss.) and Frank Hook (Mich.) went to it hammers and tongs on the floor of the house after Hook had called Rankin a "liar."

According to husky, white-haired Taber's story, he had called upon Cannon at the latter's request, only to move to leave the room when the latter became abusive over remarks he had made during the course of debate on the proposed expense account. Returning when Cannon asked him if he was running away, Taber said he stopped a left or a right to the upper lip, and then pinned his opponent to a couch until he cooled down.

Claiming on his own account that Taber had hied it to his office when the going got hot, the slight-of-build Cannon declared that the fracas resulted from Taber's insulting remarks on the floor of the house.

APPAREL:
Pinch to Persist

With military requirements at a high level and labor short because of the attraction of workers to higher paying industries, textiles will remain in tight supply through 1945, the War Production board revealed.

Declaring that a substantial amount of clothing materials will be needed to provide a continuous flow of apparel for adaptability to the varying climatic conditions of the Pacific, WPB said the military will take 85 per cent of the cotton duck supply in July-August-September, along with 20 per cent of carded and 50 per cent of combed goods.

In addition, WPB said, the military will take 60 per cent of the supply of wool woven goods during the same period, and virtually all worsteds, along with substantial stocks of knit goods. As a result, it may be necessary to restrict civilian sales of heavy underwear to such outdoor workers as loggers and farmers.

CATTLE:
For Europe

In a program designed to replace 1 per cent of the 5,000,000 animals destroyed during the war in Greece, Albania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Poland, UNRRA (United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration) will ship about 50,000 dairy and draft animals to those countries in the next 18 months.

With funds for the project to come from UNRRA, about half of the stock will come from the U. S. and the remainder from other nations in the Western hemisphere. The U. S. subscribes to two-thirds of UNRRA's cost.

Because of her extreme need, Greece will receive the first shipment of 300 dairy heifers and 900 draft animals, it was announced. In addition, another 300 bred heifers and 300 mares are scheduled for early delivery to Yugoslavia.

FOOD PRICES

In World Wars I and II wholesale food prices showed less of a rise than prices received by farmers while retail food prices showed the smallest rise of all, surveys revealed.

As compared with the respective prewar levels, wholesale food prices in 1944 showed an increase of 42.5 per cent as against an increase of 85.5 per cent in 1918 retail food prices in 1944 were up 39.2 per cent as against 68.2 per cent in 1918.

Mexico Now One Big Schoolhouse

In compliance with the second phase of Mexico's program for the eradication of illiteracy, teaching of illiterates to read and write has gotten well underway, with both individual as well as collective instruction throughout the country.

Part of President Avila Camacho's progressive program for the modernization of Mexican life, the decree requiring educated adults 18 to 60 to teach simple reading or writing to one illiterate, or to teach collectively, has teeth in it. Citizens not complying with the decree will be forced to do so.

No haphazard project, Mexico's department of education keeps a close check on each student according to age, occupation and sex. So far, 12,000,000 free readers have been issued.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Rubber contracts and ripples into an unstretched state in much the same way as an earthworm moves across the surface of the ground.

From April 1, 1942, to August 31, 1944, the total amount of natural rubber imported into the United States was 214,148 long tons. India and Africa supplied 35.3%; 31.9% came from Latin America, and 15.3% from Liberia. The remaining 17.5% came from shipments in transit when sources were lost to Japan.

Busses now carry more than half the total number of persons transported by intercity public carriers in the United States.

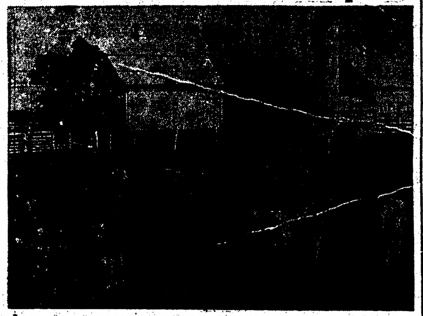
U. S. Cow Army Called On for Peak Milk Production in 1945



Pasture Improvement Through Soil Conservation Means More and Better Feed.

CHICAGO.—Increases of approximately 2,400,000,000 pounds in 1945 milk production quotas will mean that the Midwest's dairy herds will be called on to step up their output to an all-time peak, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"The War Food Administration is asking dairymen to boost 1945 milk goals to 122,400,000,000 pounds, compared with 120,000,000,000 pounds this year," the statement points out.

"Whether the nation's 27,000,000 dairy cows can meet these new wartime quotas is dependent on steady supplies of good, nutritious feed, proper health conditions and adequate care generally. If these are provided, cattle will do their part.

"Of essential importance is plenty of edible, body-building pasture crops. The dairy farmer's surest means of providing this for his herds is to undertake a pasture improvement program that will insure a good stand of legumes and grasses. To accomplish this, it is important, first of all, to build up the soil's productivity by the use of fertilizer containing plenty of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. It is essential, too, that farmers planning such a program place their orders early to obtain plant food supplies."

Competition

About 25 years ago people in all walks of life began to notice and talk about competition between industries. It was new then and interesting. Before that, competition was understood to exist between people and firms in the same industry—merchant vs. merchant, railroad vs. railroad, sawmill vs. sawmill, etc. But after World War I it was a changed business world, plain to see.

Among the modest newcomers in that remote era was a product called rayon. It was manufactured in the form of yarn, like wool and cotton yarns. The price to weavers was $2.80 a pound against 50¢ for cotton yarn. Last year 55¢ a pound was the price of both rayon and cotton yarns, and rayon was on the market as a fibre, very much like cotton fibre, but less expensive.

Rayon Has Grown

Back in 1919 the American people bought less than 2% as much rayon as cotton. Last year the ratio was 20% and rayon had captured quite a slice of cotton's export demand. Europeans earn less than Americans and they pay more attention to a low price. If it were not for the war using up all both industries can produce rayon would probably be giving cotton some tough competition.

When the war ends these two big industries are faced with a struggle for sales in world markets. It is anybody's guess now how the struggle will turn out, but King Cotton is not licked. The cotton industry is still much bigger; still employs more people than any other American industry. Besides, smart cotton men understand how rayon made its remarkable gains.

Volume and Wages

Rayon started out the American way. It had relatively large investments in machinery. With good tools it turned out large volumes of rayon per worker. On a basis of big results from their day's work the men who worked drew good wages. At the same time large outputs of rayon per man every day made it possible for prices to go lower and lower each year, sales to become bigger and bigger.

Working people in America have a right to live well. When they earn good wages they do live well. Money they spend is the very life blood of national prosperity. But before they can earn good pay they have to turn out lots of merchandise per worker. And in order to produce goods in volume they must have good tools. It was a successful plan with rayon and it will work with cotton.

It Costs Something

People say there is a practical cotton picker ready for introduction after the war. It will cost a lot more than one big sack and a string for each member of a share-cropper's family; it will likewise pick more cotton in a day than they can pick in a week. Efficient tools call for capital investment. It means laying out money, but efficient tools are worth it.

People say we will see many mechanical cotton choppers after the war. It is not impossible. This will increase the number of acres of cotton per worker; make more yield per day for every man. The picker and the chopper will create high wages and good living for a lot of people. But rayon can win its war with cotton if cotton tries to stay in the field armed with hoes and gunny-sacks.

The cool weather is not appreciated by those who have small turkeys.

American Prisoners say:

MATCH THEIR SPIRIT in the MIGHTY

7TH WAR LOAN DRIVE

YES, despite their long months and years of privation and suffering, those gallant men, just released from filthy Jap Prison Camps, still have their good old fighting spirit. They're itching to get back into the fight and give the Nips a taste of their own medicine.

Let's show them that we're not quitting either! Let's match their spirit with our dollars! Let's make this MIGHTY 7th War Loan the mightiest of them all!

But to come even close to matching their sacrifices, everyone here at home must buy War Bonds until it hurts. Buy double or treble the extra War Bonds you've bought in any previous drive. Remember, this is really two drives in one. In the same period last year, you were asked to subscribe to two War Loans.

So let's go, Americans. Our hard-fighting Soldiers, Sailors and Marines are giving their ALL. The least we can do is to lend our dollars.

Put The Drive Over The Top.

With only one week and a few day remaining in the Mighty Seventh War Loan Drive, Marshall county residents must buy bonds in ever increasing numbers and amounts if the county is to continue maintaining its perfect record of going over the top in all war financing programs, War Finance officials asserted this week.

In actual completed sales, Marshall county continued to decline in its position among counties in Minnesota, falling down to 34th place in total quota purchases with sales reaching only 74 per cent of the $589,000 quota. The Series E Bond sales on June 16 were only 58.8 per cent of the $585,000 quota to drop the county dowd to 46th place.

"If Marshall county is going to reach its big goals before the drive officially closes on July 1, county residents must go to their issuing agencies within the county and buy their Bonds at once," said O. M. Mattson, county chairman. "We cannot afford to fall down on the job now, even though Germany has been defeated as we have a tougher enemy and more treacherous to defeat in Japan before the war can be ended. This will take money, and its up to the people in all walks of life to supply this cash so needed to furnish equipment and supplies for the men fighting this war to a finish."

Pledges for the Seventh War Loan as tabulated Monday indicated that the county should have little trouble in reaching its goal with the total reaching $617,117.25 which is $28,117.25 more than the total quota for the county. However the official standing is not computed on pledges, but on actual sales only and therefore it is necessary that these pledges be redeemed during the coming week if we are to go over the top

Land Use Session Was Held

E. V. Willard, in charge of the drainage division of the Minnesota department of conservation, and Carl B. Vogen, superintendent of the Mud Lake Wildlife refuge at Holt, met in the Civic and Commerce room at Thief River Falls on Tuesday afternoon of last with the Marshall county board, representatives of the Beltrami county board and a group of farmers from Eastern Marshall and Western Beltrami counties.

Irvin Anderson, Beltrami commissioner, from near Grygla, presided over the meeting, which was devoted to a discussion of the problems created by the large tracts of state-owned lands outside the game refuges. Adopted was a resolution asking Congressman Harold C. Hagen to attempt to arrange for a survey by the U. S. department of agriculture to determine which tracts are best suited for agricultural purposes and which do not justify development.

Following a talk by Pennington County Attorney Paul Lundgren, a committee was authorized to look into the feasibility of the area joining in the flood control district comprising the entire drainage basin of Red Lake and tributary rivers.

Also present at the meeting were Representative Emil Morderg of Marshall County and Senator Eric Friberg, Rosean.

Sharp Characters Act At Ease With Others

WHY is a sharp character sharp and why is a sad sack sad? Why do some guys and girls seem at ease with others? Why do others with just as many assets seem to be beating their brains out trying to decide what to do with their hands?

It's all a matter of learning to control your outward actions, no matter how awkward you feel, says Holly Miller, whose column in nationally circulated Capper's Farmer is a popular feature among 'teen age boys and girls as well as their elders.

"The smoother you act, the smoother you feel," she counsels.

"To be well-groomed may cost you an effort, but don't let it show. Mend your clothes by midnight oil, get up at dawn to press your suit, spend half an hour before your mirror getting your make-up right—if you must. Then forget your appearance.

"Boys, that means no fussing with ties and trying to make a crease where there should be one. Girls, that means no peeking in mirrors, no patting your hair, no pulling of clothes and straightening of stocking seams."

Among Miss Miller's suggestions for cultivating poise and ease are: Stand up straight; Look 'em straight in the eye; Avoid mannerisms; Don't talk with your hands.

"Beat your gums—but not so loud," she advises. "A shrill, loud voice is curdling to the spirit. On that same subject, resounding giggles and horselaughs are strictly for the birds."

Rev. T. C. Hanson, Roseau, will manage the business affairs of the camp and Rev. L. M. Larson, Stephen, will be the dean of the camp. Japs Foresee Invasion as Yanks Tighten Noose on Home Islands; Peg Meat Supply at Present Level

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Captured on Luzon island in the Philippines, these Jap war prisoners relish can of U. S. army C rations.

PACIFIC:
No Halt

Though fighting on Okinawa was as tough as that on Iwo Jima, results have been the same, with the gradual U. S. conquest of the island pressing home the immediate danger to Japan proper, 325 miles to the north.

With Japan already hard hit by air, the enemy looked for an imminent invasion of the homeland, with propagandists seeking to assure the people of the strength of well-provisioned underground fortifications, long in the making to thwart any landings.

Having fought through the maze of interlocking Jap caves on Iwo Jima and Okinawa, American soldiers viewed any underground fortifications in the enemy homeland as an elaboration of the defensive systems on these outlying islands. Though heavily battered after terrific aerial and artillery bombardment, they were only cleared by steady, concentrated U. S. fire from close-up, plus the gradual exhaustion of supplies.

Even as U. S. ground troops reduced Okinawa with its valuable air fields for raids upon the enemy homeland, U. S. fliers were busy hammering at Jap industrial centers and supply lines to China.

With the American fleet dominant in Pacific waters, U. S. aircraft took off from carriers to plaster enemy shipping plying between Japan and Korea, thus forcing the Nipponese to use a more round-about route farther north to get into China or else try to break the bloackade at night or in rough weather.

Harassment of this route came on top of the U. S. sea and air threat to the Japanese overwater supply line from their conquered South Pacific possessions, and the Chinese pressure against the enemy's overland corridor running the length of the east coast of China.

Meanwhile, Superfort bombardments of Jap industrial centers continued apace, with the B-29s extending the devastation of already heavily battered homeland cities.

EUROPE:
Allied Snag

Reworking of the occupational zones in the face of Russian demands for greater territory, and the Reds insistence that U. S. and British forces withdraw from fringes of their proposed holdings, slowed up organization of machinery for coordinated Allied administration of the beaten country.

The snag in plans followed the U. S., British, Russian and French declaration stripping Germany of all Hitlerian conquests and restoring its 1937 borders, and placing all of the material and human resources of the country at the disposal of the Big Four. Severe as the declaration was, it left the door open for further alteration of the German frontier, and imposition of additional regulations for governing the people.

As the U. S. and British representatives at the Big Four meeting in Berlin, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Montgomery visited the battered German capital for the first time since its fall, leaving shortly after the signing of the declaration because of the inability of the Russian delegate to proceed on joint control action until settlement of the latest claims of Moscow.

Recognition of Russian demands for additional occupational territory would give the Reds control of half of Germany and include the cities of Leipzig, Gotha and Erfurt and the whole province of Thuringia presently held by the U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO:
Break Log-Jam

With Russia's agreement to permit the discussion of disputes by the security council of the United Nations' postwar peace organization, the log-jam holding up the conclusion of the San Francisco conference was broken.

In insisting that any of the five major powers have the right to veto the discussion of a dispute, Russia almost stood alone through three weeks of prolonged bickering, finally giving in after consultations between U. S. Envoys Hopkins and Harriman with Stalin in Moscow. Though the agreement permits discussion of a dispute without danger of veto, any of the Big Five can vote down proposals for formally investigating the trouble or calling for peaceful settlement.

One of the outstanding issues of the conference, the veto question ranked in importance with the subjects of international trusteeships and regional pacts, also resolved after lengthy deliberations. In the matter of the trusteeships, the U. S. was granted unqualified possession of Pacific islands wrested from the Japanese and needed for American defense until congress should decide to turn them over to the peace organization. Under the agreement on regional pacts, groups of nations banded into cooperative units can try to work out their own problems before submitting them to the security council of the postwar peace organization, or resort to self defense if attacked without waiting for league action.

MEAT:
Peg Supply

In addition to steering more cattle to federally inspected packers to permit greater distribution of meat across state lines and cutting out all lend-lease or relief meat shipments through July-August-September, the government also reduced military allocations to allow a proportionate increase in supplies to civilians.

Even so, the severe meat pinch will endure through the summer months, with prospects for improvement in the fall when increased marketings should not only permit greater supplies for civilians but also resumption of limited shipments overseas.

Though the government chopped military allocations down to 1,213,000,000 pounds for July-August-September, and pegged civilian allotments around present levels of 3,740,000,000 pounds, the amount available for home consumption will remain dependent upon supplies in the quarter. During April - May-June, supplies fell below government goals.

CUT TRAVEL

State governments saved 430,254,000 miles of official travel in 1944 through operation of mileage reduction programs in comparison with official state mileage figures for 1941, the last prewar year.

Translated into equipment, the 430,254,000 un-traveled miles represent a saving of 28,683,000 gallons of gasoline, 78,228 tires, 7,171 new passenger vehicles—all needed by the armed forces vitally for the all-out global warfare.

NEW FIRE BOMB

A new incendiary bomb which sprouts pyrotechnic gel has figured prominently in U. S. fire raids on Jap industrial centers.

Known as the M74, this 10-pound tubular bomb spills a blend of violently inflammable chemicals over the target like natural lava erupting from a volcano. One of the ingredients is "goop"—magnesium powder coated with asphalt mass.

CONGRESS:
Back Bretton Woods

Having voted to extend the reciprocal trade treaty act for three years and grant the President power to cut tariffs 50 per cent under existing levels, the house also approved the Bretton Woods monetary agreements as part of the administration's program for participation in world economic stabilization.

Passed by a large vote against the oppostion of a handful of Republicans, the agreements include:

1 An 8,800,000,000 dollar fund of currencies of 44 or more United Nations upon which any member country could draw to obtain foreign exchange at a stable rate for conducting business;

2 A 9,100,000,000 dollar world bank for reconstruction and development, with the various governments either loaning money directly or guaranteeing any private loans made.

As has been the case ever since the announcement of the agreements, chief opposition centered around the 8,800,000,000 dollar currency fund, designed to prevent upward or downward fluctations in the value of different currencies. According to opponents of the plan, sound currencies would be drawn from the fund, leaving only the unstable money of countries not adequately required to straighten out their economic affairs.

BERLIN:
Dead City

Entering Berlin over a month after its capture, U. S. newspaper correspondents found a city of death, strangely quiet with piles of brick and masonry and steel heaped along the streets; seared and gaunt walls sticking up like jagged teeth amidst the ruins, and all about the sweetly sickening odor of death.

Though the Russians have pressed for the clearance of some streets for motor and pedestrian traffic, and installed emergency surface water piping in some sections, Berlin remains the terrifying example of the fate of present-day cities subjected to the fire of modern warfare.

As Americans motored through this fantasy of destruction, some of the 2,000,000 of surviving Berliners living in cellars or pummeled lower stories of burned-out buildings emerged from their hapless shelters, dazed and unkempt. They are living on meager rations and have no fuel. The only men seen were old and unshaven.

FARM MACHINERY:
Production Problems

Despite easing of manufacturers restrictions in June and the scheduled removal of all quotas in July, farm machinery companies are running up against a shortage of parts and manpower in producing sorely needed implements.

Of the parts, the most serious shortage is in gray and malleable castings, including cylinder blocks for tractor engines and rear axle housings. Because of the pinch, output of mowers, binders and some types of harrows, plows, hay rakes and manure spreaders may be restricted.

Though the manpower shortage is general in the industry, the scarcity is particularly felt in the foundries producing castings. Throughout the entire war, foundries have experienced difficulties obtaining the necessary amount of employees, leading to wage increases in some instances to attract workers.

Because farm machinery manufacturers continued output during the war, they stand in a favored position in the reconversion period, not only because of the maintenance of their productive facilities but also because of the continuation of their contacts with the thousands of sub-contractors turning out necessary small parts.

U. S. CASUALTIES:
West Front Toll

Topping a million for all branches of service since Pearl Harbor, U. S. casualties in the fighting against Germany alone since D-Day totalled 514,534 or an average of 1,527 a day. Of the 514,534, 89,477 were killed, 367,180 wounded and 57,877 missing.

Against the 514,534 losses sustained by the 60 U. S. combat divisions opposing the Germans, 14 British and Canadian divisions incurred 184,512 casualties, including 39,599 killed, 126,145 wounded and 18,368 missing. Eleven French divisions suffered 11,080 casualties and one Polish division 5,593.

Of the 57,877 U. S. troops reported missing, 15,000 to 20,000 may be prisoners yet to be recovered, it was said. Many may have been taken as such in the closing months of the campaign, when the disorganization of the Nazis prevented the official listings of prisoners.

WAR DEBTS

Addressing a statement to a senate committee considering extension of the reciprocal trade act for three years, prominent U. S. business men advocated passage of the measure and cancellation of all World Wars I and II debts if necessary to promote speedy postwar economic recovery.

The business men made their recommendations through the Committee for Economic Development, headed by Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker corporation.

Freight Rate Problem

WNU Washington Bureau
621 Union Trust Building.

WHAT the recent ruling of the Interstate Commerce commission, attempting to equalize freight rates in the South and West with the East, will mean to the small town shippers, merchants, manufacturers and farmers in the 15,000 small towns and rural communities, no one here is prepared to predict.

No one believes, for instance, the present temporary rates, even if made permanent, will play any appreciable part in a reduction in the cost of retail business, or in the costs of commodities in the affected areas, except perhaps in some rare specific instances.

The Interstate Commerce commission ruling, made after six years of study, and perhaps with an eye on the Supreme court which has under consideration the Governor Arnall Georgia case, roughly reduces class freight rates from Chicago and Illinois west to the Rocky mountains and south below the Ohio and Potomac rivers and in Virginia south of Richmond, about 10 per cent. East of the Illinois-Indiana line and north of the Ohio and Potomac the class rates are increased 10 per cent. Class freight rates, however, comprise only about 10 per cent of total freight shipments, the other 90 per cent being in commodity or bulk carload lot shipments. The class rates on the Pacific coast are not affected.

But here is some background on freight rates. . . . The trend since 1935 has been upwards . . . the ICC has refused to lower rates on appeals of shippers even in the height of the depression . . . railroads applied for a 15 per cent increase in 1940 and in 1942 the ICC handed down a decision giving them about a 6 per cent increase on all rates . . . then on the instance of OPA this 6 per cent increase was suspended from year to year, the last suspension expiring January 1, 1946, when the case is automatically reopened and railroads will ask the increase be reinstated . . . and they will have the argument that war shipments are off, reconversion has set in and with reduced tonnage they can't operate in the postwar era with increased costs and loss of business.

But here are some optimistic gleanings from the decision, which may result from this ruling of the commission as aids to small business and to farmers:

1. Decrease in the rates in the West and South will give impetus to establishment of new small business and manufacturing enterprises in those sections which can compete on a more even basis of equality with similar business in the North and East.

2. The new rate reductions may bring about greater decentralization of big business from the North and East to the South and West states.

3. The ruling opens the way for future revision of the variations of the class rates, known as exception and column rates, and those who have studied the situation believe it will mean the end definitely of sectional freight rates.

4. The next freight rate battle may be on the charges of violations of the anti-trust laws, which is the basis of the suit brought by the Georgia governor.

Individual Situations Vary.

The effect of these rate reductions on any one line of business or on any one commodity cannot be forecast in exact terms. Advice from the department of commerce, for instance, is for individuals to study their own situation . . . where they are buying, from manufacturer, broker or distributor . . . whether they are buying or shipping from distributor's stocks which would carry the commodity rate, and how they are being billed, whether FOB manufacturer, distributor or broker . . . and then to change their methods if it will be to their advantage.

In the North and East some harmful results can be foreseen. For instance a small manufacturer of condiments, jellies, etc., in New York state, who ships in minimum packages of 100 pounds or less with a present rate of 55 cents per minimum shipment, will be forced to pay 75 cents under the new rates, or an increase of 20 per cent, which this manufacturer says will put him out of business.

A small manufacturer in Arkansas may, under the new reduced rates, ship to Indianapolis and compete on equal terms with his competitor in Ohio or Michigan, who must pay the increased rates. The farmer who buys a $10 article from a mail order house, upon which the freight may be $1, will not feel the effect of the 10-cent decrease or increase in the freight, depending on where he lives, which likely will be absorbed by the manufacturer or some place else along the line. The same thing may be true in lot shipments to the retailers.

"FOOLISH NOTION," by Philip Barry, is a play that's right up Hollywood's alley, partly because it would make a delightful picture, partly also because of its cast. Talullah Bankhead returned to Broadway in it after she had "Lifeboat" and "A Royal Scandal" to add to her screen career; Donald Cook is known to movie goers, as is Aubrey Mather. And Maria Manton makes her stage debut—she's the daughter of Marlene Dietrich. She's a big girl, prettier than her mother was when she arrived in this country, with a peaches-and-cream voice and an obvious talent for seductive roles. "Foolish Notion" could step onto the screen with its Broadway cast, successfully.

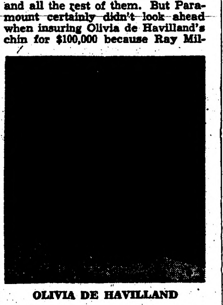
Of course we're used to those nick names—"The Look," "The Beard," and all the rest of them. But Paramount certainly didn't look ahead when insuring Olivia de Havilland's chin for $100,000 because Ray Milland was to hit her on it in "The Well Groomed Bride." Because quick as a flash up came a name for Olivia—"The Jaw." Sounds more like something belonging to a prize fighter than a pretty girl!



OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

In Hollywood, it's a nice gesture—Betty Hutton, between pictures, lent her stand-in, Barbara Cain, to Joan Caulfield, the young Broadway actress. Barbara, star of Broadway's "Kiss and Tell," was beginning her film career, in Paramount's "Miss Susie Slagle."

It looked as if Penny Singleton was doomed to play "Blondie" forever until Hunt Stromberg gave her a chance to escape in "Young Widow." She was a victim of typing, till he put her into this picture, in which Jane Russell and Louis Hayward are co-starred. Jean Hersholt ran into the same difficulty after he did "The Country Doctor"; Van Johnson escaped the fate of the "Dr. Kildare" series, thanks to the bobby socksers. Basil Rathbone has to fight to avoid eternally playing Sherlock Holmes. Typing can make a Hollywood star, and ruin him.

Virginia Bruce goes brunette for her dual role in Republic's "Love, Honor and Goodbye." She's blonde for half the film, then dons a disguise as a brunette French maid to test her husband's fidelity. In private life Virginia's best tint is honey blonde.

Three years ago, after abandoning his job as vocalist for Harry James' band to get a start in films, Dick Haymes was broke and hungry. He got a job chauffeuring Chick Chandler to work at 20th Century-Fox. Now Chandler plays a columnist in "Kitten on the Keys" starring Dick Haymes and Maureen O'Hara, nearly breaks up their romance—and Haymes is slated to give his former employer a punch in the jaw!

That's a swell idea of Bob Burns'—in his home town of Canoga Park, where he's mayor, he's planting memorial trees for all residents killed while serving in the armed forces, with a plaque bearing the war hero's name attached to each tree.

That's a swell new radio show, "Detect and Collect," launched on CBS June 13 as summer replacement for "Which Is Which." In case you haven't heard it, Wendy Barrie and Fred Uttal give each contestant five clues to identify his surprise gift, and $25 if he guesses it the first time. Prizes decrease to $5, but the contestant gets the prize even if he never guesses what it is.

ODDS AND ENDS—The Andrews Sisters have been voted the most popular harmony group by the soldiers stationed in Ireland. . . . Now that John Garfield won't be drafted, Producer Carey Wilson is ready to start production on "The Postman Always Rings Twice," starring John and Lana Turner. . . . This time Paul Whiteman has scheduled a group of Gershwin tributes instead of just a one-time shot; he's chosen Joan Edwards as soloist for the series. . . . Jimmy Carroll was vocal pinch-hitter for five top singers before he landed his own commercial CBS series, "Jimmy Carroll Sings." . . . Van Johnson gets a leading role in the picture based on Guy Lombardo's career.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

China

Quashing Hirohito's dream of great empire will not finish the United States' job in the Orient. Chinese, 450 million of them, already are holding out imploring hands toward America. Most of them don't know what they need but this fact only tightens our obligation because we do know what's good for them. They need slow, regular feedings of the diet on which America grew strong.

On a diet of Christianity, encouragement for initiative, free enterprise and protection for investments, America grew in 180 years from 13 rustic colonies to be the world's most powerful nation. China has had none of it. Since the year One China has had everything but a chance, so it had nothing. Fertile soil, timber, iron, coal, oil and manpower, China has had. But China stayed poor.

China Wants a Chance.

Far-sighted leaders in China are frankly bidding for capital investments from other countries when the war is over. It is America's invitation; no other big country will have capital at the end of the war. Will China be a good place for Americans to invest money in the postwar years? Will it be a good frontier for adventurous young Americans to enter as industrial pioneers?

Both these questions have the same answer. China offers opportunity only if investments will be safe there after the war. Less than ten years ago when I lived there nobody, except in a few favored spots, dared own a paying business. If local warlords didn't confiscate such enterprises, bandits would plunder them. Chiang Kai-shek will remedy this, I trust, if he can enjoy united cooperation from his present allies.

Business Not Safe

In order to make profitable business safe in China, it will be necessary to have a strong, representative government. Government must be able to crush the rule of countless local warlords at home and command the respect and recognition of other first-rate world powers. Investment of capital there depends upon the creation of a set of conditions that do not now exist.

Developments that might take place in China in 25 years of private enterprise are staggering to think about. China's population is three times ours. China has one billion dollars invested in industry, we have 130 billion. America's capital investment is $600 per person; China's is $2.50. Chinese still farm with hoes while their soldiers fight with American-made guns.

Selfishness Kills

Some short-sighted person is almost certain to ask: "Why should we help industrialize China, teach them how to build wealth and beat us at our own game?" The idea is silly. We will prosper with China. Prosperous customers always help. For instance, there are 130 million people in the lands south of El Paso; less than a tenth as many live in industrialized Canada. But Canada buys approximately as much from us.

China needs 25,000 locomotives, 20 million tractors and other items in proportion. China also has valuable things to trade for America's goods. It would take 100 billion dollars or more to make her competitive with the United States industrially, but nine billion would bring her up to about our horse-and-buggy days. After that she could finance herself. If we can help Chiang Kai-shek to stabilize China politically there is little doubt the cash would be available.

There could be no more beautiful time to live than during the month of June. The past week the lilacs here have been out with a full set of blossoms and many other varieties of flowers are also blooming.

AS AMERICAN ★ ★ ★ ★ as Baseball

"Strike three!"—"Sure, make mine beer!" These are phrases using picture words of American life.

What makes America different from other countries is not its mountains, rivers or prairies but its customs, music, dances, games—forms of recreation. That's what we miss when we are in foreign lands—baseball, ice cream, movies, and good cold refreshing beer.

In our America, beer has been part of the fabric of our life from the days when George Washington brewed his own down to the present.

"WE WANT TO GET BACK AT THE JAPS!"

MATCH THEIR SPIRIT in the MIGHTY

7TH WAR LOAN DRIVE

YES, despite their long months and years of privation and suffering, those gallant men, just released from filthy Jap Prison Camps, still have their good old fighting spirit. They're itching to get back into the fight and give the Nips a taste of their own medicine.

Let's show them that we're not quitting either! Let's match their spirit with our dollars! Let's make this MIGHTY 7th War Loan the mightiest of them all!

But to come even close to matching their sacrifices, everyone here at home must buy War Bonds until it hurts. Buy double or treble the extra War Bonds you've bought in any previous drive. Remember, this is really two drives in one. In the same period last year, you were asked to subscribe to two War Loans.

So let's go, Americans. Our hard-fighting Soldiers, Sailors and Marines are giving their ALL. The least we can do is to lend our dollars.

Buy Your 7th War Bond Today

Unless Marshall county residents fulfill their pledges made during the Sevetth War Loan before Saturday night, there is a grave danger that our county will not meet its $589,000 quota.

Pledges and sales tabulated on Tuesday total $618,729.00 without allocations from outside concerns which bring the grand total to $657,854.00. If all the pledges are taken up with actual purchases during these remaining days of the drive, then Marshall county should again go over the top with flying colors, said O. M. Mattson, county chairman.

Offially Marshall county ranked in 51st place among all the counties of the state on Saturday with actual sales totaling only 94.9 per cent of the total quota. In Series E Bond sales, the county's rating advanced to 25th place, although sales were only 74.6 per cent of the $535,000 quota.

If Marshall county is to reach its quota of Series E bond sales, every pledge made to solicitors during the drive must be met in full. District chairmen have been requested to make a final check on all pledges this week and use every effopr to secure the bond purchases before the drive ends on Saturday.

Most communities in Marshall county have completed an excellent job during the drive, but there are communities in the county that have fallen down on the job and are depending on their neighbors to carry the county through in this major war financing job.

It is the duty of every resident in the villages and townships that have not met their goals to go to their bank and purchase their bonds so that when the final tabulation is made next week, every township and village in the county will be over the top.

Leonard Peterson and daughter Carol Ann and Avis Johnson left for their home at Pontiac, Michigan on Tuesday after having spent the past two weeks here with relatives.

Larson-Boyum Wedding

At a beautiful candle-light ceremony, Wednesday evening, June, 20th at 9 o'clock at the Nazareth Lutheran church, Beatrice Sylvia Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Larson became the bride of Kenneth Julien Boyum son of Mr. Hans Boyum of Greenbush.

Rev. E. O. Urness officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with a profusion of flowers and the aisle and chancel were beautifully decorated with tall white candlelabraas.

Mrs. Manvel Moe, aunt of the bride, played a piano prelude of hymns and classics and the traditional marches. She wore a pink marquisette dress.

Before and after the ceremony Mrs. Oscar Fosholm sang "Because" and "O, Perfect Love". Her gown was of green organdy trimmed in black velet ribbon.

Immediately following the vows Rev. Urness sang "Crown With Thy Benediction"

The bride entered on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengren. She was attired in a gown of white net and lace over taffeta fashioned with a sweetheart neckline. She wore a finger tip veil of tulle and lace fashioned with a crown of orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a gold cross, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of white roses, sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

Miss Evelyn Larson, twin sister of the bride, was Maid of Honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Paul Billberg, sister of the groom. She was gowned in pink marquisette. Miss Beatrice Boyum, sister of the groom, wore pale green net over taffeta and Miss Dorothy Larson, sister of the bride, wore pale yellow net over taffeta. All the brides attendants wore shoulder length veils of matching net held by a tiara of flowers of the same color and also wore gold crosses, gifts of the bride. They carried colonial bouquets of carnations and sweet peas.

The flower girls were Mavis Langlie and Carol Myers, little cousins of the bride. They wore identical floor-length gowns of peach taffeta and wore little gold lockets. They carried white crocheted flower baskets of sweet-peas.

The ring bearers were Ronald Moe and John Anderson, cousins of the bride. They wore white suits and black bow ties and carried the rings on little white satin pillows edged with wide lace and gold braid.

The groom chose for his best man, his brother-in-law, Paul Billberg. Other attendants were Orville and Donald Larson and Clayton Larson, brothers and cousin of the bride. They wore the conventional dark suits and bouttoniers of white carnations.

Before the bridal party entered the church, Eileen and Marian Larson, cousins of the bride, lit the candles. They wore identical gowns of blue and yellow net over taffieta, respectively, and each wore a single strand of pearls.

For her daughters wedding, Mrs. Larson wore a pastel crepe dress and a corsage of roses and sweetpeas.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlors for about 150 guests. A short program was given with Rev. Silas Erickson of Thief River Falls as toastmaster.

Out of town guests who attended the wedding were: Evelyn Larson from Ohio, Ole Billberg and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Billberg and son of Wannaska, Mr. and Mrs. Linder Johnson of Minneapolis, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Boyum and family of Fergus Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Dahlquist and daughters of Roseau, Mrs. Annie Brye and Mrs. Marie Settinggard of Grafton, N. D. Mr. and Mrs. Axel Lindstrom, Marion and Carrol of Argyle, Mrs. Harry Moe and children and Merle Moe of Ada, Leona and Orrin Moe of Duluth. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bernstien and children and Margaret Kavanaugh of Gatzke, Harry Berger, Tom Hendrickson and John Millers of Greenbush, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Tharaldson of Goodridge and Rev. Erickson of Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyum left on a short honeymoon to various parts of the state.

NOW ALL TOGETHER

Saw The Worst They Had

Weilheim, Germany.
May 19, 1945.

Dear folks:

Dachau, Germany, is a little city not so very far from here. If you like to hike, you could walk to the place in a few hours time. Mother nature has blessed Dachau and the country surrounding it with undescribable beauty. Dachau, then, would be a nice place for a normal human being to call his home But—

At Dachau our forces found Stalag III. The unspeakable The undescribable. The unbelieveable. Here you found the evils of Nazism in its most horrible form, for Stalag III was a concentration camp. It was a torture camp for political prisoners from most of the nations the Nazis had conquered. It was manned by the dreaded SS men. Hitler's elite guard.

Everyone doomed to Stalag III had a one way ticket to a living hell. The magnitude of suffering and horor at Stalag III cannot be expressed on paper. Stalag III, then, was something out of this world, but very much of this earth. Something beyond conception of mortal mind One of the many things borne of Hitler-barbarism.

One part of the concentration camp boasts several ovens - with the manufacturers name and address placed neatly on each door. These ovens were used to cremate human beings, who had once had lives and destinies just as you or I.

We arrived here shortly after the place was liberated by one of our divisions. The SS men had tried to get rid of as many prisoners and bodies as possible, but were unable to accomplish their diabolicle task before our boys had them. Stalag III was horrible and unatnral. Bodies were piled like cordwood. Human life here was snuffed out as if they were so many flies.

Our commanding officer and part of our company visited the torture camp shortly after liberation. Freight cars were lined on the tracks, stacked with human bodiss. Astrocities like these were unbelievable. You have to see them before you can believe such crimes were possible in this day and age.

We were told that prisoners were crowded together to such an extent in a room that they had to sleep one on top of another. Toilet facilities were nil. Men and women alike relieved themselves in the same room they lived. The stench was unbearable. Have you ever smelled a human rotting body? Imagine hundreds of dead, then, in the sun, mingled with numerous other odors.

Stalag III will go down in history as one of the roots of all evil.

Your bro. Irvin.

Midsummer Salvage Day

In order to offset the slump in waste paper and tin can collections normally occuring during the school vacation period, it was announced today by Olaf T. Ness, Local Salvage Chairman, that Saturday, July 14, would be declared Midsummer Salvage Day throughout Minnesota.

Rural school children will be asked to save all waste paper and tin cans and to bring the material salvaged to the schools on Midsummer Salvage Day. Arrangements have been made for transportation of the material to collection centers. "Whether or not we are successful in making our quotas on waste paper and tin can salvage in 1945 will depend in a large measure on the success of Midsummer Salvage Day", said Mr. Ness.

More Dairy Production Payments

Dairy farmers in Marshall county will receive increased dairy production payments beginning July 1 when the summer schedule of fats becomes effective. These Government payments, designed to encourage production of milk and butterfat, are adjusted quarterly.

The new rates for this county for production in July, August and September will be 45 cents per hundredweight for milk, and 13 cents a pound for butterfat, according to Chas. N. Kranz, County AAA Committeeman. Present rates are 25 cents for milk, and 10 cents for butterfat.

"Dairy farmers here are making every effort to increase milk production. Higher payments during the next 3 months will help offset the extra feed bills when pastures brown off during the summer and more commercial feed and hay have to be fed to keep up the milk yield," Mr. Kranz says.

The dairy production payments initiated in the fall of 1943, have helped farmers to push milk output to a record-breaking height to meet wartime needs without breaking the barriers against inflation.

Application for payments on milk and butterfat production during April, May and June should be filed at the County AAA office as soon as possible after June 30, and not later than August 31. Checks are issued at the time applications are filed.

A. O. Aspelin and Caroline and Francis Backlund enjoyed last week on fishing trip to Bemidji.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Menace Early Jap Conquests; Ask Overhauling of Vet Bureau; Smoothen Big Three Relations

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

For the first time since Nazis came to power, the Roman Catholic feast day of Corpus Christi was observed in Munich, with procession wending way through bomb-battered city. Outspoken foe of Hitler's regime, Michael Cardinal Faulhaber officiated at ceremony.

PACIFIC:
New Campaign

Under heavy attack in the northern portion of their empire, the Japs face equally heavy pressure in the south, with Allied forces under command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur moving into northern Borneo in a drive to conquer the island that easily could be the prelude to a campaign against the Indies and Malaya.

Rich in oil and rubber and possessing good ports and airfields for a thrust to the west, Borneo was overrrun by the Japs early in 1942 while the Allied cause in the Pacific still remained paralyzed after Pearl Harbor. With Jap shipping coming under increasing U. S. air and sea pressure, Borneo's value to the enemy has been sharply reduced, and Allied invasion forces met only meager opposition as they moved inland in the mountainous country.

Though only lightly defending the comparatively communicable coastal regions, the Japs did fire the extensive oil installations located there in an effort to prevent their use by the Allies for future operations. Flames from the storage tanks and wells could be seen for 40 miles.

VETS CARE:
Legion, V.F.W. Critical

Stung by the American Legion and V.F.W.'s ringing denunciation of the veterans administration bureau, congress moved to look into the whole question and give ear to the comprehensive program outlined by both service organizations for efficient functioning of the department.

With a spokesman declaring that the bureau may eventually have to handle the cases of 18,000,000 G.I.s, the American Legion suggested the creation of a deputy administrator under Gen. Omar Bradley and a realignment of authority under six assistants to handle medical care, insurance, finance, loan guarantees, readjustment allowances, vocational training, rehabilitation and education, adjustment of compensation, pension and retirement claims, construction, supplies and contracts.

Though criticizing the overall operations of the bureau, the American Legion and V.F.W. particularly rapped vet hospital care, charging that 47 per cent of the institutions now give inadequate treatment and citing instances of abuse in some centers. To relieve conditions, the organizations proposed increasing bed capacity; boosting wages; allowing authorities more leeway in securing help and supplies; more intelligent segregation of patients to speed recovery, and replacing army with civilian personnel.

BIG THREE:
Smoothen Relations

Troubled relations over Poland having been seemingly smoothened, the Big Three looked forward to their forthcoming meeting for planning the peace conference to reestablish the broken continent of Europe.

News of the approaching Big Three confab followed announcement that officials of the U. S., Britain and Russia would meet in Moscow with the Red-sponsored Warsaw government and democratic leaders from within and outside of Poland to discuss the composition of a more representative regime for the country.

Instrumental in smoothening Big Three relations were Harry Hopkins and Joseph E. Davies, President Truman's special emissaries to Moscow and London. Following receipt of reports from them upon their return to the U. S., the chief executive expressed confidence in a settlement of the Polish question, declaring the Russians were as anxious to get along with us as we are with them.

The late President Roosevelt's No. 1 confidante, Hopkins appeared to have played an especially key part in the discussions abroad, with Mr. Truman revealing that he not only conferred on the irksome Polish situation but also persuaded the Russians to surrender their demands for vetoing the right of aggrieved nations to air their complaints before the postwar peace organization.

While the step toward bringing together the dissident Polish elements was considered an encouraging move for the development of a representative rule, the Polish government in exile in London denied the authority of the Big Three to supervise formation of a regime for the liberated country. Not directly included in the Moscow parley and long at loggerheads with the Reds because of alleged political interference in Poland, the exiles branded the plan as a concession to the Russians.

BIG HARVEST:
Mounting Problems

Even as the department of agriculture predicted a bumper wheat yield of 1,084,652,000 bushels for 1945, along with another banner general crop year, Kansas undertook the harvest of 215,000,000 bushels of its winter wheat with a heavy shortage of both men, machinery, storage and transport.

Premier winter wheat producing state of the U. S., Kansas needs an additional 20,000 hands; 2,000 combines; 2,000 trucks; and many ration points for feeding extra workers. Because of the local elevator glut resulting from the freight car shortage, farmers expect to dump sizable quantities of wheat on the ground after filling up vacant houses, store buildings, filling stations, etc.

Typical of the problem confronting other southwestern states, Kansas' transport situation devolves from the inability of the railroads to divert sufficient cars for the grain trade in the face of heavy war production traffic and the redeployment of U. S. forces to the Pacific through the country.

In the face of impending harvest and transport difficulties, the USDA looked forward to not only a bumper wheat harvest but heavy oats, hay and rye production, and another banner truck and fruit crop. Despite wet weather, two-thirds of the corn crop has been planted, USDA said.

POLIO:
Cases Increase

On the eve of infantile paralysis summer outbreaks, figures show that the number of poliomyelitis cases in the country is running about 50 per cent ahead of a year ago, it was announced by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. As of mid-May, the number of new cases this year were 642 as compared with 424 cases for the same period in 1944, the foundation reported.

"Sunny Side Up" . . .

Following perfection of wirebound egg cases, "sunny side up" will soon be the new breakfast order of G.I. Joe overseas. Real eggs in the shell will take the place of powdered and canned eggs on the menu.

To ship eggs in the past in the shell took up too much shipping space and also gave trouble because of their fragility and need of some sort of refrigerating or cooling process en route.

OPA:
Farm Prices

Passed by the senate as part of a bill extending OPA for one year, a provision requiring that farm producers be granted cost plus profit headed for rough treatment in the house, with Pres. Harry S. Truman joining to oppose the amendment.

Drawn by Senators Wherry (Neb.) and Shipstead (Neb.) and adopted by a 37 to 30 vote, the cost-plus provision stipulates that "it shall be unlawful to establish or maintain against the producers of any livestock, grain or other agricultural commodity a maximum price . . . which does not equal all costs and expenses (including all overhead expenses, a return on capital and an allowance for the labor of the producer and family) . . . plus a reasonable profit thereon."

While President Truman described the provision as bad and hoped the house would knock it out, other critics declared that it would create confusion by replacing the present parity formula, scaling farm prices according to general costs. Countering this argument, Senator Wherry said the provision would apply if parity prices failed to meet expenses.

SUGAR:
Set Quotas

Though distribution of sugar through the first five months of 1945 exceeded that for the same period in last year, the War Food administration fixed rigid quotas for government and civilian users for July-August-September, with the home front obtaining 10,000 less tons than at present.

From January through May, distribution of sugar totalled 2,955,906 short tons compared with 2,747,543 last year, it was revealed.

Reflecting criticism that the impending sugar pinch has resulted from loose allocations of the commodity in the face of over-optimism over supplies, figures showed that as of June 2 raw sugar stocks amounted to 275,746 short tons compared with 442,234 last year, the beet inventories totaled 374,052 short tons as against 465,222.

Bombs Take Heavy Toll

A commander in the famed U. S. 21st bomber force in the Marianas, Col. Alfred F. Klaberer, estimated that 500,000 Japanese had been killed in B-29 raids on Tokyo, with the possibility the figure might even be 1,500,000. "Look at Yokohama," he said. "One minute it is there and the next it has disappeared. I believe we killed 250,000 there."

Because burns caused by B-29 fire bombs require the care of two or three people and the Japanese lack the personnel to attend to the injuries, one 21st force medic opined the death rate must be enormous, Klaberer said.

SAN FRANCISCO:
Peace Force

With French delegate Joseph Paul-Boncour declaring that the conference was erecting "the keystone of the peace structure," the United Nations meeting in San Francisco moved to approve plans for the first international army, navy and air force in history.

Directed by a military staff committee, with regional sub-committees throughout the world, the world peace force may draw on one-third of the U. S.'s present army and navy, American authorities recently estimated. All members of the United Nations will have to grant the international force free right of passage through their territory in the event of hostilities.

Use of the peace force will be subjected to the unanimous approval of the Big Five — the U. S., Britain, Russia, China and France — and a majority of the security council of 11.

SHIPYARDS:
Workers Needed

The rush of workers to peacetime jobs is seriously impeding the construction as well as repair of war vessels, the navy revealed, with the situation equally serious in both west and east coast shipyards.

With damaged vessels receiving first call on facilities for repair, the building of new ships necessarily must await their fixing. With the Brooklyn navy yard in need of 5,000 additional workers at once, the new 27,000-ton aircraft carrier Reprisal is five months behind schedule and the Oriskany is about half completed. Approximately 3,000,000 man days of work will be required on the super 45,000-ton flattop Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Both east and west coast shipyards have been losing about 600 employees a month in the shift to peacetime jobs, with the tight manpower situation in the west reflected by the necessity to tow the famed flattop Franklin to Brooklyn for repair.

PETS FOR G.I.S

Veteran war dogs no longer suitable for combat because of over age and not adaptable to scout duty are being assigned to army convalescent hospitals as pets and mascots for recuperating patients. If a hospitalized veteran soldier becomes attached to an individual dog, he may assume full ownership and take the dog home with him when he recovers and is released from the service.

DOUGLAS RYAN

If you are lucky to have a country retreat, where he can find peace and quiet, putter with farm machinery, raise chickens, milk cows, sell fruit, where he can take his loved wife, baby girls, books and forget the world for a while, thank God for it.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"HOW long must we put up with my husband's postwar disillusionment and discontent?" writes Mrs. Harry Kling of Chicago. "He came back four months ago, and after the first delight at having him home again, honorably discharged, it has been nothing but difficulty and gloom. He was always a well-balanced man, affectionate, steady and contented. He is now nervous, critical, or—worse than all darkly silent for hours. He has gone back into his old firm of claim adjusters, and is making good money, with good prospects ahead. But I can't stand this sort of home life much longer. No harmony, no conversation, no plans, no fun. He is 35, I am 32; our daughters are 5 and 3.

"Harry wants to give up our comfortable apartment, where I have a part-time maid, break up all our pleasant associations, upset the girls' schooling—they go to all-day nursery schools—and move to the country. He has his eye on a sprawling farm 35 miles out, house in bad repair, 52 acres partly cultivated, tenant house of three rooms—the farmhouse has about seven rooms, electric light fixtures and plumbing 40 years old, and everything imaginable in the way of refrigerator, telephone, gas stove, linoleums, curtaining, painting, yet to be done. Here he proposes we live for years —perhaps forever. I adore my husband, I have not loved any other man since I met him, at 20, but do you think it wise to pull up all our roots simply because he has been emotionally and nervously upset by the war? Won't he outgrow this in time? Wouldn't it be wiser to wait, for the girls' sake and for all our sakes?"

* * *

My answer to this is, my dear Mrs. Kling, don't make the mistake of thinking that this fearful war, some of whose phases have ended, is like any other war that ever was. After peace negotiations with the powers of savagery and lawlessness are signed, sealed and delivered, we still have a titanic job ahead of us—service folk and civilians alike. This postwar job will not only be to preserve world peace, it will be to preserve world sanity.

A Shattered World.

It will not be only to keep a few hundred thousand depressed and mentally affected men sane; it will be to keep us all sane. This war has bitten too deep into the equilibrium of humanity; too much that is unthinkable and unbearable has happened. Europe will be peopled by millions of folk who have known what it was — for weeks, months, years—to be homeless, hungry, desperate. The sacred thing that is a man's right to work, to love, to serve his family, to build his home—has been outraged and destroyed.

Barren wastes of ashes and ruins will be wearily searched and combed by vaguely wandering hordes — children whose first experience of life was fright, fear, hunger. Women who have looked upon death, death in the mass, heaped hundreds of innocent women and children slain, and lying unburied in what once were grassy parks and splendid streets.

Nothing like this ever has happened in the world before. Try to realize that we will not only be fighting, in these years to come, for those alien peoples overseas, we will be fighting with every humane and scientific weapon in our power for ourselves. That honor and charity and service may live on in the world, that homes and firesides, books and schools and tree-shaded towns may still exist, that our hearts and souls shall not be ravaged again by the fearful cruelties man may inflict upon his fellowman, will take all that we have of courage and vision and hard, humble labor.

A Country Retreat.

Your man has done his share. He has jeopardized his reason in these years when you and the babies waited for him, safe and snug in protected America. Now you three persons whom he loves must give him back those years.

If you are lucky enough to have a country retreat, where he can find peace and quiet, where he can putter with farm machinery, raise chickens, milk cows, sell fruit; where he can take his loved wife, his books, his baby girls, and forget the great world for awhile, thank God for it. Take it gratefully, and as he grows stronger and saner you'll see how he longs to share it, to let other wounded souls and bodies rest under his big trees, to let other bewildered soul-scarred men fish his stream, help harvest his corn, sleep deep in the country guest room shaded by the pear trees.

We are going to find some big words for what we have to do for our men now. Teaching, helping, cheering, healing. Begin with your own. Forget all the past, as Europe must. Think only of a better tomorrow, and do your share to make it come true.

His loved wife, his baby girls. . . .

MOVING TO THE COUNTRY

After returning from service Harry was able to return to his old position as a claim adjuster. He is earning a good salary and seemingly should be glad to get back into the old ways. His wife says she loves him as much as ever. They have two daughters, five and three, who are attending day nursery school.

Yet with all this, Harry is moody, unsociable and restless. He no longer is well balanced and light hearted. Something weighs him down. He wants to get away —from his job, the association of family and friends, the familiar scenes.

Lately he has fixed his mind on going into farming. He has found a 52-acre place somewhat rundown, and only partly cultivated at present. There are two houses on it, one of three rooms, the other seven. Both are in poor condition. It is here, 35 miles from town, that Harry wants to move his family. Harry's wife doesn't like the prospects.

Preventing Tooth Decay

Fluorine solutions, mouthwashes and fluorine in drinking water are under experimentation. A poisonous element not to be trifled with, fluorine in extremely small amounts has prevented dental decay. Citizens of Kingston, N. Y., a city on the Hudson river, will drink fluoride-containing water while their neighbors down the line in Newburgh will get ordinary water. After a few years, dental comparisons should reveal whether other cities should fortify their water too.

Need for Legume and Grass Seed Increases

Good Profit Seen For Seed Growers

Harvesting legume and grass seed will bring a three-fold return to farmers: additional income, assurance of feed for livestock and protection for their soil, says the U.S.D.A.

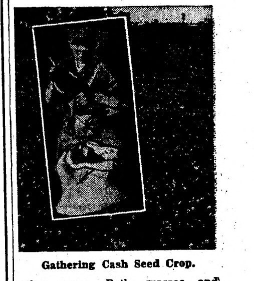
An increase of 67 per cent over last year's harvested acreage of alsike clover seed is sought in 1945, a total of 179,000 acres. One reason for the larger acreage is the urgent call for this seed from liberated areas of Europe, in addition to increasing home requirements for hay and soil protection.

Half again as much alfalfa seed is needed as was harvested in 1944, about 100,000,000 pounds.

About 120,000,000 pounds of red clover seed are needed, some 15 per cent more than was produced last year.

Hay and pasture account for more than three-quarters of the feed consumed by dairy cows and furnish a major share of the feed for other livestock.

In addition, farmers depend on legumes and grasses to check soil erosion and maintain fertility. For example, legumes used as green manure add nitrogen to the soil and when grown in mixtures, they furnish this essential element to the grasses in the mixture. When used in crop rotations, legumes maintain and increase the acre yield of other crops. Both grasses and legumes are valuable as permanent cover for the land, holding the soil against erosion by wind and water.



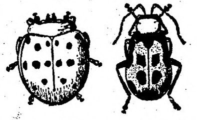
Gathering Cash Seed Crop.

Good prices and a ready market are indicated for legume and grass seed in 1945-46, pointing to additional income for farmers from properly managed fields. The first crop of many of these plants may be cut for hay or used as pasture, and the second harvested for seed.

Killing Bean Beetles

Mexican bean beetle, left, and bean leaf beetle, right, can be gotten rid of by spray or dust with cryolite every 10 days until pods begin to form, then using rotenone.

For cryolite spray use 1 ounce to 1 gallon of water. For dust, 2 pounds to 1 pound of talc. For rotenone spray, use Derris or cube root powder, 5 per cent rotenone content, ½ ounce to 1 gallon water. For dust, use ready prepared dust mixture containing at least 1 per cent of rotenone.



Save the Tractor and Conserve Time and Life

Time, money, injuries and deaths resulting from tractor accidents may be largely prevented by proper operation. Avoid holes or ditches that may cause tractors to overturn. Drive slowly, reduce speed on turn or when applying brakes. Never ride on draw bar. Don't permit riders. Make all adjustments while tractor is idle. Stop power take-off before dismounting. Be sure that all power line shielding is in place.

Do not operate tractor in a closed building. Refuel only when motor is cool and dead. Be sure the gear shift lever is in neutral before cranking the engine.

Effect of Pregnancy

The severe price discriminations practiced by market buyers against pregnant yearling heifers are not justified when such heifers are marketed by the end of the fifth month of gestation, according to the Illinois agricultural experiment station.

Slaughtered tests and carcass show that pregnant heifers take on a higher degree of finish and that at this stage of pregnancy neither the dressing percentage nor the market grade is lowered.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Synthetic rubber, as used in rubber gloves made by B. F. Goodrich, is superior to natural rubber. The new "service gloves" are impervious to strong soap, oils and cleaning fluids that deteriorate natural rubber.

Two synthetic rubber plants operated by The B. F. Goodrich Company have produced 300,000,000 pounds of synthetic rubber. This is equivalent to the normal yield of 28,000,000 Far Eastern Rubber trees, requiring the services of 79,000 natives for the same period of time the plants have been in operation. The two plants employ about 1,200 men and women.

Of Such Stuff

By J. WILLARD RIDINGS

McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

NO ONE in Brownton would ever have guessed that Joe Adams would be the town's first war hero. But there it was; Joe had been decorated for bravery in action. Joe, the report said, had risked his life to bring in two injured buddies from the battlefield, and had himself been wounded in doing so.

* * *

Brownton mothers insisted that the weather was still too cold, even if Spring was in the air. "Joe, you really shouldn't go,"' Mrs. Adams admonished.

But the boys were sure that swimming days had returned. "Last one in's a softie!" yelled Zeke Davidson, biggest boy in Joe's grade, as he jumped hilariously into the water of Parson Creek.

Zeke came up, teeth chattering. "It is a little cold," he sputtered.

But splashes came in rapid succession as each boy met the challenge. Finally Joe was left alone on the bank. "Joe's a softie!" came the cry.

Joe could barely swim. But he stepped off the sloping mud bank into the edge of the creek. "Joe's a soft—"

The taunt was lost in a gasp as Zeke doubled up, anguish on his face. "Zeke's got cramps!" the boys yelled excitedly.

Zeke made it to shore in spite of his pains but Joe, attempting to help, fell into the swimming hole, beyond his depth. Two of the boys had to pull him out, shivering with cold and spitting water. "Joe's a softie!"

"Disregarding the cross fire of the enemy's machine guns."

* * *

"Disregarding the cross fire of the enemy's machine guns, Pfc. Joseph W. Adams carried a wounded man one hundred yards to the safety of a shell hole," Brownton read in the official citation as printed in the Messenger.

* * *

It was the last half of the ninth inning. Brownton High, one run behind, had men on second and third. Joe was at bat. "Come on, Joe. Give us a bingle!" "A hit means the old ball game!" "Just a little single!"

The pitch looked good and Joe swung hard. "Strike three. You're out!" the umpire pronounced.

Brownton rooters groaned. Somebody said it, not loud, but clearly. "Joe's a sissy! What can you expect from a boy who plays the piano?"

Joe hadn't particularly wanted to take piano lessons. But circumstances had combined against him. Mrs. Adams was the mother of six boys. She loved music and had dreamed of a daughter who would sing and play. Each time, after the first boy, she had prayed for a girl. Joe was the youngest—and not a girl. When Joe was ten, his father accepted a piano in payment of an old account. There, then, was the piano in the Adams home. There was Mrs. Adams' longing for a talented child. There was Joe. "Music is ennobling," Mrs. Adams insisted. It was as inevitable as that.

* * *

"Pfc. Adams, after silencing two enemy snipers with rifle fire, went out and brought in a second badly injured man, this time sustaining a wound in the leg from a machine gun bullet."

* * *

"Boy, is this a day to shoot quail! Come on, Joe, let's go hunting."

Joe wasn't too responsive. But shooting was the one thing he could do as well as the other boys.

"If I had a gun like that one of your dad's, I'd go hunting every day, one argued.

They tried boyish flattery. "You can shoot better'n any of us."

"But I don't much like to kill things," Joe said.

Jeers greeted this statement. "Joe feels sorry for the poor little quail!" "Joe can't stand the sight of blood!" "Joe's a killer!"

* * *

Yes, Brownton had a war hero of its very own. He lay on a hospital bed in Italy and smiled up at a nurse. "Now don't get me wrong," he told her. "The medal is swell and I'm proud to get it. But this hero stuff is all the bunk! I'm no hero. You know, the thing I do best is play the piano. Anybody back in my home town will tell you that I'm just a sissy!"

Returns From a German Prison Grave to Health

LOOKING AHEAD

Russia

Since the beginning of 1945 I saw a mid-Victorian rig, a horse and buggy, pass an automobile on a graded road. It was not a race. The car was not running. The motorist was out changing a tire. The driver of the rig sat up straight and pressed his horse for a bit of extra speed going by, which was funny. The car owner made the change and drove into town far ahead of the buggy.

Between 1928 and 1938 the United States, the world's outstanding industrial nation of all time, had an industrial depression. Meanwhile the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was moving forward; not rapidly but at an increasing rate. In those years it was being transformed from an agricultural to an industrial nation, a stage through which America had passed, half a century before.

A Wind-Broken Nag

Russia was driving a horse named "Central Planning." The rig made an interesting dash for improvement; not very fast however, nor very spectacular. Claims made for the animal's speed were funny; certainly not all true. Living conditions in Russia were not as high as those in America in the pit of our depression; never have been before nor since. It was a splurge, better than Russia had before, but far below American achievement.

There is nothing new about Central Planning. It's as old as horse-drawn equipment. Kings, tyrants and dictators have always used the idea. Some have done better with it than others, depending on the ruler. Russia's recent rulers have been anything but stupid. Their military leadership has the world agog. Russia has made a marvelous fight, using American equipment, extensively.

For National Safety

You would think that Russia, living next door to an armed desperado for 25 years could have adequately prepared for war. No; Central Planning couldn't do it. It took a raid on Pearl Harbor to wake America from a sweet dream of peace, but America went into action with Private Enterprise and, in four years, armed the United Nations for victory. This demonstrates which system is better for national safety.

But war is never America's main objective. We are a peace-loving people and want to work and prosper and live well. Some say that America, in view of Russia's achievements, ought to junk Free Enterprise and adopt Central Planning. Knowing that Russia's achievements have never compared to our own, the suggestion is preposterous. Let's examine the figures of an expert for a moment:

Development Compared

Leopold Schwarzchild, in his recent book called "Primer of the Coming World," shows some index figures to make a fair comparison of industrial gains in similar periods—Russia, while at her best in 1928-38, and America in a similar period. Here are three for a sample:

	U.S.S.R.	U.S.A.
Coal Mining	599	1,332
Railroad Building	38	918
Automobiles	129	2,066

The Russian government is an autocracy. One political party controls everything, including newspapers and radio, but not more than 2% of the people belong to it . . . the upper class. Kick up a rumpus about it if you want to go to the salt mines and serve your country for insufficient board and clothes. The system overcomes unemployment, but wages are only one-sixth of wages in America and the standard of living only one-sixth as high. I am in favor of keeping Private Enterprise here.

Minnesota Fair Is Cancelled

Minnestoa will hold no state fair this year.

At a special meeting of the fair board, held recently recently to act upon ODT directive prohibiting state and regional fairs, it was voted unanimously to cancel the 1945 exposition August 25 to September 3. This edict, it was emphasized by the fair directors' does not in any way effect local or county fairs.

"The 1945 Minnesota state fair is being closed to prevent movement of state fair exhibits and visitors from interfering in any way with transportation of troops and supplies over Northwest lines from east to west in August and September," said an official statement of the board.

"Every good American wants to win the war as quickly as possible, and since, in the opinion of the government, the closing of the state fair will help do this, we are cancelling it at once.

"Immediately after V-E Day, when the ban on pari-mutual horse raising was lifted and more gasoline and tires for civilian use were promised, we took this to mean that the state fair could proceed. However, subsequent issuance of the ODT order prohibiting state fairs now prevent this.

"Though the state fair will not operate this year, we urge all its friends to begin planning for a Victory Fair in 1946. This, we believe, is a certainty. We must make that fair the biggest ever held in Minnesota."

The Minnesota state fair has operated without interruption for more than half a century. This would have been the 86th annual exposition.

(Special) Fighting every few hundred yards, subsisting on the barest of rations and plodding on feet that were never dry, S-Sgt. Walter Moberg was among the few men in his 31st Infantry Division unit who completed an exhausting 15 day mop up push into the mountains recently.

Moving up stream beds and over ridges, the infantrymen fought their way 15 miles back into the mountains against position after position of dug-in Japs They destroyed 37 mm. guns which the Japs had forced Filipino men and women to lug piece by piece into the mountains. One stream bed was littered with bloated Jap bodies and 40 more were buried in one 50 foot plot. Supporting artillery, hurling shells over the peaks accounted for many enemy dead. Among dumps captured was one filled with bright Filipino civilian clothing.

Scouts on the point of the advance were not kept in the lead for more than 15 minutes at a time, and a detail of 10 men was taken daily from companies in the rear of the column to serve as litter bearers. So slippery were the trails that sometimes as many as 16 men were needed for a single litter patient-- eighth men to carry and eight to keep the bearers on their feet.

Exhaustion, dysentery, or wounds claimed two out of three infantrymen, but hundreds of Japs were killed and most of the G. I.'s have recovered and are back for duty.

"I've been in three campaigns' said one platoon sergeant, "and that was the roughest thing I've faced yet".

Sergeant Moberg, who is squad leader, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Moberg.

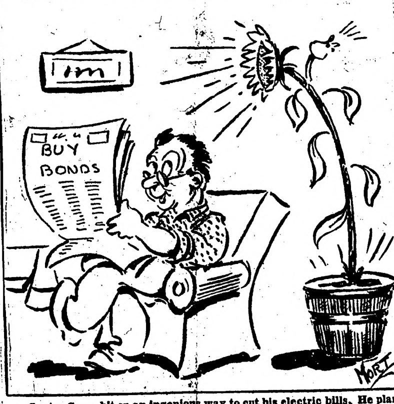
Rail Quiz

Why is the outer rail higher than the inner rail on curves?

The outer rail is elevated to balance the overturning forces that are set up by a train rounding a curve, for the same scientific reason that a circular track for motorcycle, bicycle or motorcar racing is tilted upward from the inner to the outer rim. This is required to resist the centrifugal forces of the moving train. The degree of curvature and the authorized train speed govern the extent of the elevation of the outer rail.



Lester Green hit on an ingenious way to cut his electric bills. He plants sunflower seeds in a mixture of sulphur and loam and raises them in the house. Sez Lester, "Four sunflowers in each room will give enough glow to read the smallest print, and save money for more and bigger War Bonds."

Save To End The War

America needs salvage of all kinds, metals, rubber, fats, tin cans, waste paper, to carry on its huge war production program. Here are the highlights of the various salvage campaign and programs in the northwest:

Rubber: Nationwide drive on all kinds of scrap rubber has been extended to July 10. Filling stations are collections depots. Collectors are paid a penny a pound.

Tin Cans: Collected only in the area of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Fats: Strain excess kitchen fat and save in metal container. Housewife takes minimum of 1 lb. to her market, receives current price per pound for it. Continuing campaign starts July 6.

Waste: Continuing program on all kinds of waste, paper, rags, burlap, old manilla rope. Give to collecting agency such as Boy or Girl Scouts, 4-H clubs or charity or sell to junk dealer.

Scrap Metals: All kinds needed. Continuing salvage program. Give to collecting agency as above or sell to junk dealer. Special drive on metals opens July 13.

General: For answers to questions on salvage, get in touch with the local salvage committee.

O. T. Ness has a crew of men at work putting up a part of his new warehouse at the north end of the loading platform near the Great Northern Railway here. The part they are building now is 36x40 and later on he will put up the other part of the 40x80 building.

Walter Peterson and son Wallace and Harry Engen from here and Barney Peterson from Middle River spent last week end at Washkish on a fishing trip. They reported that the fish were not hitting very good.

Mrs. Geo. Dovre and children left last week for Minneapolis where her husband is employed. Marian Johnson accompanied them returning home Tuesday.

Donald Fluke spent a week visiting his sister, Luella, who is employed in Minneapolis and also a grandmother who resides at Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin. He left Saturday for Inverness, Montana, where he will be employed for the summer.

Booby Trap

In public speeches, in published articles and in this column since early January, 1944, I have been calling attention to the "booby trap" in America's wartime tax laws. Now, as our fighting men press harder upon Berlin, the industries that support them are drawn closer to the trap. Most war contracts will be voided on V-Day but taxes and payrolls must still be met.

Corporations pay income tax each year on the previous year's earnings, just as personal income taxes were paid prior to 1944. In 1946, firms will be taxed on 1945's earnings. But if war ends (terminating war contracts) this year, 1946 will be the year of change-back, of costly sales and few. Problem: How to hire more men and pay 1945's taxes with small earnings or none?

Apple-Polishing?

Any time a voice is raised in the interest of American business, any time a writer suggests that corporation tax laws need revision, somebody accuses him of apple-polishing or grinding the axe of big business. But right is still right. Prosperity in America depends on full employment; full employment depends on business expansion, and business expansion depends on wise tax provisions.

Firms that have used their war-year profits expanding production for victory are not to be blamed. They are solvent. They will have adequate working capital due them under the present law after their Refund Bonds are cashable and after their Carry-back credits on excess profits taxes are allowed. But when will this be? As the law is written now, years will pass before the money comes.

Keep Jobs Alive.

After a man has starved to death, food does him no good. Neither will money due a firm help its employees after bankruptcy. What war-production firms need is money when they need it; to hire men, to buy machinery for peacetime work, to save useful enterprises and avoid wholesale unemployment in their communities. Laborers and farmers and small-town merchants have the most at stake.

William L. Hutcheson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners, surely was looking through the lenses of Labor when he wrote Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the Ways & Means Committee of the House of Representatives, urging the passage of amendments to make Refund Bonds and Carry-back funds promptly available to industry at plant reconversion time.

Labor Leader Says

"Analysis of a large number of companies shows that . . . they have had to use their tax reserves for current operations, so that when war ends they . . . can not reconvert to peacetime operations and employment of men. . . . We strongly urge that these provisions be amended in a manner which your Committee believes will make refunds available immediately at the time war production of these companies has stopped."

Mr. Hutcheson's letter reached Mr. Doughton's desk only shortly ahead of one like it from William Green, president of A. F. of L. Are these labor leaders apple-polishers? No! They are far-sighted thinkers serving the interests of working men, and they know how. They are not recommending boodle for business men. They are intelligently promoting postwar jobs and prosperity for the United States.

35-Mile Speed Limit Ended

Minnesota's 35-mile speed limit on the highway was abolished on Sunday, July 1, according to an announcement by Governor Edward J. Thye.

Under the existing state law, maximum speed limit is 60 miles an hour during the day and 50 miles at night with the exception of the 30 mile limit within municipalities.

In a letter to Highway Commissioner M. J. Hoffman, the governor explained that his authorithy to continue the 35-mile restriction expired July 1, since the 1945 legislature did not extend or re-enact the war power act.

"We must depend on the good sence of motor vehicle drivers to observe speeds that are reasonable and safe under present conditions," the governor wrote.

"The condition of the tires now on our motor vehicles makes it necessary that moderate speed is observed as a matter of public safety".

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burtness were present at a family gathering at the Mrs. Hazel Olson home at Thief River Falls on Sunday honorinr Cpl. Raymond Olson and Marcella Olson.

Midsummer Salvage Day

In order to offset the slump in waste paper and tin can collections normally occuring during the school vacation period, it was announced today by Olaf T. Ness, Local Salvage Chairman, that Saturday, Jnly 14, would be declared Midsummer Salvage Day throughout Minnesota.

Rural school children will be asked to save all waste paper and tin cans and to bring the material salvaged to the schools on Midsummer Salvage Day. Arrangements have been made for transportation of the material to collection centers. "Whether or not we are successful in making our quotas on waste paper and tin can salvage in 1945 will depend in a large measure on the success of Midsummer Salvage Day", said Mr. Ness.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been rainy. Thursday of last week a near cyclone wind and rain storm hit here at noon. The deluge was one of the heaviest of the season and the wind was unusual for this time of the year. A twister hit the west edge of East Valley township and wrecked the big barn on the Algot Skoglund farm. It tore down a new sheep shed on the Oscar Furr farm, moved a large barn off the foundation on the Ole Lunke farm and moved the heavy garage on the Ole Larson farm.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday were cloudy and cool with rain showers. Monday was cool.

You could wear a coat and have a good fire on July 3rd here. It just cannot dry up or warm up this year.

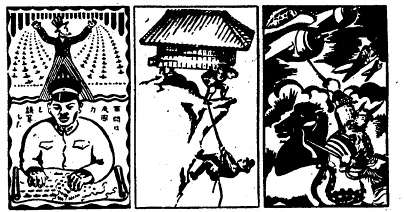
Japanese Maneuvers in China Betray Fear of U.S. Invasion; United Nations Chart Peace

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



B-29s are dropping propaganda leaflets as well as bombs on Japan. At left, leaflet depicting Uncle Sam standing over Jap leader with planes and ships, reads that warlords miscalculated American strength; in center, military clique is shown pulling nation down; and at right, native feudal warrior is pictured battling modern U. S. weapons, with inscription quoting Jap sergeant on honor and logic of surrender.

PACIFIC:
Strategic Moves

Maneuverings by both Chinese and Japanese troops in China commanded the shifting spotlight in the Pacific, with the enemy seeking to strengthen his position on the Asiatic mainland against an expected U. S. invasion.

Fevered Japanese activity in China continued as Okinawa fell and the enemy reported the anchorage of 100 Allied transports off the Ryukyus and the presence of an impressive task fleet in Formosan waters.

With Jap-occupied China considered a twin defensive bastion along with the homeland, itself, the enemy's movements in the territory apparently were designed to meet the threat of a combined U. S. attack from sea and Chinese assault on land, while also consolidating communication lines.

Reports from the mainland conflicted with the Chinese playing up their assault on the big bomber base at Liuchow previously lost to the Japs, and the enemy emphasizing action northeast of Hong Kong where they claimed to have foiled the plans of 60,000 Chinese troops to aid an American landing.

While the Nipponese maneuvered about in China, U. S. conquest of Okinawa made their overall position even more precarious, affording an excellent operational base for future aerial, sea or land assaults on either Japan itself or nearby enemy holdings, notably Formosa.

Marked by some of the bloodiest large-scale fighting of the war, the Okinawa campaign cost the Japs over 87,000 in dead alone, with the usual small smattering of prisoners, who failed to battle to the end like the majority. Though overwhelming U. S. air, sea and ground power doomed the enemy from the start, the Japs fought hard from cave-studded terrain until the fall of the Shuri line across the island deprived them of strong natural defenses. Of 45,029 U. S. casualties, 11,209 were killed or missing, and 33,769 wounded.

UNITED NATIONS:
Chart Peace

With final deliberations of the parley marked by concessions to the smaller countries, the United Nations whipped their postwar peace organization into shape at San Francisco, with major responsibility for future stability devolving upon the Big Five — the U. S., Britain, Russia, France and China. The pact must now be ratified by member countries.

Right to air a grievance before the all-powerful security council bulwarked by the Big Five as permanent members, and the privilege to discuss all matters falling within international relations, were the two prerogatives won by the smaller nations in the closing sessions of the parley after Russian opposition.

Despite the smaller nations' last minute victories, however, chief powers of the postwar peace organization remain in the hands of the Big Five, with virtually they alone able to arbitrate disputes, impose economic sanctions to bring potential aggressors in line and call up the international air, sea and ground forces to enforce peace. Conversely, any of the Big Five could veto such action.

Creation of the international air, sea and ground force under a general military staff with regional branches marked the first time in history that such an organization had been established.

Although no peace conference was held at San Francisco, the United Nations postwar organization provided for international trusteeships over conquered enemy territory and the eventual attainment of self-rule or independence for so-called "subject" people. Under the arrangements, the U. S. would be permitted to retain Jap possessions for defensive bases until congress agreed to turn them over to the peace organization.

In addition to providing for political and military action, an international court of justice was set up for the settlement of legal disputes among nations, with the security council empowered to enforce decisions. Special bodies looking toward the social, as well as economic development of nations, also were established.

MEAT PRODUCTION

With at least 3,000,000 fewer workers on farms and ranches during the last four years than in World War I, the U. S. has produced and processed an average of 7,000,000,000 more pounds of meat annually than was produced and processed in the average year of that war, Harry W. Farr, chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat board, reported at the recent meeting of the organization.

MONARCHY:
Under Fire

King Leopold

With the opposition threatening virtual civil war if King Leopold should return to his throne in Belgium, Europe's time-honored but dimming institution of monarchy came under further fire.

Weakened long ago by constitutional stringencies, kingly authority has come under heavy assault in the wake of World War II, particularly where underground elements resisting German occupation claimed a hold on the people. In the case of Greece, George II finds himself unable to return to Athens because of internal opposition; in Yugoslavia, Peter has been forced to bow to the Partisan Tito, ex-metal worker; in Italy, Victor Emmanuel was forced to retire because of democratic politicians' opposition to his countenancing of Fascism and put the monarchy in Prince Umberto's none too firm or popular hands.

No weakling, Leopold has not been cowed by his opposition, seeking to return with the support of the strong Catholic party plus sympathetic elements from other political parties. Though Britain has professed open neutrality in the Belgian dispute, Leopold's mother has been active in his behalf in London, where strong attachment to monarchy continues to exist particularly because of the opportunity it affords for welding alliances through family relationships.

RECIPROCAL TRADE:
Pass New Act

Termed by Pres. Harry S. Truman "of the first order of importance for the success of my administration," the bill extending the reciprocal trade act for three years and authorizing the chief executive to cut tariff levels 50 per cent below existing levels was passed by both house and senate.

By a 54 to 21 vote, the senate sent the bill to the White House for signature after defeating an effort to strike the President's tariff cutting authority from the legislation. Because some duties already have been slashed 50 per cent below the Smoot-Hawley schedules of 1930 under the previous reciprocal trade act, total reductions of 75 per cent will now be permissible.

Though the Republican minority bitterly opposed the bill on the grounds that it would countenance a flow of cheap goods to the U. S. in detriment to American producers, administration forces experienced little difficulty pushing the measure through as a step toward international economic co-operation.

STATE REVENUES RISE

Collections from general sales, use and gross income taxes levied by a total of 23 states soared in 1944 to an all-time high of $745,000,000—or 38.5 per cent of the $1,940,000,000 collected by all 48 states from all their major excise taxes during the year.

Total sales, use and gross income taxes, also, represents a 7.5 per cent increase over collections for 1943.

HIGHWAY PROBE:
Graft Charged

Spurred by charges that hundreds of millions of dollars are being grafted on the construction of the inter-American highway linking the U. S. with the Panama canal, the senate war investigating committee prepared to undertake a probe of all projects on foreign soil.

Launched by the war department, the inter-American highway came in for the major attention, with Representative Arends (Ill.) pointing up the charges with the declaration that while a private construction firm botched up a road building job in Nicaragua for $8,000,000, army engineers laid a similar stretch perfectly for only $2,000,000. Miles of the private job are of soft road bed and virtually impassable in many parts, he said.

Echoing charges of Senators Ferguson (Mich.); Moore (Okla.) and Robertson (Wyo.), Representative Arends also declared that most of the graft is made under arrangements whereby private contractors rent their own equipment to the government for use on a project. Monthly rental of a D-8 crawler type tractor is $775 whether the machine is worked or left idle, he said.

TRUCK STRIKES:
G.I.s Man Vehicles

Thousands of army troops poured into Chicago by air, vehicle and train to man idle carriers and break the back of an extended strike of members of two trucking unions dissatisfied with a War Labor board ruling allowing them a raise of $4.08 for a 51 hour week. They asked for a $5 raise and a 48-hour week.

Though neither the Independent Chicago Truck Drivers union nor the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL) officially called a strike, some 10,000 of their 14,000 members were out, with non-striking drivers afforded police and military protection on their routes. Under federal law, union officers are liable for prosecution for calling a walkout on government-managed industries.

With workers ignoring their leaders' pleas to return to their jobs in the early days of the strike, much essential war and civilian freight lay unmoved as the force of some 400 G.I.s and 4,000 non-striking drivers proved inadequate. When union members persisted in holding out, 10,000 additional G.I.s were ordered to the city. "The army will break the strike. You can't beat the United States army," said Ellis T. Longenecker, federal manager for the struck-bound properties.

Find Tuberculosis Vaccine

Seven years of experience at the Chicago Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium have held out high hope for a TB vaccine capable of preventing growth of the disease in children whose parents or other family members have or have not been afflicted by the malady.

Known as the bacillus of Calmette and Guerin, or BCG, after the French physicians who developed it, the vaccine was given to 1,302 infants within three to seven days after birth. At the same time, 1,276 unvaccinated children were kept under observation for comparison.

According to Dr. Frederick Tice of the Chicago tuberculosis center, only three cases and one death of TB were reported out of the 1,302 vaccinated children, while 23 cases and four deaths were recorded for those unvaccinated. Of vaccinated children whose parents or other family members have had the disease, only one contracted TB and none died, while of the unvaccinated in the same group four developed the malady and three died.

MOSCOW:
Sentence Poles

In a case typical of swift Russian court procedure, 12 of the Polish underground leaders charged with carrying on subversive activities behind Red army lines were found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment, with three acquitted. Also typical of the conduct of defendants on trial in the Soviet, the accused wholly or partially admitted their guilt and virtually co-operated in the prosecution against themselves.

During the brief trial, the defendants said that the Polish underground had been ordered into hiding by the government in exile in London and advised to form a military-political organization designed to resist alleged Russian encroachments against Polish independence. Charging the Reds with trying to set up a communist-dominated rule in Poland, the London regime long has been at loggerheads with Moscow.

Russia's arrest of the underground leaders after allegedly inviting them to discuss political questions first provoked a stir in U. S. and British circles, with one of the objectives of Harry Hopkins' recent mission to Moscow being to straighten out the tangle.

ALUMINUM

Expansion of the aluminum industry in the U. S. to a capacity one and one-half times the prewar production of the entire world has given this country more than 300 major aluminum plants, a survey shows.

In addition to 330 major works, 1,000 small aluminum foundries are scattered throughout the country and aluminum plants of one kind or another can now be found in 39 of the 48 states. Five large plants are producing oxide from which pure aluminum is made.

GASOLINE, SWEET GASOLINE!

With Washington deciding to let autoists have more gasoline, millions of Americans are beginning to dream of the day when the country can return to its peacetime slogan—"Fill 'er up!"

This may be a long distance away, but it no longer seems something for the next generation to worry about.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast and in the tourist's heart. As goes the garage so goes the nation.

Secretary Ickes will raise the gas ante from four gallons per A coupon to six. That won't bring back the week-end traffic tie-ups but it will revive those pleasant memories of the days when the gas station attendants rushed out, wiped your windshield, gave you a road map and asked, "How many can you take?"

And when he frequently let a quart overflow from the tank to the ground with a "Damp, ain't it?"

Oh, for those hot dog-eating, wayside-lunch storming, detour crashing beach blitzing, dust-swallowing era when the answer to "Shall we motor over to Aunt Minnie's?" was never "How?" and always "When?"

Oh, for the days when you didn't have to hammer on the windows to find out if the gas station was open!

Ah, the good old times when there was a two-pump gas station in every block and a nozzle in every tank!

It is just as well that the return to full tanks is going to be gradual. A sudden restoration of open gas stations openly arrived at would be too much for normal emotions to endure.

Four years of regarding the pumping station as an arid retreat for the over-optimistic have done things to the American character.

If a fellow got over four gallons at a crack he thought he had struck oil.

And if the gas station proprietor threw in a smile and five drops extra he knew he had hit gusher territory.

No wonder Ickes survived that recent cabinet shake-up. He announced the new gas ration at the hour the President was making the changes. And Harry Truman is nobody's fool. He knew the public would never stand for changing fuel administrators in mid-stream.

("Quisling Trial Postponed Until August."—Headline.)

Oh, don't be hasty with this man—
This kind and gentle soul!
There is such heavy doubt that he
Essayed the traitor's role.

Oh, do not rush proceedings when
It comes his time to go;
Delay them until autumn for
He loves the summer so!

Oh, let his trial be deferred—
Go slowly, if you please,
For Vidkum wants to play a while

INVESTIGATION OF GRAFT CHARGES DEMANDED

IN THE PROSECUTION of a war there are bound to be some mistakes in judgment on the part of those directing the production of supplies, and those directing the fighting. Such mistakes may be, and usually are, expensive, they are to be regretted, but must be expected. Such mistakes in no way constitute a criminal action, and are subject to no criminal penalty.

There are other mistakes, occasioned not by judgment, but by negligence. The law recognizes such a thing as criminal negligence when there are not exonerating causes. Under any circumstances negligence is never so excusable as is mistaken judgment.

Then there is outright intent to be dishonest, to defraud those who must do the paying, to secure for others something to which they are not entitled. It is known by the ugly name of graft, and the grafter is numbered among the lowest type of criminals.

Fulton Lewis Jr., a Mutual network commentator, has presented over the air what he has stated as facts, that, if true, would certainly taint as grafters a number of people named, and others implied. If his statements are not true the circulation of them over the air would constitute criminal libel for which Mr. Lewis and the Mutual Broadcasting company would be liable. If such a charge is not brought that, in itself, should be sufficient evidence to cause a searching congressional investigation.

Mr. Lewis has charged that the tax-burdened American people have been defrauded, either through negligence or intent, of many millions, or possibly billions of dollars. He has offered as evidence what he says are factual statements of names, places, amounts, methods and specific contracts. If those statements are false the courts can provide redress for the accused. If they are true the tax-burdened American people demand the punishment of the guilty whoever they may be.

Congress cannot be expected to take cognizance of every hearsay charge that is made, but in this case there is so much involved, so many ramifications, that the congressional investigation is fully warranted. Should the investigation develop criminal negligence, or a direct attempt to defraud the American people, congress will turn the case over to the department of justice.

The American people have demonstrated their willingness to pay the terrific cost of our fight for freedom, but they are not willing to finance the making of a bunch of millionaires through any process of graft.

AFTER MORE THAN three years of real work at the job, Senator Byrd and his committee for the reduction of government expenditures have dug out of the maze that is Washington 1,141 different government bureaus, departments, administrations and what have you.

Those 1,141 with headquarters at Washington, maintain tens of thousands of local offices throughout the United States. They have been responsible for many forms and questionnaires the citizens have been ordered to fill out and which, in practically all cases, have served no useful purpose. Through these executive-order-created bureaus, etc., there is a duplication of effort in many lines. A duplication that is burdensome and expensive to the citizens.

AUDIT OF AGENCIES IS SOUND BUSINESS PRACTICE

THERE IS A BILL now before the senate that provides for an audit by the Office of the Comptroller General and the jurisdiction of congress over the many government corporations created by presidential executive orders. These government corporations, directly or indirectly, affect practically every citizen of the nation. Of them the comptroller general, Lindsay C. Warren, said to a congressional committee: "They have become greater than congress, and, at times, arrogantly snap their fingers in the face of congress. There are 101 such corporations, with assets of 27 billion dollars, and liabilities of 22 billion. The government guarantees their stock, but has no jurisdiction over their operations, and makes no audit of their accounts. It is time something was done about them.

They should have the opportunity to become our 49th state of the Union.

Household Hints

Never wash china patterned in gold in water containing soda.

A dress form does not solve all fitting difficulties. If you have one, use it, though, for locating and checking direction of hem and seam lines.

Use cotton thread to mend leather gloves. Silk thread will cut the leather and pull out again.

Household sponges are kept fresh by soaking in salt water after they have been washed.

To remove the odor of fish from dishes, wash them in a strong hot solution of salt in water, without the addition of soap.

Powdered graphite, in lieu of oil, will keep door hinges from squeaking.

If an electric cord becomes damp, place it on a flat surface and do not use it for several days until it has dried.

Screws have a habit of disappearing when you need them, and dropping from your fingers when you use them. This can be avoided if you put each screw in a strip of heavy paper. They are not only easy to find, but also are easy to hold in place when you start them with a hammer.

If you treat your new baking tins kindly they will repay you. Before you use them for the first time, rub them all over with lard, then bake in a warm oven for half an hour. In the case of enamel pie dishes, fill them with boiling soda water and allow to get cold. Then wash in hot, soapy water and rinse very thoroughly.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

Follow Through

Do you believe working people have a right to organize and bargain as a group for their general betterment? Do you believe a man who has saved some money has a right to invest it in any business he likes and to operate that business, trying to make a reasonable profit? Do you believe that big-volume production at low cost is the key to good pay? My answer is yes, to all three questions.

If you agree, you subscribe to the fundamentals of the Labor-Management Charter. It was signed in Washington last March 28 by William Green for the American Federation of Labor, Eric Johnson for United States Chamber of Commerce, and Phil Murray for the Congress of Industrial Organizations. It is a powerful document, able (if carried out) to do the world more good than the famous Atlantic Charter.

Nothing Original

People who work surely have rights. Open competition is certainly fair. Economy of time and effort yields positive rewards. These ideas are not original. They are old and time-tested principles. All of them stand out clearly in the teachings of Jesus and of many great men who have lived and enriched the world more recently. They appear in the Labor-Management Charter.

Besides declaring the rights of labor, the fairness of competition and the dividends of economy, the Labor-Management Charter contains two vital pledges: (1) To settle industrial disputes peaceably — no strikes, no violence, no lockouts, no trickery, and (2) To support a sound economic system in America—an expanding foreign trade and an enduring peace. Both are perfectly sound.

Big Responsibility

Being the richest and strongest nation in the world, the United States has a serious responsibility. It is graver than ever now, with a global war to finish and the world to be set in order. Miss Columbia must point the way and she stands at the crossroads. America's choice will determine which way the whole world goes; to peace and plenty or to poverty and oppression.

Of the 200 billion people who have lived on earth, not more than 2% could call their souls their own. The way of the world has always been oppression and it still is. Now especially the trend is toward dictatorship. Not 20% of the people now living ever dreamed of freedom and prosperity like we enjoy, but America is in actual danger of being carried with the political tide.

Jobs and Markets

The Labor-Management Charter points the right way: toward freedom of faith, security of ownership, and liberty in self-government. Like any guide-post it is powerless in itself, useful only if it is followed. If followed, however, it indicates an orderly transition from war to victory in peace and prosperity. If it is ignored, our alternate course leads to economic war, government by edict, lower wages, and less of the things people want.

The system of open competition in enterprise made America the world's most influential nation and kept it in the forefront of human progress for 170 years. A recent survey shows that conservative business men are ready, if they have a chance, to offer more than one job per available worker after the war. For full employment, good pay, ready markets and active business, let's follow through with the Labor-Management Charter.

Why a Farmer Should Buy and Keep War Bonds

by O. G. Lloyd
Head, Dept. of Agricultural Economics
Purdue University

FOR more than 16 months farmers have enjoyed the most favorable exchange of farm dollars for Bond dollars in more than a quarter of a century. Based upon 1935-39 as 100, farmers have sold farm products at the average ratio of $140 for every $100 paid, including interest and taxes. This ratio compares most favorably with the decade 1920-29 with a ratio of 105 and especially with the decade 1930-39 when the ratio fell to 89 or an $11 loss compared to the base period of 100 in 1935-39.

Granting that the post war period price level will not fall lower than the level of 1935-39 for a long period of time, the advantage of exchanging war inflated farm dollars for War Bond dollars is obvious. Ordinary business transactions are made on a margin of less than 10 percent compared to this extraordinary exchange of 40 percent.

To obtain the 40 percent advantage of inflationary farm dollars, it is necessary to keep the War Bonds until prices are deflated to the 1935-39 level. In the meantime the interest paid on the investment will increase the value of the bond 33⅓ percent or a War Bond costing $75 will be redeemed by the Government at $100.

During periods of stationary and of falling prices of farm products, which are probable during the next decade, farming will have urgent demands for liquid capital which can be readily turned into cash for equipment and improvements. Such expenditures wisely made pay big dividends through more economical production which meets current demand. At such periods the wise farmer is not handicapped for operating capital if he owns War Bonds. Backed by the credit of the Government, War Bonds are so secure and so readily convertible into purchasing power that they excel the land itself as a means of providing ready cash.

The discipline of following a budget which requires savings for investment promotes prudent spending of time and money. When the amount for spending is reduced in order to invest for private and public benefit, an increased satisfaction is gained by a new evaluation of current needs in terms of making the investment goals possible. It is little wonder then that such War Bond purchasers marvel that current needs are met about as fully as before and the Bond seems to be more of a gift than of a sacrifice of present wants. Savings for buying War Bonds are obtained, therefore, with the least friction of daily living when accompanied by judicious spending.

Farming is an occupation which offers an excellent example of the American principle of free enterprise. Farmers should buy War Bonds and keep them because their industry and efficiency have given them the highest production per man of farmers in any country. Without high production per man, there cannot be much to spend on current needs, much to save for purchase of War Bonds and much to give to any worthy cause. Now that high purchasing power of farm products is accompanied by high physical production of farm products per man, the income of farmers has been increased correspondingly and farmers are able and willing to buy War Bonds. Such purchases are not only a smart investment for high economic and patriotic returns, but farmers can avail themselves of the opportunity today because they do have the money to make the purchase of the War Bonds and should keep them in order to obtain the highest returns on the investment.

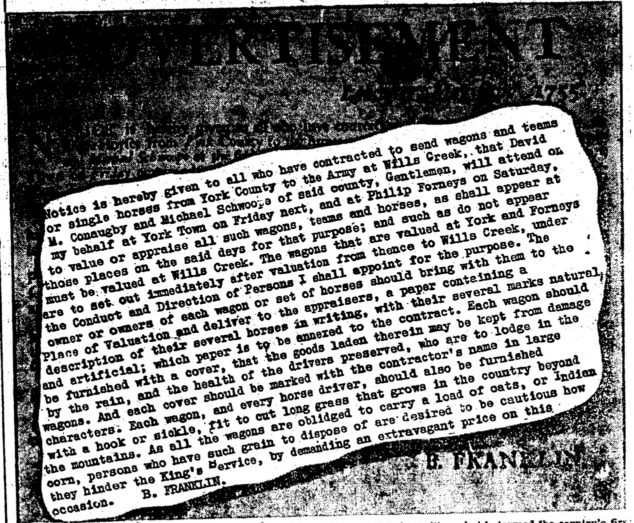
The Country's First "War Loan" Advertisement



Notice is hereby given to all who have contracted to send wagons and teams or single horses from York County to the Army at Wills Creek, that David M. Conaugby and Michael Schwoope of said county, Gentlemen, will attend on my behalf at York Town on Friday next, and at Philip Forneys on Saturday, to value or appraise all such wagons, teams and horses, as shall appear at those places on the said days for that purpose; and such as do not appear must be valued at Wills Creek. The wagons that are valued at York and Forneys are to set out immediately after valuation from thence to Wills Creek, under the Conduct and Direction of Persons I shall appoint for the purpose. The owner or owners of each wagon or set of horses should bring with them to the Place of Valuation and deliver to the appraisers, a paper conteining a description of their several horses in writing, with their several marks natural and artificial; which paper is to be annexed to the contract. Each wagon should be furnished with a cover, that the goods laden therein may be kept from damage by the rain, and the health of the drivers preserved, who are to lodge in the wagons. And each cover should be marked with the contractor's name in large characters. Each wagon, and every horse driver, should also be furnished with a hook or sickle, fit to cut long grass that grows in the country beyond the mountains. As all the wagons are oblidged to carry a load of oats, or Indian corn, persons who have such grain to dispose of are desired to be cautious how they hinder the King's Service, by demanding an extravagant price on this occasion.

B. FRANKLIN.

BEN FRANKLIN, at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, on May 6, 1755, caused to be written what is termed the country's first war loan advertisement. Franklin warned his readers against inflationary prices lest they "hinder the King's Service," lesson still good in the Mighty Seventh War Loan. The document was written in German as well as English. Superimposed on the original are the words used by Franklin. This was a loan of materials and not of dollars.

39th County Fair Next Week

With an outstanding grandstand program and other features arranged and indications pointing to an exceptionally good display of exhibits in all departments, the 39th Annual Marshall County Fair will open at Warren on Monday for its three day run, closing on July 18.

Entry days for the Fair will be on Sunday from 1:00 p. m. until 9:00 p. m. and on Monday from 8:00 a. m. to 10:00 o'clock a. m. Judging of exhibits will start at 11:00 a. m. Entries are limited to Marshall and Northern Polk county residents.

Following a practice inaugurated three years ago, due to wartime help problems, there will be no afternoon grandstand programs during the 1945 Fair. The evening programs will commence at 8:00 p. m. with a concert each evening by a Combined Marshall County High School Band. High school Band members from several towns in the county will play in the organization under the direction of Supt. W. L. Bakke of the Stephen Public Schools. An organization of 50 or more pieces will participate.

Marshall County 4-H clubs will also contribute to the evening grandstand programs through presentation of musical and novelty numbers. Nine of the clubs in the county are working on numbers for presentation before the public. The Annual 4-H Club Style Queen Reveu will be presented before the grandstand on Tuesday evening when the county style queen will be crowned.

Headlining the grandstand program to be presented by the Northwestern Amusement Co. of St. Paul will be the colorful Mark Clark Dancers in a beautiful night reveu in gorgeous costumesbefore an attractive stage setting. Baited Hooks

Two years ago when national legislation affecting schools was proposed (S-637) nobody who favored the bill ever called it the "federal school control bill." That alone would have defeated it. No sincere friend of America's public schools wants them bossed by the national government. The thing was referred to always as "federal aid to education." That sounded much better.

But a great many people were not fooled at all. They had seen bait used to hide hooks before by political as well as practical fishermen. Although the bill stated, right in Section One, that it would be a nice little law if passed and not help any government man, or group of men, grab the schools and run away with them, the platitude was ignored by our sage and seasoned Senate.

Amended by Senate

On the floor of the Senate the "federal aid" bill underwent some changes. As changed, no part of the federal funds therein provided nor any part of the local funds thereby supplemented could be used to make or maintain any distinction between races. That's federal control, beyond dispute. I am not discussing the merits of the amendment. I am saying this: Federal control will follow federal aid as night follows day.

The subject is alive again now. A committee in the House and another committee in the Senate are once more considering legislation that flies the flag of "federal aid to education." Once more I am emphasizing that financial aid to local schools from far-away Washington will bring federal control of local schools in spite of all the protective clauses ever built out of words.

It Is Federal Law

The Supreme Court of the United States, the most powerful tribunal on this war-cursed earth, has established a precedent in favor of federal control. The Supreme Court has ruled that the federal government can control that which it subsidizes. Little, protesting sentences in the preamble of new legislation figuratively fade away in the light of this Supreme Court ruling.

Some people may want to argue that federal aid to schools is not federal subsidy of schools. I maintain that any distinction between the two things is a distinction without a difference. I have learned quite a little about these twin bills recently and about people who advocate their passage. The bills are practically alike and they point to government control like a compass points to the north.

The Entering Wedge

Both bills call for a 300 million dollar annual outlay of federal funds, and it's only a start. Testimony of people who journey to Washington boosting the idea is very clear. It translates the handwriting on the wall. They expect federal aid to grow rapidly after the first bill is passed. I also think it would grow in less than ten years from federal subsidy to federal control.

I am opposed to federal aid therefore for several reasons: (1) It will lead directly to federal control of education. (2) When the national government controls the local schools, the children's parents have nothing to say about what takes place at school. (3) If it happens, popular education, so dearly bought, will be nothing but a handy stepping stone toward political dictatorship.

Japanese Typewriters Have 2,450 Characters

Japanese typewriters are so intricate and cumbersome that they are used, not to compose, but to copy letters and manuscripts, their only speed value being in their production of carbon copies, says Collier's. They contain 2,450 characters—nearly 2,300 Chinese ideographs, 102 Japanese syllable signs, the 52 small and capital letters of the English alphabet and the Arabic numerals.

As even experienced operators have difficulty in finding these characters, a printed guide to their location is supplied with each machine.

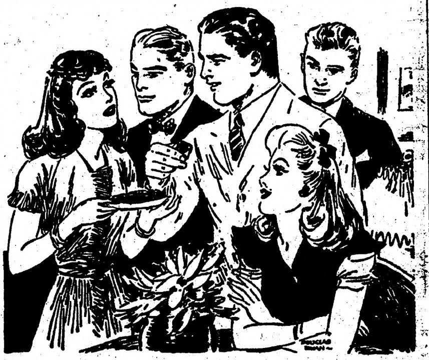
Kathleen Norris Says:

Many Wives Aid the Enemy

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.



"Mollie," she says, "is a perfectly good girl, but she has her friends at the house—all the time, who are laughing and making candy and going to afternoon movies."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"THINGS have just been running down at home since Ted and Larry went away to war," whined a woman to me in the market the other day. "You see," she went on, "Larry was making good money and he helped out a lot, and by this time I suppose Ted would have been a wage-earner, too. Now with just Betty and Dad at home, we are the most dismal group you can imagine, and the money trouble doesn't help to console us! I can't wait to have the boys get back, when we can get all straightened out, pay our debts and start over."

I looked at this woman in amazement. She loves her sons; she will grieve bitterly if either is taken by war. And yet she could stand there and tell me, with a sort of melancholy pride, that the welcome provided for the boys of the family is going to be complaints, debts, anxieties, responsibilities—no heartening assurance of the family's solvency and security, no encouraging plans for rest and recuperation—just the old tedious complaining and protesting against the general injustices of fate.

Another woman wrote to her son that she and his grandmother, who have been living together, have had so serious a disagreement that they are going to law about it. She asks him to answer several questions by return mail: Does he remember his grandmother saying that his mother had been mixed up in an unsavory love affair before her marriage; will he testify that his grandmother often called his mother ugly names, and so on.

The lonely son, wasting the best years of his life in the bleak Aleutians, must sit down and handle the quarrels of the two undisciplined women.

Runs Down His Wife.

Another woman writes her son disparaging letters about his wife. Mollie, she says, is a perfectly good girl, but she has friends at the house all the time who are laughing and making candy and going to afternoon movies, and the mother-in-law thinks it is a shame to have Bob's money wasted that way.

And again a homesick man must open letters that fill his heart with bitterness and despair.

As for the "dear John" letters—these have become a recognized aid to the enemy! The "dear John" letter is a missive that opens with the shattering phrase, "I have been thinking of us and our married life, and I believe we would both be happier if we were to obtain a divorce and make a fresh start with other mates."

Don't smile at this and dismiss it as only an occasional thing. It is a very real and desperate menace to the morale and peace of mind of our fighting boys. Hundreds and hundreds of these cruel notes go forth daily, and the effect they have on a man whose nerves are shaken already by danger, by the loss of comrades, by homesickness, mosquitoes and strangeness may be imagined.

The woman he loves doesn't want to see him any more. The little children who cried when daddy went away won't be his children when he comes back. The home and security for which he is fighting aren't either home or secure. The devastating breath of war is not only blighting his life now, at the terrible battle front, but it has destroyed everything else, too.

Grim, Vital Days Ahead.

I would like to remind these letter-writing women that we are going into grim and vital postwar days. Every woman in America will be a help or a burden to the building of the new world then—there will be no half-way. Thousands of helpless, selfish, discontented women will find themselves left out of the running, their children rebellious at the change that gives them a strange home and a new father, their new mates not inclined to be particularly considerate of the women who coldbloodedly could drop old mates during the crisis of war.

But thank God there will be other women, millions of them—women who have written nothing but encouraging and loving letters during this time; women who have planned practically for the homecoming, are saving money, are out of debt and are full of ideas for Tom's future; women who know that more than our pilgrim or pioneer mothers needed them, we need now courage, self-control, economy and foresight. It is the woman who is strong, faithful to her mate, concerned with his welfare and that of the children and able to live on her income, no matter how small, who is going to be the inspiration, the essential creator, of the new America.

Already shaken by danger, homesickness. . .

MORALE WRECKERS

It is every woman's duty to try to preserve the morale of the men of her family who are fighting. She should do everything she can to preserve and, when possible, to improve the situation at home. When there are difficulties that she cannot cope with, she should tell her soldier little or nothing about them. Perhaps they will clear up—in any case they can wait. Seldom can the poor fellow in a distant camp do anything about them, anyway. He has enough to contend with, struggling against the enemy, and enduring discomforts of all sorts. Letters disparaging his wife, telling of family quarrels and financial problems, do serious damage to the spirit of the front-line fighters.

Shifting Curtains Around Makes Them Last Longer

Curtains hung at windows exposed to bright light or sunshine will give out first. Sunlight causes the fabric to lose its strength. It is a good plan to make top and bottom hems of the same width and then reverse them each time they are washed or cleaned. Curtains from sunny windows can be shifted occasionally to the shady side of the house. Sheets usually wear thin first in the upper center, where the shoulders give them more rubbing. To make them wear more evenly, reverse them from head to foot occasionally. Mend all snags promptly. The thrifty home-maker may stitch together the outside edges of sheets worn thin in the middle, split them down the center and hem the edges, to greatly prolong their usefulness.

More Cloth Coming Soon

The supply of yard goods for home-sewing in small towns and rural areas will soon be increased. Preference ratings will be given to merchants in these areas for the distribution of about 150,000,000 yards of cotton fabrics, including pongee, voile, sheeting 42 inches and wider, print cloths, outing flannel and gingham. This decision follows a similar order, issued during the first quarter of this year, which was aimed to correct unequal distribution of piece goods.

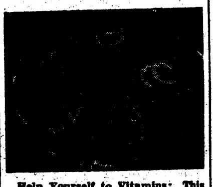
Heap Salad Bowls With Vitamins For Summer

Lynn Chambers' Point-Easy Menus

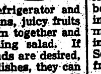
*Buffet Chicken Salad
Sliced Tomatoes and Cucumbers
Potato Chips Pickles and Olives
Orange Rolls or Biscuits
Fresh Berries with Cream
Refrigerator Cookies
Beverage
*Recipe given.



Help Yourself to Vitamins: This pretty as a picture salad bowl is made simply by alternating rows of lettuce wedges and mounds of potato salad, garnished with slices of hard-cooked eggs. It's hearty enough for a main dish, even without meat.

Summer is the time to heap high the salad bowl and bring generous portions of nature's bounty of vitamins and minerals to the table.

Active summer play and strenuous work calls for big servings of health and energy producing foods. That's why the salad bowls play a major role in the menu parade.



There's another reason, too, why salads are going to be important this season. When the butcher has no meat and the cupboard yields nothing of interest to the home-maker, she can always go to her refrigerator and bring out lovely greens, juicy fruits and berries, toss them together and serve an eye-appealing salad. If more substantial salads are desired, especially for main dishes, they can be flecked with the white and gold of protein-rich eggs, unrationed, luscious bits of chicken or well chilled and subtly seasoned fish.

Vary the trimmings and change the dressing, and no salad can ever become monotonous. If oils and fats for salad dressings are scarce, put them together with sour cream, fruit juices, vinegar or cooked dressings that require little fat.

Here are two main dish salads that will go over big with the family. One stars eggs and the other chicken:

Star Deviled Eggs.
(12 Eggs)

- 12 hard-cooked eggs
- 2 tablespoons salad dressing
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1½ teaspoons mustard
- 1½ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Remove shells from eggs. Cut a slice from both ends, cutting the slice at the round end deep enough to expose the yolk. Cut deep gashes into the egg white around the rounded end to give a saw tooth edge. Pressing gently at the bottom, force out the yolk. Press yolk and egg white that was cut off through the sieve. Add remaining ingredients and beat until smooth. Refill shells. Garnish tops if desired.

To serve as a salad, lay on top of sprigs of watercress or other greens. Or, use as a garnish for other salad platters.

Buffet Chicken Salad.
(Serves 8)

- 2 cups cubed, cooked chicken
- ¼ cup french dressing
- 4 cups boiled rice, chilled
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Boiled dressing or mayonnaise
- Lettuce or greens
- Jellied cranberry sauce
- Deviled eggs

Combine chicken and french dressing. Chill about 1 hour. Meanwhile cook rice until fluffy and season well according to taste. Just before serving combine chicken, chilled rice and enough salad dressing to moisten. Season. Arrange in individual lettuce cups on platter or salad bowl. Garnish with thick slices of cranberry sauce and deviled eggs. Top with additional dressing, if desired.

There's nothing so cooling on a warm summer night than a jellied tomato salad. Although this recipe provides for a simple salad, it may be varied by adding leftover or chopped, fresh vegetables to it.

Jellied Tomato Salad.
(Serves 10)

- 1 quart hot, stewed tomatoes
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 packages of lemon-flavored gelatin
- ⅓ cup sliced, pickled onions or
- 1 teaspoon onion juice
- ¼ cup sliced stuffed olives
- ¼ cup diced green pepper
- 1 cup diced celery

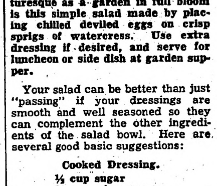
Dissolve gelatin in hot tomatoes. Add salt and cool. When gelatin begins to congeal, add the remaining ingredients. Place in a large mold, rinsed with cold water, or in individual molds. Chill until firm. Serve on salad greens with either french dressing or mayonnaise.

A fruity salad doubles for the dessert, if so desired. This one is especially good when served with tiny cakes or finger cookies:

Ocean Breeze Salad.
(Serves 6)

- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 cups diced honeydew melon
- 1 cup watermelon balls or slices
- ⅔ cup white grapes, split and seeded
- 1 cup grapefruit sections
- 3 tablespoons preserved ginger
- 1⅓ tablespoons gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- ¼ cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons chopped maraschino cherries

Mix gelatin and water and let stand 5 minutes. Dissolve over hot water. Combine fruits, lemon juice, sugar and ginger. Chill thoroughly. Add gelatin and pour into a mold. Chill until firm. If it is obtainable, ½ pint whipped cream may be added to fruits before they are mixed with the gelatin.



Green, White and Gold: As picturesque as a garden in full bloom is this simple salad made by placing chilled deviled eggs on crisp sprigs of watercress. Use extra dressing if desired, and serve for luncheon or side dish at garden supper.

Your salad can be better than just "passing" if your dressings are smooth and well seasoned so they can complement the other ingredients of the salad bowl. Here are several good basic suggestions:

Cooked Dressing.

- ⅓ cup sugar
- ⅓ cup vinegar
- ⅓ cup evaporated milk
- ½ teaspoon salt

Dissolve sugar in vinegar and stir until it dissolves. Beat in milk until mixture thickens. Pour over cabbage or other greens.

Sour Cream Dressing.

- ⅓ cup sour cream
- ⅓ cup vinegar
- ⅓ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt

Mix ingredients in order given. Chill.

Thousand Island Dressing.

- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons chili sauce
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons pimiento
- 2 tablespoons chopped sweet pickle

Mix all ingredients in order given. Serve over vegetable salads.

Lynn Says

Different Salad Dressings: If fruits and vegetables do not give enough variety to make salads interesting, season the dressing itself for flavor plus.

Club Dressing: To 1 cup of mayonnaise, add 1 tablespoon chopped currants, 1 tablespoon chopped raisins, 1 tablespoon chopped nuts.

Indian Dressing: ¼ cup of chow-chow to 1 cup mayonnaise.

Tartar Dressing is excellent on fish salads. To 1 cup mayonnaise, add 2 tablespoons chopped sweet gherkins, 1 tablespoon capers, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and 2 tablespoons chopped olives.

Thousand Island Dressing is easily tossed together. For a cup of mayonnaise, use ¼ cup chili sauce, 1 tablespoon green pepper and chopped stuffed olives.

Egg dressing is lovely to look at when made by adding 1 chopped hard-cooked egg, 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento and 1 tablespoon India relish to 1 cup mayonnaise.

A bit of leftover meat? Add it to the eggs. Especially good are diced ham, tongue or dried beef.

It's no fairy story—earthworms in Australia actually reach a length of more than 10 feet. These pink giants of the worm world are said to resemble closely a slender rubber hose.

The worm lives in damp or muddy soil, and its movements in its subterranean home produce a gurgling noise that may easily be heard several yards from its tunnel opening. The bizarre monsters are quite harmless, Australian natives say.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Pay-Cut

Last year at this time I enjoyed the acquaintance of a business man whose salary was $50,000 a year. I looked upon him with a great deal of admiration and respect for several reasons. He earned what he has with hard work and know-how. His employees, numbering above ten thousand, call him Uncle Frank. He lives in a small town and helps a lot of people in a quiet way.

Last week somebody showed me a page of a pocket-size magazine published for the employees of his company and I read with grave interest that his pay had been cut. That was news by anybody's standard; most people are getting raises in pay these days. What's more, this man's pay-cut is big. It amounts to more in a year than most men manage to accumulate in a whole lifetime.

His Own Words

"I insisted that the board of directors reduce my annual salary from $50,000 to one dollar," the signed statement said, "I have not been receiving net anywhere near $50,000 a year for working. . . . Only $309.36 was left for my use out of my 1944 wages. . . . Why should I permit the company to pay out $50,000 a year to benefit me by only $309.36?"

Let me make haste to say that I am not sorry for Uncle Frank. He will be all right; he has some other money. I am not worried about his employees either. The faithful workers among them will be able to retire in dignified comfort. My only concern is over men who, next year or the next, may hunt jobs and not find them; jobs Uncle Frank would like to offer but can't.

Inside Figures

Here is another enlightening passage from his statement: "Perhaps you wonder why my net realization from wages has been so small. The answer lies in the extremely high income tax rates which apply to my wages, added as they are to my other income, and to the fact that I must pay not only federal income taxes but also state income taxes."

This man is not the only big-company official in the country who has cut a lordly income to less than 10 cents a month. Why do they do it? Because their big salaries benefit them so little and cost their firms so much. My young friend who started last fall to work his way through college, running a steam dishwasher four hours a day, realized more net from his salary than this $50,000 executive.

Who Is Injured?

Men who cut off big salaries have other income. That's why their tax rates are so high. That's why they can afford to spurn a salary. But if they must decline the proceeds of their own invested earnings, one thing is sure: They will not invest further earnings to start new ventures or expand old ones. Investments in business are not safe, never have been. Any investment is a risk.

Men with money invest it only when they believe, to the best of their judgment, that it will pay reasonable returns. Now they are sure of only one thing: Nearly everything an investment earns will be taxed away from them. Will they invest in new enterprises? No. Then where will our returning service men find work? Unless present tax laws are changed soon, they will find it on a huge W. P. A. to the disgrace of our free America.

DAIRYMAN'S NEWS from LAND O LAKES

BRIDGING THE GAP—

Between Farmers and Consumers!

Both in mileage and number of operations performed, there's a long distance between the dairy farmer and his customers.

Land O'Lakes receives butter from the farmer's own cooperative creamery, pays fair market prices, grades it, packages it, transports it, insures it, sells it to grocers, and maintains a preference for it by consumers as America's finest quality butter. Land O'Lakes then returns to farmers any potential savings effected by this experienced, efficient marketing system.

Land O'Lakes does this not only for butter, but for a variety of other dairy and farm products . . . does it FOR the farmer. Thus, in Land O'Lakes, farmers "bridge the gap" to their customers . . . by owning their own "bridge!"

Roy M. Green Tells a Farm Story

By President Roy M. Green
Colorado A & M College
Fort Collins, Colorado

Big crops and good prices left a wheat farmer not long ago with $30,000 cash in the bank. Said he, "If I don't invest this in inflated land values, what can I do with it to earn anything?" I said to him, "Did you ever think of using part of it to insure yourself a steadier farm income after the war? For $150 a month, or $1,800 a year in War Bonds, you can begin to collect ten years after the war $200 a month. As you will be getting older by that time, wouldn't that be a better supplement to what income the farm then produces than having to turn again to the cream can and what your wife can make out of chickens? Wouldn't it be a nice retirement fund for a fellow that is now 55 years old? Wouldn't you like to have had $200 a month cash coming in last time?"

In addition, if you can put in War Bonds a lump-sum as reserve for operations in bad years, for deferred purchases of equipment, for repairs, for up-keep, for new household equipment; and then whatever the postwar adjustment, you would have an easier time of it than you had last time.

You wouldn't have to wait on somebody's extra special plan; you would have already completed one of your own.

If you are proud of the independence of your occupation, and jealous of preserving as much of it as possible, don't orate and speculate—order WAR BONDS!

Marshall County Over The Top

Marshall county pledged $784-287.25 for War Bonds during the Seventh War Loan which came to an official close with a marked increase in sales reported on Saturday, July 7.

The final tabulation completed indicates that county pledges totaled $195,287.25 more than the county over-all quota which was placed at $589,000.00.

While final figures on actual sales were not availabe from the state headquarters when we go to press, indications are that Marshall county will either make or be very close to reaching its E bond quota of $535,000.

A state report on Saturday, July 7, which does not include Friday and Saturday sales within the county, showed actual sales of 94.3 per cent of the E bond quota, placing Marshall county 34th among the counties of the state. In over-all quota, sales in this state report totaled 122.2 per cent to rank the county in 63rd place.

Late returns plus expected final allocation from Minnesota men and women in the armed forces guarantees that Minnesota has made all quotas in Seventh War Loan. E bond sales exceed $80 million, all sales to individuals, $147 million and grand total $412 million. Minnesota was among first 12 states in E Bond performance.

Minnesota bought eighty B-29s since Flag Day.

7 Carloads Phosphate Coming

Seven carloads of 20 per cent Government superphosphate are destined to arrive in Marshall County the latter part of this week or within the first few days of next week, stated Charles N. Kranz, Chairman of the Marshall County AAA.

Those interested in securing some should contact the county AAA office immediately by mail or othewise, so that sufficient time is allowed to compile the order in the county office before the cars arrive.

A deposit of 30 cents per 100 lbs. or $6.00 per ton must be collected from each applicant at the time he receives the phosphate and the deposit goes towards paying for the cost of the material which is the difference between the cost of $28.00 per ton and the soil-building credit of $22.00.

Mr. and Mrs. Orlin Ness, Miss Helen Leskinen and Sgt. Ray Leskinen made a trip to Grand Forks on Friday.

Mexican Steak Adds Gay Touch to Meal

Glorify the stand-by pot-roast in a south-of-the-border way, advises the Country Cooking editor of Capper's Farmer. Juicy Mexican steak is lean round of beef braised in spicy tomato sauce.

"Surround it with oven-browned potatoes and serve with crisp relishes and fruit pie for dessert," she adds. "A bright-colored cloth on the table puts the whole meal in a gay mood."

Mexican Steak

- 4 lbs. round steak
- ¾ c. flour
- ½ tsp. pepper
- 2 tsp. salt
- 3 tbsp. bacon drippings
- 2½ c. tomatoes
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 1 green pepper, chopped
- 1 c. celery, chopped
- 1 onion, sliced

Have steak cut 3 inches thick. Season flour with salt and pepper and pound it into meat. Brown steak on both sides in hot drippings. Add remaining ingredients. Cover. Bake at 300 F. for 3 hours. Serves 6.

How to Store Clothes

Best storage place for heavy clothes and furnishings in warm weather is a large closet of average temperature, declares the Home Editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

SIGN LANGUAGE OF HUNGRY CROPS TELLS PLANT FOOD NEEDS

CHICAGO — The simple formula "ask the plant itself" was recommended to midwest farmers as the best means of discovering the causes of plant food hunger that bring about costly crop failures every year.

"Plants starving for nourishment have a sign language that readily reveals their distress to any farmer who watches the foliage and size of the plants during the growing season and then examines the appearance of the matured crop at harvest time," says a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

WHAT KIND OF PLANT FOOD DO YOU NEED?

Crops Tell Their Own Story of Plant Food Hunger.

"For instance, corn that is famished for plant food tells its hunger story in a variety of ways. When nitrogen is needed, the plant is stunted and undernourished, the leaves are greenish-yellow or orange-yellow and the tips are withered. When sufficient phosphorus is lacking, the leaves have a tendency to become purplish and the young plant is spindly and unthrifty. When potash, the balance wheel of plant foods, is absent from the soil, growth slows down, leaves scorch and the corn is more easily susceptible to diseases and parasites. At harvest, the ears are chaffy and of poor quality.

"Legumes, wheat and other grains, potatoes and other field crops reveal their hunger distress by various signs, all of which tell their need for nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. From experience with their 1944 crops, farmers may determine how the lack of essential fertilizer elements spelled the difference between bumper yields and failure.

"One safe remedy for diet deficiencies of all kinds is to have the soil tested before planting time to determine just which elements are lacking. But the surest preventive is to see that the land is regularly supplied with plenty of mixed fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash."

Dutch Belted Cattle

The first importation of Dutch belted cattle was made in about 1838. The first importation of importance, however, was made in 1840 by P. T. Barnum for show purposes.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

IT DIDN'T take Myrna Loy long to decide what she'd do as a free-lance star after she left Metro. Practically everybody wanted her for a picture, but she chose the feminine starring role in "Genius in the Family." The story's laid in 1870, and is all about the courting days of Hiram Stevens Maxim, who invented the machine gun, among other things. And who do you suppose plays Hiram? None other than Don Ameche. But he doesn't invent a thing during the picture, just plays a charming and resourceful suitor.

Small didn't know she'd learned little more than the scales, so he had her written in for a piano solo.

The veterans apply for an NBC "Welcome Home Audition," provided by the network especially for servicemen; Waring scans the results and picks the most promising.

Smart Cover for an Old Sewing Machine

IF IT is necessary to keep an old-fashioned treadle machine in a bedroom, it may serve as a dressing table if attractively covered. In the dining room it may do double duty as a serving table. Here, it is shown in a living room. The full skirt matches curtains and slip covers, and the scalloped felt top repeats the covers of the stools that serve as lamp stands and the chair cover.

Household Hints

Sprinkle a stubborn ribbon knot with talcum powder. Unties easier.

Saw off the legs of an old wobbly card table to about 18 inches long, and use it as a play table for the children. It can be moved easily from room to room and taken also on trips.

A skillet that has become encrusted with a rough coating which cannot be easily scraped off, may be put into a hot fire or bed of hot coals and the crust burned off. In this way the skillet is left smooth and like new and is not injured.

Yellow ochre dissolved in boiling water makes a lovely dye for muslin curtains.

Grease the spout of the pitcher when you use it for muffin or waffle batter. It will make pouring smoother.

Ripe tomato juice will remove fresh ink stains.

When making pies that are likely to be juicy, cut the lower crust larger than the upper and fold over like a hem to prevent leaking at the edges.

As soon as you notice frayed or worn spots in garments, mend them. Small holes are easier to hide than large ones and worn spots can be kept from tearing if reinforced with mending in time.

In buying scissors, choose the best you can afford or can find. If you can have only one pair, those about 8 inches in length will be satisfactory for most uses. Smaller scissors are handy for ripping seams, snipping, or cutting buttonholes, if you can possibly manage to have them. If you do much sewing, better invest in dressmaker's or pinking shears.

It's Good News That Irish Linen Is Coming Into Its Own Again

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

CHEERIO! Hear the good news! Shipments of Irish linen are gradually being resumed. Irish linen, a strategic material, has been helping to win the European war. Now that it has come to a victorious end, more linens will be released for civilian wear.

The strength, lightness and dependability of linen have made it an indispensable war material. Paratroopers have drifted down from their chutes by the lightest and strongest linen harnesses made. Linen canvas which does not stretch when soaked with rain has protected precious supplies dumped on the beachheads of France. Miles of strong linen thread have sewed the thousands and thousands of shoes that went marching to Berlin. This war demand explains why no one store in the United States has been able to secure sufficient quantities of Irish linen yardage, handkerchiefs, table damasks, towels, sheets and so on to fill their customers' requirements.

One thing that is certain, however, is that notwithstanding this long period of watchful waiting, the American consumer has not lost her enthusiasm for Irish linens or her appreciation of their beauty and peerless durability. Among the most attractive costumes seen on the beach this summer is the sunback dress with its accompanying bolero, both made of Irish linen in the smart fashion shown to the left. Carried out in the sun's favorite yellow, the dress is distinguished by a V-halter neckline and a flattering cuff effect across the bustline. The brief matching bolero makes possible a double career for this smart sun-worshiper. Frocks tailored of pure white linen are also the last word in smart summer fashions.

When it comes to dazzling white accessories such as fashion decrees for this summer, snowy linen plays its most thrilling role. Even the spotless white bag you will need to complete your collection of white accessories presents no difficulty. Just make a slipcover of washable white Irish linen for the dark bag you bought earlier in the season and the problem of keeping your bag immaculately clean and white looking is solved. The girl to the right in the picture did just that adding a touch that tells in way of a hand-embroidered initial.

Women who have a yen for exquisite frost-white lingerie accents have become intrigued this summer with the idea of "make it yourself" collars, jabots, gilets and other neckwear "lovelies" for which they use the daintiest and finest Irish linen handkerchiefs they can find. News dispatches from Ireland report that increasing quantities of linen handkerchiefs are being shipped to the United States this summer.

For a ladylike look that will add class to a career girl's simple daytime dress or suit, handkerchiefs with clip-cord borders and hand-rolled hems work up beautifully. You'll need only one hanky to make a saw-tooth collar to wear with a V-neck dress as pictured in the right inset. Just cut it into quarters and lay the corners in overlapping points. Finish the cut edge that fits into the neckline with a narrow binding.

For softly feminine styles one should be very "choosy" in selecting handkerchiefs that have reached the ultimate in matter of exquisitely sheer Irish linen and choice needlework. You will take utmost pride in wearing a gilet made of two handkerchiefs as shown in the inset above to the center. One of the lovely Irish linen handkerchiefs is cut in half diagonally across. The bordered edges are joined together part of the way up to make the front of the gilet, being left free the rest of the way to open back into revers. The other handkerchief is used for a most flattering butterfly-wing jabot.

Button Glamor

Buttons here, buttons there and buttons everywhere is a fashion gesture that persists in the summer mode. Attractive buttons impart drama to this charming coat dress made of a pastel spun rayon. These are two-tone buttons patterned as a shaggy flower with their petals tipped in lighter shade. These handsome button originals are featherlight in weight and come in all the new costume colors. For those who make their own clothes, these handsome buttons are just the thing to add a touch of distinction.

It's Clever to Have A Number of Boleros

One of the outstanding fashion highlights this summer is the cunning separate bolero that you can slip on at a moment's notice. A bolero of pink linen worn with your slender black or navy basic dress will look charming. A bolero is ever so easy to make. You can buy just a remnant of linen or gabardine or allover eyelet, and with a good pattern you can seam up a simple bolero in just a short time. Pretty, too, and ever so useful is a little bolero fashioned of black, navy or white eyelet. Finishing off with an inch-wide border or binding of plain material gives an expert dressmaker touch. It's nice to have a white pique bolero on hand either eyeleted or of the waffle type. This will go with most any of your summer dresses. You will find that you can stretch your wardrobe to do double if you have a collection of colorful boleros on hand. They are just the thing for vacation trips too, when you don't want to take too much.

Presidential Succession

Until 1886, a law provided that when the presidency of the United States was left vacant by one who had succeeded to it from the vice presidency, the office was to be assumed temporarily by the president of the senate for the sole purpose of ordering a new election, says Collier's.

Since 1886, when a new law extended the succession to cabinet members beginning with the secretary of state, three Presidents have been in a position to name their successor in case of their death—Theodore Roosevelt, Coolidge and Truman.

National Income

How well a man lives is a matter that depends largely upon his income and how he divides it. If he earns $40 a week ($2,000 a year) and spends every bit of it on himself, he can live about as well as anybody until some unforeseen calamity hits him. If he has a wife and child and an aged parent to support, each individual must subsist on about $10 a week.

How well the people of any nation live is a similar matter. It depends upon the national income and how it is divided. Just like family income, national income changes from year to year and it is not always divided the same way. National income is the grand total of what everybody in the nation earns. It includes all wages, salaries, farm yields, interest, rents, profits and dividends.

How About Now?

The United States Department of Commerce keeps track of our national income figures pretty well, year by year. Already we know that the income of all Americans totaled 160.8 billion dollars in 1944 and that workers got 72% of it, or 116 billion dollars. By "workers," I mean people who draw wages and small clerical salaries. Corporation profits that year ran just under ten billion dollars or 6%.

There is a popular notion that people who work don't get very much of the fruits of their toil. Not long ago somebody repeated a 40-year-old piece of political propaganda to me, believing it every word. He said, "Here in America 2% of the people have 90% of the wealth." There is not much to say about this statement: It is not true. It has never been nearly true.

Official Figures

Last year the national-income dollar went like this: 72c to American workers, 6c to corporations, 8c to small businesses in the form of profit, 7c to farmers as return on what they produced, and another 7c to landowners and stockholders in the form of rents and dividends, and to money lenders in the form of interest. Of course all years aren't alike but they vary less than you might think.

National income bobs up and down but people who work always get most of it. Back in 1939, which was a typical pre-war year, our national income was not half as high as last year's; 70.8 billion dollars to be exact. Then, workers got 68% of it, and 6% was corporation profit; not much change in how the income was divided, but less than half as much actual money for everybody.

Ancient History

Back in 1929, the year Hoover succeeded Coolidge as President, national income was 83.3 billion dollars; bigger then, than in 1939. Corporation profits were higher—9% as against 6% in recent years. But wage earners and office help were getting 64% of national income, even then. In 1932 (the depression) when corporations generally earned 9% less than nothing, wages climbed to 97% and still some working people went hungry.

Any fair analysis of national income figures over a period of years leads to this observation: workers, laborers and clerical people, get more money with the slightly smaller percentage of a big national income than with the bigger percentage of a small national income. The moral is perfectly clear. We will all fare better working together for a big national income than by wrangling about who gets most of it, and then having a small one.

DAIRYMAN'S NEWS from LAND O'LAKES

BRIDGING THE GAP—

Between Farmers and Consumers!

Both in mileage and number of operations performed, there's a long distance between the dairy farmer and his customers.

Land O'Lakes receives butter from the farmer's own cooperative creamery, pays fair market prices, grades it, packages it, transports it, insures it, sells it to grocers, and maintains a preference for it by consumers as America's finest quality butter. Land O'Lakes then returns to farmers any potential savings effected by this experienced, efficient marketing system.

Land O'Lakes does this not only for butter, but for a variety of other dairy and farm products . . . does it FOR the farmer. Thus, in Land O'Lakes, farmers "bridge the gap" to their customers . . . by owning their own "bridge!"

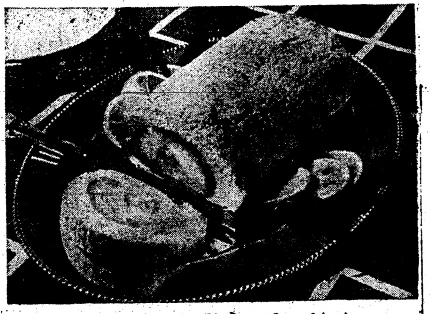
Orange Roll Offers Refreshing New Dessert



The family will enjoy this orange-flavored treat.

FEATHER-LIGHT Orange Roll is a happy ending for any meal, Marjorie Griffin, rural home editor of Capper's Farmer, advises homemakers faced with the daily task of providing zestful desserts.

"Dinner guests will think you're super smart to prepare it," she writes in the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families. "Surround it with thinnest of orange slices and green leaves on a handsome platter."

The recipe she provides will make 10 slices, or enough for some "seconds" in the average family.

Orange Roll

2 eggs
1 c. sugar
6 tbsp. orange juice
1 c. cake flour
1½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
Confectioners' sugar

Beat eggs until lemon colored; add sugar, beating until mixture is thick. Add orange juice. Sift together flour; baking powder and salt; add to first mixture, mixing only to blend. Line a shallow pan, 10 by 15 inches, with waxed paper. Pour in batter; bake at 375° F. for 20 minutes. Sift confectioners' sugar on piece of paper. Turn cake out on this and remove waxed paper. Spread with Orange Filling; roll up like jelly roll.

Orange Filling

1 c. orange juice
1 egg yolk
½ c. corn syrup
3 tbsp. cornstarch
2 tbsp. butter
salt

Add ¼ c. orange juice to beaten egg yolk, add syrup and cornstarch and mix thoroughly. Heat remaining orange juice in top of double boiler; add to egg mixture and return to double boiler. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened; cover and cook 5 minutes longer. Remove from heat, add butter and salt; cool.

JAMS CAN BE EASY ON SUGAR!

Beautiful but dumb—that's strawberries! Take away their glorious coloring and what have you? Nothing much but dull, uninteresting lumps, incapable of self support!

Strawberries demand sugar just as if it were not rationed and insist upon most of it being granulated. When going into jams or preserves, they will tolerate the substitution of corn sirup or corn sugar for about one-third of the regular sugar called for in the recipe.

These pampered pets of the garden can't stand up and jell without the aid of sugar and pectin. Some of them need lemon juice too. They will not behave right when canned, unless granted more sugar than any other berry wants; then after they get it, they must be petted along or they fade, flatten, and float.

According to Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, glass jar company with headquarters at Muncie, Indiana, "Tart strawberries with small core and deep red color throughout are less popular with the general public than the sweet, feather-weight ones, but are far the better for canning and preserving."

Miss Kimbrough advises home canners to forget about preserves for the duration or until sugar is more plentiful and make up a considerable amount of jam. Jams are easy on sugar. A good one can be made by using one-half pound sugar and one-third pound of corn sirup to each pound of capped berries. Jams need to be cooked a little longer when corn sirup is used. They should be cooked in small batches and stirred often.

Berries Without Sugar

When one runs out of sugar, berries (any kind) may be cleaned, crushed and stewed in their own juice until thick, then canned by processing 10 minutes in a hot-water bath canner. Strawberries, prepared in this manner have an ugly color but will brighten up to some extent later on when sugar is added and the mixture boiled down to Victory jam thickness—meaning not quite so thick as usual. Two cups of sugar are needed for making one quart of crushed berries into jam. Here is a helpful hint. A spoon or two of juice from those beets you canned won't change the flavor but will help the color of jam made from canned strawberries.

Blueberries, huckleberries, blackberries, dewberries, elderberries and many others are far more useful than strawberries and can beautifully without one speck of sugar. Most of them can best when heated slowly until the juice runs free before they are turned into jars for processing, but blueberries, especially if they are to be used in muffins and the like, are nicer when canned by a recipe we found in the Ball Blue Book.

Place two or three quarts clean blueberries in a square of cheesecloth. Hold the cloth by the corners and dip into boiling water until spots appear. Then dip quickly in and out of cold water. Pack into hot jars. (Add neither sugar nor liquid.) Process 20 minutes in hot-water bath.

Wild blackberries have always been a favorite with home canners but the equally useful elderberry is likely to be left to the birds. That when elderberry pie is so wonderful! Good cooks usually touch it up with a spoonful of lemon juice or vinegar.

We like elderberries and most others best when canned with some sugar, but sugar shortages certainly won't stop us if we can beat the birds to the berries.

The crops are late here this year. The farmers are busy haying and some have started to harvest some grain but the harvest will not be in general until next week if the weather stays nice.

Many people from here are now busy picking blueberries. Those who have been out report the berries are quite plentyful.

Many subscribers have sent us inquiries as to why they have not received the Holt Weekly News. The reason was that we were called home to attend the funeral of the publisher's father at Portland, Oregon, and that there was no one to get to take our place here.

First Railroad In Minnesota

In the grim days of war, when the northern trans-continental railroads passing through Minnesota are straining all their resources to move men and materials to their military destinations it is interesting to recall that not until Minnesota had been a state for four years was there a single mile of railroad in operation within its boundaries.

Eighty-three years ago, on July 2, 1862, the St. Paul and Pacific, the first railroad to move a wheel in Minnesota, began regular service on its initial ten mile route from St. Paul to St. Anthony. The road eventually became a part of the Great Northern system.

"Let it be recorded for the benefit of the future historian of the vast Northwest," proclaimed the "St. Paul Press" on June 29, 1862, a file of which is preserved by the Minnesota Historical society, "that on the 28th day of June, 1862, the first link in the great chain of railroads which will, in the course of a few years, spread all over this State from the valley of the Mississippi to the Red River of the North, and from Lake Superior to the Iowa boundary line was completed, and a passenger train started from St. Paul in the direction of Puget Sound!"

On that day upon the invitation of the contractors, the lieutenant governor, the mayor and aldermen of St. Paul, the directors of the railroad, and nearly a hundred citizens assembled at the terminus of the railroad about 2:30 P. M. where, "after a brief delay," according to the "Press," "the locomotive steamed down from the station house, attached itself to the train, and with a shriek, started on its trip toward the setting sun."

The running time was thirty minutes for the ten miles with a fifty cent fare.

The Weather

Saturday we had a heavy rain here. Early Monday morning the eastern end of the county had a real drenching rain while here we had only a light shower. The rest of the week has been pretty fair with the temperature quite cool.

Scalloped Cupboard On Table or Chest

IF YOU have a wall space crying to be filled with an important piece of furniture, here is the answer. A breakfront cupboard effect to hold bright bits of pottery and china and perhaps a few books. Cost a fortune? Not at all. You can have it and save money for a bond too.

You will need a base which may be a table that you have on hand or a chest of drawers made by taking the mirror off of an old dresser, also some short lengths of lumber and plywood. A simple box cupboard is made to place on this base. The next step is to mark the design for the scalloped front on the plywood and cut it out with a compass saw or take it to a woodworker to be cut with a power saw. Paint or stain the cupboard to match the base, and stretch fabric across the back to make a colorful background for your treasures.

JUST JESTING

Battle of the Sexes

Jasper—Boys are more valuable than girls.

Joan—Why do you say that?

Jasper—It states in this book that "every man has his price." But brides are given away.

That Held Her

A middle-aged woman stopped a man on the street and demanded:

"Why aren't you in the army?"

The man, well past the draft age, replied:

"For the same reason you aren't in the Ziegfeld Follies."

Big Hearted

Phil—Last night I dreamed that you gave me a dollar.

Bill—I like you, so I'm going to let you keep it.

Nowadays, when a man pays a great deal of attention to his wife in public, people think he beats her when they are alone.

Dark Diagnosis

Soldier Patient (enthusiastically)—Nursie, I'm in love with you. Don't let me get well.

Nurse—Don't worry, you won't. The doctor is in love with me, too, and he saw you kiss me last night.

In His Head

Sgt. Smart—I'll show you in a jiffy just how to operate that machine gun. I've got it all in a nutshell.

Yardbird Buzz—So, you have memorized it all, huh?

Business is what, when you haven't got any, you go out of.

Good Riddance

Mrs. Smith—We're having our annual rummage sale at the church tomorrow night. I hope you can come.

Mrs. Brown—I suppose it's a good chance to get rid of anything not worth keeping.

Mrs. Smith—Yes, indeed. Come and bring your husband.

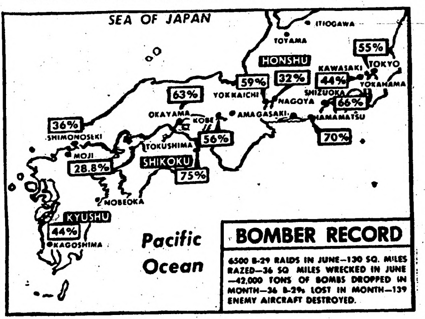
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Big Three Study Peace Terms; Homecomings Beat Schedule; Allies Get Set on Rule of Berlin

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



After a lull of five months, more than 1,000 carrier planes from the Pacific fleet returned to direct attacks upon Tokyo. This map graphically illustrates what they had already been given. The data is based on toll taken by B-29s. Percentages show industries destroyed.

TRUMAN:
And Big Three

Through chilled North Atlantic waters, President Truman arrived in Potsdam to keep his rendezvous with Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin.

It is believed that they will be concerned with problems dealing with control of Germany, planned on long-range basis; disposition of territories—Italian and some 30 disputed boundaries to be settled; political and economic questions, including Italy peace terms, what to do with Spain and other "neutrals," which might include Japan.

Diplomats say that the Big Three, while discussing the San Francisco conference, their present work will not tie in directly with the West Coast conference and United Nations charter.

Berlin Rule

The rule in Berlin has been split, and for the first time the American and British military governments have moved in and taken up their responsibilities in the German capital.

Rules and regulations established in American and British zones of Berlin, as established by the Red army, will remain in effect until General Clay and General Lyne and their staffs can formulate permanent methods of operation. Russian policy has been declared to be more realistic than those adopted by other Allies in other sections, and high sources seem to think there will be little change made in Berlin.

Each Allied military government will provide food, coal and other necessities from their part of occupied Germany to take care of German civilians within Berlin. There will be exchanges of different kinds of goods among the British, American, French and Russian authorities due to scarcities of some items in different sections.

BIGGEST HOMECOMING:
Ahead of Schedule

When eight transports docked in New York one day in mid-month, they brought back 35,000 happy veterans of the European war—the largest number returned in a single day since V-E Day. Twenty-eight thousand soldiers were Americans, 7,000 Canadians. Five infantry regiments, a hospital unit, various groups of the 8th air force, and numerous smaller units were among the arrivals. The number of troops now back in the states is approaching the half million mark.

The giant Queen Mary carried more than 15,000 men, including 6,000 of the Canadian contingent. The West Point, which is the navy's largest transport, had 7,600 soldiers aboard, and the John Ericcson about the same number. Three thousand men came home on the James Parker, and four smaller transports returned a total of 1,500.

Aboard the West Point were 33 men who were not happy about the trip. They were Japanese diplomats taken into custody in Europe.

An unlisted passenger was Natale Piavallo, nine-year-old Italian orphan, who was smuggled aboard the General Bliss by soldiers of the 8th division. He was liberated from a German prison camp by American troops. He will be placed in a private home pending decision of immigration authorities.

'DIES' COMMITTEE:
New Chairman

Representative Wood (Dem., Ga.) has been elected by the house to the chairmanship of the committee on un-American activities, succeeding Representative Hart (Dem., N. J.), who resigned due to ill health.

Representative Rankin, who has been acting chairman of the group since Hart resigned, called Representative Wood, outstanding and one of the finest Americans in the house.

JITTERY JAPS:
Get More So

Japan homeland has become jittery over continued large-scale air assaults against Tokyo and other industrial centers of its islands. Broadcasts, changing from hour to hour, all indicate that Japan expects invasion of the mainland at any minute by Allies.

Military spokesman for Japan admitted that to defend the islands it would be necessary for the Imperial government to devise some adequate defense of the homeland against continued air attacks.

Navy Score

The U. S. navy alone has destroyed more than 17,000 Japanese planes since Pearl Harbor, Undersecretary Artemus L. Gates of the navy has reported. During the same period the American fleet plane loss has been approximated at 2,700. It is believed that the army has accounted for as many Jap planes, considering the large number in the last few days.

Navy carriers now total nearly 100 with a tonnage of 1,250,000, the largest single portion of total combat tonnage. More than 26,000 aircraft built since Pearl Harbor were deployed to the fleet last year.

TYPHOON:
Hits U. S. Fleet

Five weeks after a raging typhoon lashed Admiral Halsey's 3rd Fleet with 138-mile-an-hour winds virtually every damaged ship (there were 21 hit) was back in action. The havoc wrought by the storm was described as greater than any Jap blow ever administered to the fleet.

The cruiser Pittsburgh miraculously stayed afloat after its bow was torn off in the churning sea. It has now been refitted for action.

Among the damaged ships repaired and back in action were three fast battleships and two Essex class carriers. Only one life was reported lost.

Adm. Chester Nimitz' announcement of the incident did not specify where the typhoon struck but presumably it was in the western Pacific area between Okinawa and the Philippines. This area is known as the "typhoon cradle" where violent storms strike without warning.

JAP HOSPITAL SHIP:
In Bad Shape

A Japanese hospital ship, boarded by an American naval party was found to be dirty and overrun with vermin. Food and medical supplies were entirely inadequate for the 1,000 patients, who had been removed from Wake Island under truce.

Many of the Japs appeared to be starving. A doctor admitted that many would die during the night. While the sick men were kept clean, the wards and galleys were filthy and insect-infested, and the standard of cleanliness on the ship was below par everywhere. A stench emanated from the ship that could be smelled 1,000 yards away.

Curiously, the Jap officers were polite and anxious to please. The skipper offered American officers tea and liquor. He was interested in American baseball, as he had played third base on a Jap navy team, and was especially interested in the present standing of the Yankees.

CONVERSION POST:
To Treasury

The Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion will become a part of the treasury department when Fred M. Vinson, present director, becomes secretary of the treasury, according to Washington.
